IT CAN BE DONE!

Toronto is quite a large city, as Canadian cities go. When the metropolitan area is added, it is much larger. And yet, The Ontario Gazette has announced that under the provisions of The Industrial Standards Act of the Province of Ontario, consent has been given for regulating the hours of sale of gasoline and oil on Sunday. No service station or garage can be open in that area on Sunday without a permit, and one permit a month is all that is allowed any such garage or service station. The Sunday hours are from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Every worker will have three Sundays out of four, free from work. Instead of the 764 garages and service stations being all open on Sunday, about 160 will be open in turn each Sunday.

The County of Essex has taken similar action, except that the rotation plan applies to Wednesday afternoon as well as Sunday.

In the Province of Nova Scotia, the matter of Sunday garages and service stations is dealt with in the Province as a whole. On week days the hours of sale are from 8:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. On Sundays and holidays, only a limited number will be open on a rotation plan. During the months of May to September a limited number of service stations can remain open on Sundays and holidays, from 8:00 a.m. until 7:00 p.m. The rest of the year the hours are 8:00 a.m. until 12:00 noon. The plan in Nova Scotia is under the Board of Public Utilities, which indicates that when the regulations come into force, plenty of outlets will be available for tourists and necessary travel, while at the same time the workers will be given, as frequently as possible, their day of rest.

What can be done in Toronto, Essex, and Nova Scotia, can be done in other places, too!

HARDLY SEEMS POSSIBLE

Those — we suspect they will be called old-timers, now — who remember the harvest excursions to the West, must have read with a measure of astonishment the news item in Monday's papers, which reported that twenty-five hundred men were being recruited in the West, to help harvest the Ontario early crops. The report said that these workers are being recruited in Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, between June 12th and July 10th, and given free transportation to Toronto, where they will be distributed to farmers who have applied for help. The crop conditions in the East indicate a need for plenty of farm help, if the crops are to be taken off in time. With the unprecedented demand for food throughout the world it is imperative that every possible bit of food be harvested.

One interesting feature of the present arrangement is, that the workers, after having done their duty here in the East will be returned West in time to get the Western harvest cut and threshed. The exchange of labor is being handled through a Dominion - Provincial Farm Labor Programme. The transportation of the workers will be paid and the prevailing wage rates promise a rather good return to the worker. Whoever thought this up is to be congratulated. The plan will not only provide work for men who are trying to get adjusted to peacetime conditions, but it will give relief to the farmers, struggling with a labor problem, and insure the harvesting of available crops.

THE NEW YARKER CHURCH

On Tuesday, June 25th, at three o'clock in the afternoon, the cornerstone of the new United Church at Yarker will be laid, with appropriate ceremonies. The church has a record of almost eighty years' continuous service to the people of Yarker and vicinity. When the new edifice is completed, it will be well equipped to continue its ministry to the spiritual needs of the community. In times of disillusionment and bewilderment, the Church is needed as as never before. The Minister, Rev. W. G. Fletcher, and the Officials of the Yarker Congregation are to be congratulated on the initiative and vigor with which they set out to rebuild the church, as soon as materials were available, following the close of the Second World War.

It will be interesting to our many readers to know that the original building of Yarker Wesleyan Methodist Church on Wilton Circuit, was erected in 1868 by the Saul Brothers of Camden East, who built twenty-five or more churches in Addington and adjacent counties. Before the erection of the Church, services were held in the local stone schoolhouse which still stands and, at present, is the residence of Mr. Card.

Thirty-one years later in 1899, during the ministry of Rev. Charles Adams, an addition was made to the Church and a Memorial Window installed by Mr. E. W. Benjamin, in memory of his deceased wife. At that time Yarker was a booming community with two wheel factories, a grist mill, a saw mill, a tannery, a woollen mill, a foundry, a carriage shop, a livery stable, etc.

Eighteen years later in 1917 during the First World War, at a time when Rev. G. M. Sharpe was conducting revival meetings, and Rev. J. F. Everson was minister, a frame building was erected alongside the Church for the purposes of Young People's work and Prayer meetings and entertainments, and it was called the League Hall. Subsequently two additions were made to this building.

Twenty-one years later, on July 14th, 1938, shortly after the Church had been redecorated and electricity installed, lightning struck the church steeple and soon the whole building was on fire, and in a few hours only the stone walls were standing. But the Church Hall was saved and during the past eight years all services have been held there. During the war, it was next to impossible to build, so the trustees decided to wait till the struggle was over.

During the early years when Yarker was a part of Wilton Circuit, two ministers served the field contemporaneously. Rev. M. J. Bates was the first minister of Yarker Circuit formed at the time of the Methodist Union in 1884. Rev. G. T. McKenzie was on the circuit at the time of Church Union in 1924. His ministry was the longest on record, serving, in all, for eleven years.

1868	Rev. Richard Wilson,
1870	Rev. Edmund S. Rupert,

MR. MRS. JAMES A. McCORMICK CELEBRATE THEIR FIFTIETH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

"Orchard Grove", the spacious home of Mr. and Mrs. James A. McCormick, Switzerville, was the scene of a happy event, Sunday, June 2nd, when they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, surrounded by their seven children: James N. and Charles E. H. on the homestead; Clarence Osborne, Orville of Yarker, Helen (Mrs. Rae Brown) of Napanee, Margaret (Mrs. Jas. Robinson) of Switzerville, Ruth (Mrs. Earl Peters) of Wilson; grandchildren, relatives and hosts of friends, who autographed the beautiful guest book, during the afternoon and evening.

About 1:30 p.m., a family group picture was taken on the lawn against a lovely background of shrubbery and massed lilacs, also a group of the family and house guests on the large verandah, both taken by the Skitch Studio, Napanee.

During the afternoon, Mrs. Acton Robinson, of Newburgh, and Mrs. E. A. Wright, Violet, presided at the tea table and in the evening, Mrs. Arthur Baker, Moscow, and Mrs. John Wilson, Switzerville, presided in like capacity. The tearoom assistants were Mrs. Clarence McCormick, Mrs. Orville McCormick, Mrs. Rae Brown, Mrs. Jas. Robinson, Geneva Robinson, Mrs. George Robinson, Mrs. Joseph Vrooman, Mary Elizabeth Robinson, Miss Langman, Miss Nina Wilson, Mrs. Arthur Baker, Mrs. Harold Robson and Mrs. Ross Blakely.

During the afternoon and evening about two hundred and seventy guests called to felicitate this very popular bride and groom of fifty years ago, and were warmly welcomed by the sons and daughters of the house: Jim, Reta, Charles and Isabel. Many lovely gifts, cheques, gold, jewellery, china, money and a profusion of cards, telegrams and cut flowers were received to commemorate this auspicious event.

Among the guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. C. McCormick of Oshawa, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Sexsmith and Miss Margaret, Toronto, Mrs. James Paul, Dawson Creek, B.C., Mr. James Bell and Miss Grace Bell of Watertown, and Mr. R. Herrington, Adams Centre, N.Y.

During the evening Mr. Arthur Wright rendered two appropriate solos, which were much appreciated.

STELLA

Stella, June 13. — We are having lots of showers lately, but hope it will not be too much for the grain and potatoes.

Some Toronto people have purchased the Sunders farm at the foot of the island and are building a summer home on it. They have a large gang of men working on it. The Hydro men are here, running the line down to it.

A very pretty June wedding took place on June 8th, when Miss Hilda McCaugherty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCaugherty and Herbert Kilpatrick, son of Mrs. James Kilpatrick, were married in St. Paul's Church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. K. Earle. Miss Myrtle McCaugherty, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and Mr. Stewart Kilpatrick, brother of the groom, was groomsman. A reception was held at the bride's home, after which the happy couple left on the evening boat for Chatham and Buffalo. On their return they will reside in Kingston.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JUNE 23, 1946

"STRENGTHENING BONDS OF FELLOWSHIP"

The Christian Church is a fellowship of believers. Jesus had in mind that the fellowship he established between his followers was to expend until it embraced the whole race of man. It was an ambitious vision, measured by earthly standards. It would obe absolutely impossible. Jesus however, was not measuring by earthly standards. Only a recognition that He is Divine can account for the hopes He had for the world and His confidence in their accomplishment.

It was a few hours before The Passover feast was to begin. Jesus was fasting in preparation for the event. When taking the cup of wine and the bread He told His disciples that these were His body and blood. And He commanded them to participate in remembrance of Him. In a short time He was to die. His death was to crown His ministry. And in His comments to those about Him, as He initiated the Holy Communion, He indicated that with His death, the Kingdom would be ushered in immediately. Early Christians took that to mean an early return of the Lord, in the flesh. What is probably nearer the truth is that Jesus meant that, with His death, there would be introduced into the world, new spirit; the spirit which burst forth at Pentecost, and from then on through the ages, transforming life.

It is perhaps not out of place to discuss this matter of fellowship. In no realm of human experience do people hold so tenaciously to differences as in religion. The result has been that the history of religion, indeed of Christianity, is marked with a bitterness and vigor which often belies its spirit. And yet, in spite of that, the deep underlying principle of our faith is recognized, as it alone, in the observance of which, life as we know it can be maintained. Jesus conceived it as His life's work to bring in a Kingdom of God based on fellowship and love. The world has tried everything else. It has tried self-interest. It has tried race superiority, it has tried nationalism. The results are all too patent. They have succeeded in producing bitterness, fears, suspicion and hatred and world-wide antagonisms. It may seem a nebulous and utopian ideal to assume that love can, some day, govern society. Well apart from any ethical or religious considerations, self-preservation will yet force us to it. For the first time in man's history, he has learned the secret of the universe. He has learned the secret of the atom, discovering how to extract from it, the stuff of which the universe is made, a power so mighty that even yet, few have been able to comprehend the vastness of its significance.

In the hands of self-seeking or power-loving people, the prospect of what might happen, appalls. The safety of life and of civilization is in the hands now of man. Only men of good will can be trusted with it. Only men who are motivated by love and the community spirit can be trusted with the secrets of atomic power. This is as Jesus would have it. It is as He saw it. Men are to be judged not so much by their actions as by the motives which give rise to them.

This is not such a far away and abstract idea as it might appear. Jesus put His trust in His ability to reach in His lifetime, only a few people. It is a lot of individuals, a lot of "Jews" which can alone change the face of the world. In this, it becomes necessary to look to our own lives. We really cannot afford to be selfish; we cannot afford to be envious. Moreover, personal attitudes of people of different races and backgrounds, are vital. Had there been enough people dominated by love towards our fellowmen, the Japanese-Canadians would not be deported. There would have arisen from every congregation and every Christian committee or group such sentiment, that the government would not have dared send them away.

Then, too, we must watch our religious prejudices. Here we are facing a world catastrophe: a breakdown of moral standards, and yet there is denominational bickering.

Let love prevail, and Christ's Kingdom will come!

U. S. PLANS ARCTIC AIR EXPEDITION

Washington. — The United States Army Air Force is considering an air expedition over the north polar regions, the A.A.F. official service journal "Air Force" said last week end.

The expedition will be an air version of the Musk Ox expedition of the Canadian Government conducted last winter. The A.A.F. did not say whether its expedition will be connected with the proposed test of equipment in the Arctic next winter by 4,500 troops of the Army ground forces.

The ground forces has revealed that Air Force Army and Marine observers would be involved in their experiments which will test the efficiency of tanks, self-propelled guns, radar and snow vehicles at Fairbanks, and Adak, Alaska and Camp McCoy, Wis.

PROSPECTS FOR FULL ACCORD, DIM

BY LOUIS F. KEEMLE
(B.U.P. Correspondent.)

The prospect of general agreement on any important European problem was dimmed by pronouncements in London, Moscow and Washington. From the tone of the advance talks, the meeting is expected to be more a clinic on how far the powers have decided to disagree, rather than whether they can co-operate in the one world idea.

Secretary of State James F. Byrnes said in Washington as he prepared to leave for Paris, that the situation calls for "more prayer," which recalled his remark before the previous futile meeting. Byrnes denied being pessimistic, but said, "if we fail, it is a defeat for mankind."

Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Great Britain was not particularly compromising in his speech to the British Labor Party conference in Bournemouth. Bevin threatened to join with the United States in writing separate peace treaties with the Axis satellites of Europe if Russia continues to hold up an early settlement.

Bevin more significantly accused Russia of forming an Eastern European bloc, with the implied threat that the western powers will be forced to form an alliance of their own if no middle ground is found.

Foreign Minister Vyacheslav Molotov of Russia so far has not joined his colleagues in the pre-conference verbal exchange, but the inspired Soviet press and radio has been far from silent. The tone of the comment has been that the Soviet Union suspects an Anglo-American-French combination against it and has no intention of yielding to pressure.

The Paris Conference thus is doomed to open on a note of mutual suspicion. That augurs ill for its success. Compromises on smaller issues or vague general agreements on principles will not fool anybody. The best that it will be possible to say about such a meeting will be that the door has not been closed conclusively on future prospects of big power collaboration. That will be small comfort to the tortured masses of Europe and to other countries which want to know above all when the war will be ended and the promised era of peace begun.

The twin obstacles which the powers are most likely to be unable to overcome at Paris are the European peace treaties and the question of Germany.

Bevin made Britain's firm position on both unmistakeable. He denied a pre-conference agreement with the United States, but it is evident that the two powers see almost eye to eye.

In this threat to make separate treaties with the former Axis satellites, Bevin said harshly that "no one nation (meaning Russia) is going to keep me in a state of war forever with other countries."

With regard to Germany, Bevin was equally stern. He warned Russia against drawing an "awful line" between the east and west in Europe.

"Let our deputies," he said, "sit down and try to work out a settlement for Middle Europe which will give France, Russia and us security not dependent upon the poverty of the people but dependent upon the confidence of the great Allies who won the war."

The first report was that of the President, Mr. D. B. Amey. He told of the usual business and of the introducing in 1945 of the O. R. E. C. picnic on July 4th. It was left with the Resolutions Committee to decide whether we continue the picnic.

Next came the Secretary's report. There were 13 schools reported. An increase in the number of officers and teachers was reported, but a decrease in the number of pupils enrolled. Tamworth reported a "Trail Ranger" group, and Newburgh a C. G. I. T. group. The schools contributed throughout the year for missionary work, $221.13.

GUEST SPEAKER

Then the guest speaker, Rev. S. Littlewood, of Oreno, Ontario, spoke on "New Methods for an Old Message". He said the O. R. E. C. was a small organization at first but is now a Provincial organization which has been going for 50 years. Conventions are an inspiration, opening the mind and eyes to break the old routines and make way for new methods. The strides in the scientific world have broken up old outlooks on life and affected our approach to the Bible. He advised using the method used in the Public Schools to-day, that of visual education, and so capture young people and children through the eyes.

Mrs. J York and Mr. Bert Asselstine, of Marlbank, sang a duet.

OTHER ADDRESSES

Rev. Mr. Crawford addressed the gathering on "Making Scriptures Live". It calls for intelligent reading and sharing the experience portrayed, which can only be done by preparation. Words written in italics in the Bible should never be stressed, they are only for explanation. The verb should be stressed. When preparing a scripture reading, look for unity of thought rather than to end with a certain verse.

Rev. Mr. Baugh spoke on "Making Prayer Real". Underlying all success is prayer, which is an attempt to get ourselves into contact with God. He said it was easy to pray, but sometimes hard to help answer our own prayers. We should watch for opportunities to teach children to pray. He also spoke of visual aid in making experiences real to children. Pictures such as "The Angelus" create an atmosphere for prayer. Showing of Red Cross picture developing need in war torn countries and then offering prayer of thankfulness.

After the offering was received and dedicated, Rev. Mr. Littlewood again spoke. His subject this time was "Visual Aids for the Leg on Periods". We are living in a movie-minded era, which gives a pattern of living which is not always a benefit to the upbringing of children. Mr. Littlewood pointed out that we remember 70% of what we see. We remember 30% of what we do with our hands, but we only remember 2% of what we say. Because of this an effort is being made to have Hollywood put more religion in their pictures. So, in teaching little children it is better to work with them, even dramatization may be used. Deeper meaning is given the Bible stories when more interest is created.

After adjournment there was a short time to examine the display of books and visual aids to teaching little children.

The supper hour was enjoyed by all, and, following it, we were shown slides of Oak Lake Executive Camp. Some of the scenes were very beautiful.

EVENING SESSION

Upon resuming the convention, the Strathcona Sunday School led in worship service, which was very much enjoyed.

Mr. Littlewood conducted "Question Box". A good many people think we are leaving out evangelism. Easter is a good time to have definite decisions. The aim of the Sunday School is bring all in the community into the Fellowship of Christ.

Mrs. Ralph Wightman gave a talk on appreciation of hymns. "Onward Christian Soldiers" — children like the swing, but do they know they are one of this army marching along? A Bible story hymn suggests "Jesus Loves the Little Children". Often, solo, pictures can be shown which suggest stories in the hymn.

The Resolutions Committee then gave its report.

We resolve:

1. That we express our thanks to the members of Newburgh Church, the Rev. H. B. Herrington, to the Official Board, the Caretaker, for the use of the church, and to the ladies for their bountiful supper and also express our appreciation to all these who helped to make this convention a success; especially the Primary Department Teacher here in Newburgh and the team of young men who conducted the evening worship period.

2. That we express our thanks to the Rev. S. Littlewood for his fine addresses and inspiring ideas, which will be very helpful to us in doing our Sunday School work.

3. We express our appreciation to Ontario Religious Educational Council, especially Mrs. York and Mrs. Asselstine, from Marlbank, for their duet.

4. Since there is an ever-increasing need for vigilance and work regulating the workings of the liquor traffic, especially in these days, and since the Ontario Federation is sponsoring conference this spring in various counties, we resolve that all Sunday School officers and teachers and scholars attend, if it is at all possible the conference which will be held in Tamworth on Wednesday, June 19th, at 7:30 p.m.

5. We resolve, that we sponsor in our own schools the temperance movement by giving young people in our Sunday Schools the opportunity of signing the pledge for total abstinence.

6. We resolve, that missionary instruction be given regularly in every Sunday School in order that the Sunday School may be acquainted with the large world-wide work of the christian church.

7. That the notices for the O. R. E. C. meetings be sent out at least a week before the date of the meeting, in order to give the members sufficient time to make plans to attend the meeting.

8. That the Superintendent of every school endeavours to attend the Sunday School convention, and that each Sunday School have at least one delegate present.

9. That, because of the happy fellowship and christian brotherhood at an outdoor gathering, we authorize the Executive to make arrangements for a picnic for the O. R. E. S. of Camden and Sheffield this summer.

10. That, in view of the fact that we need trained teachers for our Sunday Schools, we recommend that the ministers be a committee to establish training schools in this convention area, with the Leadership Training Convenor as organizer.

The Nominating Committee reported as follows:

President—Mr. D. B. Amey.
Vice President—Mr. W. G. Huffman.
Secretary-Treasurer — Wray McLaughlin.
Children's Division — Miss Anah Simpkins.
Boys' Division—Rev. W. H. Baugh.
Girls' Division—Mrs. Geo. Finlay.
Young People—Mrs. Fred Bell.
Adult—Mrs. Edgar Drew.
Home Department — Mr. Earl Bradshaw.
Temprance — Mr. LaVerne Switzer.
Missionary—Mrs. Thos. Wilson.
Leadership Training — Rev. W. G. Fletcher.

After the adoption of the resolutions, Rev. Mr. Littlewood spoke again on "And I, if I be Lifted Up". The war is over, but not our christian life. We cannot, at any time, cast aside our christian armour. Because of failure to look up the people were saved when Moses lifted up the brazen serpent, in the wilderness. Look to Jesus and live, to the cross and all it symbolizes. When we look to Jesus something happens in our lives. Men, women, boys and girls, become new creatures when we look to Jesus. Jesus sent twelve disciples, with a paean world to teach, so we when we teach a Sunday School class have found our greatest joy when we have uplifted Christ to those around us.

Conway - Sandhurst Welcomes War Brides

On Wednesday afternoon, June 12, the people of Sandhurst and Conway gathered in Sandhurst Parish Hall to welcome Mrs. Albert Punchard and Mrs. John Punchard two recently arrived war brides. The guests of honour were received and introduced by Mrs. H. Babcock and Mrs. Frank Ham.

A short programme consisting of instrumental numbers by Mrs. W. Smith and Mrs. R. Rowe, were much enjoyed. Rev. H. C. Secker favoured with two beautifully rendered hymns accompanied by Mrs. W. Ham at the piano. Rev. Mr. Secker addressed the gathering and welcomed the guests. Mrs. W. Ham played for community singing. Mrs. A. Punchard and Mrs. J. Punchard were called to the platform and Mrs. H. Robinson and Mrs. W. Ackerman presented each bride with a beautiful reversible blanket, also matching satin comforter, pillow cases and towels.

The address of presentation was read by Mrs. H. Claringbold, and was as follows:

We are gathered here this afternoon to welcome you both to our church, our community and our country. You have come from our beloved Mother Empire, and we trust you will not be disappointed with life in Canada and fellowship with us Canadians; many of whom are of Empire descent and whose parents or grandparents left their homeland, and braved hardships in our country which was much different then than it is to-day. We wonder how many of us would have the courage and fortitude that you have displayed. We owe the people of Britain a debt that we can never repay. They who held out under such tremendous odds during the dark days of war, and of which each of you had a part.

We in Canada should be most thankful for the privileges that have always been ours to enjoy. Much could be said, but each of us in our heart knows how we would feel were we in your place, and so we want to make you feel welcome at all our church services, social gatherings and in our homes. Let each of us recall Jesus' words when He said: "I was a stranger and ye took me in," as we extend to you, our new friends, the Canadian handclasp of friendship, and ask you to please accept these gifts as a slight token of our good wishes to you both for many years of happy wedded life and a prosperous and happy life in your new Canadian home.

As the ripples follow the waves at sea,
So may God's blessing follow thee.

A social half-hour was enjoyed during which the ladies visited with the charming war brides and learned many interesting facts about the Old Land.

British Television Inventor Dies

London, (B.U.P.) — John Logie Baird, 58, an inventor who was credited with giving the first successful demonstration of true television, died in his sleep Friday at his home in Sussex, home.

His health had been poor for eighteen months. His arduous work on television during the war brought on a nervous breakdown.

Baird gave what was said to be the first successful television demonstration to members of the Royal Institute on January 27, 1926.

He made many other television discoveries, including some of the most modern in use.

AID TO BE EXTENDED RESIDENT JAPANESE

Ottawa. — A hostel for resident Japanese of Canada will be established at Moose Jaw, Sask., to assist in placement of the Japs, a Labor Department official said. The move is part of the Government's re-allocation policy towards resident Japanese.

NEW RATION BOOKS DUE IN SEPTEMBER

Ottawa. — Any ideas that people might have had that the end of rationing of foodstuffs in Canada was near, were shattered when the Wartime Prices and Trade Board announced that the 900 ration boards across the country were now preparing for the distribution of ration book No. 9. The distribution will take place between September 9th and 16th, Donald Gordon, chairman of the W.P.T.B. said.

"Continued rationing in Canada is this country's answer to a world crying for help," Mr. Gordon said in making known the decision of the Government that another ration book should be issued. "As long as human beings in so many countries of the world are starving or near starvation, it is unthinkable that Canadians should refuse to do their share in helping out."

Thousands of volunteer workers will again be recruited to serve at distribution centres, and local ration boards throughout the country are calling for volunteers.

Officials pointed out that while the distribution will be continued during the week in various parts of the country, local distribution centres will be open only on certain days throughout the week, and warned consumers to watch for local announcements previous to September 9th, to learn when centres will be open in their own locality.

As in past distributions, it will be the responsibility of consumers to call for their own books.

Late-comers, who have not picked up their books by the final day on which the centre is open, will not be able to receive a book before September 30, and will thereby themselves considerable inconvenience Mr. Gordon said.

Ottawa Figures on Bread Said Authentic

Ottawa. — Bureau of Statistics officials said last week that an apparent discrepancy in the Canadian per-capita consumption of bread in 1944 and 1943 was caused by increase in population which lowered average consumption while total consumption rose.

During 1944 Canadians ate 1,249,-083,000 pounds of bread, a per capita consumption of 104.3 pounds. In 1943, 1,244,208,000 pounds were consumed, an average of 108.4 pounds per person.

RETAIL MEAT PRICES STUDIED

Ottawa. — Retail meat market problems were discussed at a meeting between Prices Board officials and the Board's special retail meat advisory committee, which represents meat dealers across Canada and was appointed when meat rationing was re-introduced last September.

A board statement said committee members, who came to Ottawa at the Board's request, reported on wholesale prices "actually prevailing for red and blue brand beef in their communities and emphasizes that the present position of the retail trade in which retail mark-ups were reduced below the minimum could not be continued."

The statement was referring to the recent action of the Board in suspending wholesale ceilings on red and blue brand beef.

Twenty members representing the meat dealers organizations throughout Canada attended the meeting.

GREECE TO DECIDE KING'S FATE SEPT. 1

Athens, (Reuters) — Mr. Constantin Tsaldaris, Greek Prime Minister, has tabled in the Greek Chamber a draft decree "for the proclamation of a plebiscite concerning the return of His Majesty King George to Greece next September 1st.

The decree specifies that the revisionist Chamber has decided to proclaim a plebiscite: "to complete the rapid re-establishment of constitutional normality in the country, to conform to the will of the great majority of the people of Greece as expressed in the recent elections; to conform with the King's desire not to return to Greece before the people have made a free decision."

A major and a private who each lost his right thumb in the fighting in Germany had the index finger of the same hand transferred to the position of the missing thumb. The rare and difficult operations, restoring the soldiers' grip was performed at the Ministry of Pensions hospital at Ronkswood, near Worcester, in England.

"My dear, a great doctor says women require more sleep than men."

"Indeed?" — "Yes, dear; so — er — perhaps you'd better not wait up for me tonight."

Gananoque Members Order Eastern Star Visit Local Chapter

Mrs. Kenneth Hill, worthy matron and W. A. Thompson, worthy patron of Napanee Chapter No. 151, Order of the Eastern Star, as well as the officers and members, were honored by a fraternal visit on the officers and members of St. Lawrence Chapter No. 229, Gananoque, on Tuesday night last. The meeting was held in the rooms of Argyll Lodge No. 212, I.O.O.F. and was very largely attended. Among the various chapters represented were Belleville No. 90; Prinniter No. 90; Kingston No. 90; Prince of Odessa, Pinnacle, of Sutton, and the Chapter in Perth. The three past grand representatives of Grand Chapter, Mrs. Frank Naylor, Belleville, Mrs. Percy Hutton, Kingston, and Mrs. V. Cowling, of Napanee, all past district deputy-grand matrons, were welcomed and presented to the East by Mrs. Hill, worthy grand matron.

In attendance also were several presiding matrons and patrons, as well as a large number of past worthy matrons and past worthy patrons, who were extended a welcome by Mrs. Hill.

After the business of the Chapter had been concluded, which included the initiation of two candidates, Miss St. Lawrence Chapter No. 229, Mrs. Bargen, the worthy matron of the visiting Chapter, E. P. McLennan, and officers, were invited to take the chairs for the opening of the 2nd degree, which was done in an able manner. During the ceremony, vocal music was given by Mrs. C. B. Wright, of Gananoque, which added considerably to the impressiveness of the degree. The visiting officers were thanked most heartily for their work in conferring the degree. Mrs. Hill presentd a gift to Mrs. Sargent and the latter in return presented a gift to Mrs. Hill.

The lodge room was artistically decorated. The work of making the flowers for the several star points was ably done by Mrs. Joseph Tustin, convener, who was rendered a most hearty vote of appreciation. At the conclusion of the chapter session, the large number of officers and members adjourned to the banquet room, where delicious refreshments were served under the capable convenership of Mrs. W. E. Vine and Mrs. A. J. Francis, who were assisted by their committee.

The evening will long be remembered by the many who were present. The officers of Napanee Chapter with the worthy matron, Mrs. Kenneth Hill, and the worthy patron, W. A. Thompson, will make a fraternal visit to Belleville Chapter No. 55 on the evening of Friday, June 21, for the purposes of degree work.

Revival of Religion In Russia, Genuine

The revival of religion in Russia is rapid and genuine, Pte.-Lieut. A. Peters, formerly Intelligence Officer at R.C.A.P. overseas headquarters in London, and senior R.C.A.F. interpreter with the British Military Mission to the Soviet Union, disclosed, recently in Montreal.

Flight-Lieutenant Peters said that the churches in Russia were filled with worshippers and there was a noticeable increase in the number of churches being opened and renovated.

Speaking on his observations in Moscow, Flight-Lieut. Peters stated that the masses of the people of Russia did not want war, but, on the contrary, were looking forward to years of peace and reconstruction.

The ordinary Russian, he continued, was very friendly, hospitable and anxious to know about life in other countries, while the Soviet official had a tendency to remain aloof and formal at all times. One of a team of seven British and Dominion officers sent to the Lwow area, behind the First Ukrainian Front, to contact and facilitate the movement of liberated Allied ex-prisoners of war, he said he had an opportunity to meet Russians in all walks of life. It was there that he found the Russian people friendly and co-operative.

FARMERS - Attention
An old established Montreal Fruit Importer wishes to contact a number of successful farmers in Eastern Ontario who will grow a half acre or acre of Raspberries for shipping to them on consignment. The whole crop or that part not required for your local demand is wanted.
Plants of the best commercial variety will be supplied for fall planting, 1946, by Canada's largest nursery grower of certified planting-out stock at commercial rate. Term payment if desired.
Yields of 8,000 pints, and more, per acre, under good cultural conditions. While impossible to guarantee market prices, the abnormally small acreage in Ontario would indicate relatively strong prices for some years, thus insuring a very high ratio of profit.
If interested in this high grade, long term, sideline, reply to Box 457, Campbellford, Ontario, on or before June 27th. A raspberry specialist, representing the interested parties, will shortly call at your home and explain in detail the cost of planting, care and cultivation, picking, marketing, and shipping.
Because of very short plant supplies, replies will be considered according to merit and date received. 25ap

Question and Answer Column

Readers may direct their questions, giving their name and address and mentioning the name of this paper, to the Information Branch, WPTB, 490 Sussex Street, Ottawa, Ontario.

Q. I bought a house for our own use. There are people renting it at the present time and I would like to know if I could give notice to these people and if so how much?

A. Sorry, from the information contained in your letter you cannot give them any notice. These tenants are protected by the 'Freezing Order' and while this order is in effect you would not be permitted to give notice.

Q. How much butter should we get each week? I noticed we were to receive an increase but my grocer still gives me half a pound for each coupon.

A. Yes, the butter ration has increased. Beginning June 6th the ration was raised to the old rate of 6 ounces per week. The butter ration was cut by postponing the valid dates for coupons, but there has never actually been a change in the amount of butter received for each coupon, and your grocer is quite right when he gives you half a pound.

Q. Is there a ceiling prices on wages paid to domestic help? I think $90 for a cook and $65 or $75 for a housemaid, is ridiculous.

A. This is a matter for the Regional War Labor Board and we suggest you write to them for any information on wages. We do know, however, that there is no wage control over the amount of money paid to domestic help.

Q. For years I have bought hot dogs at a roadstand for 10c. Last week I noticed their price had been raised to 15c. Is this increase permitted by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board?

A. No, if this restaurant charged 10c for hot dogs in 1941 they cannot charge more now. As you have given us the name and address of the restaurant, we will check their prices at once.

VETERANS ACT REVIEW BEGUN

Ottawa. — The Veterans Committee of the Commons had begun its review of the War Veterans Allowance Act, a statute which on March 31 was giving benefits to 23,312 veterans of four wars, their wives and children at an annual cost of $12,000,000.

Their version of a draft bill laid before members will go before the Commons with the ultimate object of becoming part of Canada's veterans charter.

The act covers veterans of the Northwest Rebellion of 1885, the South African and the two Great Wars who are more than sixty if men 55 if women, or veterans of less than these two ages who the five-man board decides are in needy circumstances. It also covers widows and orphans of such men.

A special dual service pension provides for those veterans of both Great Wars who did not serve in a theatre of actual war in either.

The draft bill includes recommendations already approved by the government. It would increase the basic amounts payable from $240 to $365 a year for single men and from $480 to $730 for married men. The new rates actually consist of the old basic rates plus supplementary allowances already approved by Order-in-Council.

The single man has deducted any other income of more than $125 a year and the married man any other income of more than $250 a year.

The bill would give the chairman of the board the status of a deputy head of a department.

If and when it becomes legislation, it will repeal 11 Orders-in-Council dating as far back as January 17th, 1941.

Many Veterans Working In Forest Jobs

Forest industry, being Canada's largest employer, has absorbed more returned men than any other industrial enterprise, according to Major-Gen. C. B. Price, president of the Canadian Legion, in a statement to the Canadian Forestry Association.

"Veterans are interested in permanent jobs and they are keenly concerned with public policies that maintain full employment," the Legion President said. "In my opinion, the people of Canada should weigh the advantage of large-scale employment in forest industry against the recurring disadvantage of nearly 6,000 annual forest fires. Veterans want the natural resources guarded with vigilance and managed under sound engineering principles.

"I question if there is any body of men so ready to support the fullest conservation of the natural resources as the members of the Canadian Legion."

"... swords into ploughshares ..."

No one worked with stouter heart or stronger arm than the Canadian farmer to win World War II.

Through six long years of war, while half a million farmers left their ploughs to take up arms in combat or make them on the home front, men and women on the farm laboured from dawn till dusk — and after — to supply food for war . . . in millions of tons.

The ploughshare was the sword of battle . . .

And now, with peace so dearly won, the farm people of Canada are turning their energies to lighten the suffering of war-torn and famine-stricken lands — toiling to hold and even raise production — still fighting to build a better world for all men.

Proudly, the Bank of Montreal salutes these men, women and children of Canada's army of agriculturalists, who now turn their sword of battle to the tasks of peace.

CASH MONEY

- and some of it may come your way!

Yesterday Farmer Neilson got over $800 cash when he sold his grain. Through the processes of trade and commerce, some of that money may come to you. Banking service enabled him to obtain his money quickly.

The farmer doesn't have to wait for his money until his grain reaches the consumer . . . this is important to you, no matter where you live or what your work.

Farmer Neilson, and thousands like him, spend money for household and farm equipment, food, clothes, radios, paint and a hundred other things. This helps keep people busy all over the Dominion.

Your bank advances credit also to help farmers plant, cultivate and harvest crops of all kinds, to buy and raise livestock. Banking service is something like the good oil in fine machinery, you never notice it. But it is a prime factor in your prosperity . . . in the Canadian way of life.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS!

The lakes and streams and forests of holiday land are yours to enjoy . . . and yours to protect from their greatest enemy, fire.

Most forest fires are started by human beings. Thousands of acres are blackened and destroyed every year because someone was not careful with fire.

What forests do for you:

- Give you a grand place to holiday.
- Provide beauty spots for our visitors.
- Shelter game animals and fishing haunts.
- Control flow of water . . . help even the flow of rivers so they do not dry up in summer.
- Help to ensure a year-round supply of Hydro power for you.
- Provide thousands of jobs in lumber, pulp wood and other forest industries.
- Influence climate so as to prevent extremes.

Enjoy your Holidays but protect our Forests

Informed Speaker Describes Vividly Europe's Need

Major Edmison Gives Address on UNRAR's Work

On Friday evening, June 21st, a very representative group of Napanee citizens was introduced to the almost miraculous works of UNRRA among the uprooted peoples of Europe, when Major Edmison spoke in the Town Hall under the auspices of the I.O.D.E., on the subject: "UNRRA'S Work Among the Uprooted Peoples of Europe."

Regent C. D. McLellan, presiding in the place of Mrs. Macnaughton, I.O.D.E. Regent, opened the evening's programme by presenting Mr. Major Aylesworth, whose rendition of two well known songs, was entirely enjoyable.

When introducing the guest speaker Major J. A. Edmison, K.C., Mr. McLellan pointed out the advantage of having personally from one of the men officially concerned with world-wide affairs.

Mr. Edmison's brilliant lecture was illustratively substantiated by pictures taken on his tour of Germany. "UNRRA is chief work in Germany," Mr. Edmison explained, "was dealing with "Displaced persons" or "DP". A DP is a man or woman who has been forcibly carried away from his home into a concentration camp or to work in the German war machine. The tremendous task of feeding, clothing and returning these unfortunates to their original homes is only one of the many tasks which UNRRA has successfully undertaken.

"UNRRA," said Mr. Edmison, "is composed of 350 teams. Each team is representative of the 47 nations of UNRRA. Here, colour and creed are harmoniously united in the combat the destruction of European men, women and children. UNRRA camps, where the DP's are assembled to be sent to their homes, are ironically enough, former German barracks built by Hitler in 1936, while German war criminals are lodged in the camps of Dachau, Belsen, and Bergenwald.

"One of the most pathetic situations that confront UNRRA," Major Edmison continued, "is the children who have spent all or most of their lives behind the barbed wire of the concentration camps. These children must be taught some of the most natural things in a child's life — to laugh and to play. This is entirely credible when one is reminded that these same youth were made to act as cremators, watched as friends were tortured and murdered, and starved to cattle and sent to the gas chambers. Most of these children are orphans or suspected orphans. Each orphan is a new phrase in UNRRA'S vocabulary. In this case it is a child who has been separated from his parents and it can not be ascertained whether his parents are still alive."

THANKS FOR WATER

"A banquet in the famished Europe of to-day would consist of tinned water and bread; this meagre fare to the well-fed Canadian. The arrival of a water truck—water systems in most places being insufficient — is the sign for the forming of long expectant queues. The happy recipient of a cup of water is as appreciative as a Canadian woman who receives a pair of nylons.

"UNRRA," Mr. Edmison said, "has established churches, schools, clinics, tracing bureaus, entertainment facilities, playgrounds, and most important of all has returned five million Belgian, Russian, Rumanian, French, Dutch, anti-Fascist Italians, and other European peoples to their homes, despite inadequate transportation facilities and fuel shortages. Not only has it returned these people, but it has united families thought to be hopelessly separated."

MAKE NAPANEE CLOTHING CAMPAIGN OUTSTANDING

The pictures shown depicting the horrors of concentration are indescribable. Suffice to say that the cheapest commodity under Germany rule was "life". The crowning symbol being the concentration camp. The work of UNRRA has been completely summarized by the universal prayer of Europe: 'THANK GOD FOR UNRRA."

Mr. Edmison concluded his lecture by expressing the hope that Napanee people would give their utmost aid in the clothing "Blitz". "For," said Mr. Edmison, "we have won the war against Nazism, let us win the war against Hunger, Cold and Starvation."

Mr. McDonald, provincial organizer for UNRRA, was the next speaker. "Mr. Edmison's words have impressed you with the need of UNRRA. The Clothing Campaign which is to begin in Napanee could have no better introduction," said Mr. McDonald. He informed the citizens present that the quota for Ontario is six million pounds of used clothing. That is 1½ pounds per person. Mr. McDonald cautioned further: "Nazism and tyranny are not dead; they are merely stunned by the power of right. Victory is ours if we answer the challenge. Make the Napanee Blitz better or equal to any other town in Canada."

Rev. Noble Hatton on behalf of the citizens of Napanee, expressed his appreciation to the speakers, and wished them well in their work.

CRITICIZE DOMINION M.P.'S EXEMPTIONS

Brockville, June 23 (Special) — Strongly criticizing members of the House of Commons and the Senate who "deemed it advisable to accept of the high cost of living to vote themselves a $2,000 additional indemnity exempt from income tax," Counties Council of Leeds and Grenville unanimously passed a resolution asking that every married man be allowed an exemption of $2,000 and every single person at least an exemption of $1,000.

Copies of the resolution are being forwarded to Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, Prime Minister; Minister of Finance Ilsley, and each of the members of Parliament from Leeds and Grenville.

In criticizing the $2,000 additional exemption of members of Parliament and Senators, the councillors said: "This looks like discrimination of the worst sort, and is taking away from our people the incentive to produce to their full capacity. Hard-working people are forced to start to compute their income tax after they have earned $600 per year.'

U. S. SEEKING CANADIAN LUMBER

Washington, (A.P.)—The Canadian Embassy has inquired the United States State Department that if production of logs from Crown grant lands increases the Dominion may be able to release more logs to the United States.

The Canadian Embassy statement said:

"There is no prohibition on the export of cedar logs from Crown grant lands in Canada.

"With respect to fir and hemlock logs we have indicated that we are prepared to permit at least 17,500,000 feet of fir logs, exclusive of high grade peelers, and 32,800,000 feet of hemlock and balsam logs, exclusive of high value logs, to go to the United States from Crown grant lands in Canada during the year 1946.

"This follows the identical pattern used last year with respect to the export of these logs to the United States.

"Logging conditions are at present reasonably good at the coast and if as anticipated our production increases materially during the summer months it is quite likely we may be able to release further logs for shipment to the United States before the end of the year. However, the situation is not at all encouraging at the present moment."

BRITONS' BREAD TO BE RATIONED

London, (C.P.) — Britons were told last week, in a broadcast of John Strachey, food minister, that it was "highly probable" their bread soon would be rationed, thus giving them a chance to show the world proof of Britain's "international good faith."

Mr. Strachey, addressing Britons for the first time since he succeeded Sir Ben Smith as supervisor of British food policy, paid tribute to the United States while discussing aid to stricken Europe.

"It is rather easy for all of us to start criticizing America just now because she is better fed than we are," he said, "but do we realize that at this moment there are idle flour mills and bread queues in American cities because of the amount of wheat America is striving to send overseas?"

Mr. Strachey also declared that the British diet, thought monotonous, was not so meagre as it might seem.

"In total quality, we as a nation are only eating about seven per cent less than we did before the war," he said. "Richer people are getting considerably less food than they used to, while many poorer are actually getting more."

"But there is a strict limit to what Britain can do to help starving people," he added, "and that limit has undoubtedly been reached at the point at which we have to make all preparations for bread rationing."

Mr. Strachey said there were other "painfully short" items and announced that the present soap ration, of "three average sized bars a month" would definitely be slashed.

South Africa To Begin Food Rationing Aug. 1

Pretoria, (Reuters) — Dr. H. J. van Eck, Director of Food Supplies and Distribution, said last week he hopes to introduce food rationing in nine major urban areas of South Africa, August 1st.

Bread and sugar definitely would be rationed, and there was a possibility of meat rationing.

Dominion Gov't Announces New Plan Savings Bonds

Will be No Canvass From Door to Door

The Minister of Finance announced last week end in the House of Commons, that in response to public demand, the Government will offer a new security, the Canada Savings Bond, for purchase this fall. The Canada Savings Bond will replace both the Victory Bond and the War Savings Certificate which were formerly offered as securities designed for the investment of personal savings. The new security will be similar in most details to the Victory Bond. It will be available to the general public through banks, trust companies and investment dealers, although there will be no organized door-to-door campaign as in the past. A payroll savings plan will be available to employers who wish to operate it.

In announcing these peacetime savings facilities, the Minister referred to study that had been given to the subject following the Ninth Victory Loan. It is understood that a survey taken last November showed that a large number of employers were presenting approximately one million employees were in favour of continuing a payroll savings plan. A second survey indicated that 82 per cent. of past buyers of War Savings Certificates and Victory Bonds plan to buy Government securities if available.

Although Mr. Ilsley predicted widespread acceptance of the Canada Savings Bond, he emphasized that the launching of this security could not be considered as another "Victory Loan." "Sales of these bonds are not expected to cover the Government's total borrowing requirements," he said. He indicated that a substantial part of these requirements would be met by public offerings of bills or other short-term securities. Mr. Ilsley pointed out that for this and other reasons, it was not practicable or desirable to recall the National War Finance Committee to drive to build up the large organization of salesmen which would be needed for a house-to-house canvass.

The initiative in purchasing the Canada Savings Bond will lie, for the most part, with the people themselves.

The Canada Savings Bond will be issued in denominations of $50, $100, $500 and $1,000, and will be redeemable on demand at Chartered Banks at 100 per cent. plus interest. While the terms are not yet known, Mr. Ilsley indicated that they would be substantially the same as those existing for comparable investments at the present time. The Canada Savings Bond will therefore be registered as to principal in the name of the purchaser, and will be set on the amount which can be purchased by any individual.

"I have no doubt that Canadians will see in the Canada Savings Bonds a desirable addition to the Victory Bond," stated Mr. Ilsley. "But it is also important that Canadians see in themselves the successors to the Victory Bond salesmen for they will be responsible in large part for initiative in making their own purchases."

United States Honors Canadian Airmen

Ottawa, (C.P.) — In recognition of services to the United States during the war, Air Vice-Marshal C. R. Slemon, C.B., C.B.E., M.C., of Ottawa, and Group Capt. V. H. Patriarche, 39, O.B.E., A.F.C., E.D., of Winnipeg, have been awarded the United States Legion of Merit by Hon. Vets Ask Freedom From Fear, Want

Toronto. — The Canadian Active Servire Forces Association has sent a letter to Federal Government officials urging all governments "to take immediate steps to see that the fear of want is removed from the lives of those men and women who served their country's call in time of need."

The action was made available for publication by Percy Bacon, secretary of the association, calls for the establishment of a "labor code" for all industry which would set minimum wages and maximum hours.

The letter says that the Atlantic Charter seems to be forgotten for "we are not free from fear and want and it looks very much as though big business and the government desire that we, the men and women who served our country against the forces of evil to make the world a better place to live in, are again going to be forced to work for starvation wages and long hours, as was the case during the 'hungry thirties'."

Two Motor Crashes Sunday Evening

Two motor car accidents occurred in Napanee on Sunday evening, causing considerable property damage but only minor injuries to the drivers of the vehicles.

About 8.40 p.m., a truck owned by John McFarland, Napanee, driven by Jack Sutton, Napanee, collided with a motor cycle driven by Robert Skeldon, Napanee, who was accompanied by Stuart Stevens, at the intersection of Dundas and Robert Streets. The McFarland truck, according to the driver of the motorcycle, was travelling south on Robert Street, made a left hand turn on to Dundas from Robert Street, without stopping. The motorcycle, which was approaching the intersection from the east attempted to avoid striking the truck but smashed into the left fender of the truck.

Only slight damage was done to the vehicles but the driver and the passenger of the motorcycle were slightly injured when they received attention by Dr. T. M. Galbraith.

About 10.45 p.m., on Sunday, while driving a Plymouth coupe south on Centre Street, John Casalbo, Kingston, lost control of the car when he went to sleep, and after striking and breaking off a Hydro pole in front of Harry Parks's residence, crossed the lawn of Mr. Boney's home and tore off the steps of the verandah. Considerable damage was done to the front of the body of the car, as well as to the engine.

Cherry Pirces Will Be Unchanged

Ottawa, — The prices board has announced ceiling prices for domestic and imported cherries this season would be the same as those in effect in 1944 and 1945, effective immediately.

The announcement added that no changes have been made in last year's trucking zone in southwestern Ontario, which prevents growers north of the Severn River. Within the trucking zone wholesalers selling are not to pay more than 4c a buy from shippers, truckers or growers and shippers are limited to a seven per cent markup over the grower price.

Trucking zone transportation costs allowed will be the express rate for less than carload lots from Grimsby, Ont., regardless of where the cherries are grown.

Outside the zone, shippers markup is 10 per cent over grower price and wholesaler markup is 12½ per cent of actual cost.

The Ontario ceiling on producer sales to wholesalers or shippers is $1.30 for a six-quart basket, except in British Columbia the producers' ceiling is $2.65 per 15-pound case, and $4.25 per 30-pound case.

Farmers' retail ceilings are $1.99 for a six-quart basket, $3.36 for an 11-quart flat basket, $4.64 for a 15-pound lug, $6.68 for a 23-pound lug and $5.33 for a 4-basket crate.

"Save Europe Now"

Toronto. — Vera Brittain, English novelist, now touring North America in an address last week contended every effort should be made to feed Europeans to prevent the "neurosis and hysteria which produced Hitler's followers."

"I lived in London through a thousand blitzes, and that I think is one of the chief reasons why I am willing to have my rations cut again to feed the people of Europe, very definitely including Germany," she said.

She is in this country on behalf of the "Save Europe Now" organization. Miss Brittain attributed the American attitude of "complete watchfulness" to the many invasions made upon Russian territory by the Western Powers in the last few hundred years.

'BIG SHIPS' FINISHED SOLDIERING CANADA

Ottawa, (C.P.) — The big ships of the Atlantic have finished their soldiering for the Canada that went to war in 1939.

With the arrival of the "Ile de France at Halifax, last Friday, the seventy-year job is done for the Aquitanians and the asteurs, the Queen Mury's and the Mauretanians. For the last big troop movement came in with, the Ile de France.

From now on the men will come home in small groups as they finish their jobs in England and on the continent. There won't be enough of them available at any one time, officials say, to make up a major draft.

By the end of June there are expected to be only 10,000 soldiers and airmen left overseas to come home to Canada.

Between VE-Day, June 8, 1945, and the same date in 1946, nearly 320,000 of these soldiers reached Canada. On June 8, 38,000 soldiers and airmen remained to come home but many of these have returned since.

On June 4th, some 29,000 wives and dependents of Canadian servicemen remained to be moved. That area reached Canada between August 1944 and June 1946.

France Makes Bid For Tourist Trade

Toronto, (C.P.) — The French Government has arranged for accommodation at special rates and food at normal prices and of prestige standard for persons in an attempt to speed the restoration of the republic's national economy, Pierre Wagner, French consul-general at Montreal revealed, on his first Toronto visit, recently.

Tourists will also get special ration books and will be able to buy goods in Canada at less than those allowed the French themselves, he said. Thirty-day visas were readily obtainable and transport from New York to Cherbourg and Le Hacre was "not difficult any more."

The French Government felt this step would be in keeping with France's financial position in the international field, M. Negrier said.

NO AUTO PRIORITIES BEFORE JULY 1ST

Toronto. — It has been announced by the Prices Board, that issue of priority certificates for automobiles would not be recommended until after July 1st.

An official, questioned whether priorities would be issued at that date, replied, "if the government will let us. But we have nothing definite as to when there will be a further issue of priorities."

It was stated there was little hope of filling outstanding priorities before Dominion Day — or for some time afterwards.

Washington. — Soft coal price increases averaging 40½ cents a ton, mostly designed to be the first step toward returning the government-operated mines to private operation, were authorized last week end by the Office of Price Administration.

The first-stage increases, effective July 1, were announced simultaneously with the raise would not cover higher production costs brought about by wage increases and other concessions made to John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers to end the recent 59-day mine strike.

There is Still Time To Contribute to Clothing Collection

Good Response Reported But More Clothing Can be Used

The story told by Major Edmison in his lecture 'UNRRA'S Work Among the Uprooted Peoples of Europe," at the Napanee Town Hall, last Friday evening, emphasized the need for the National Clothing Collection, which is being carried on throughout Canada, from June 17th to June 29th.

The collection for Napanee and the immediate vicinity is being conducted by the I.O.D.E. and clothing may be left at the Armouries.

The first few days which have elapsed since the collection started, at least a ton of good clothing has been turned in at the Armouries, where it is being packed and sorted ready for shipment. But the committee in charge of the collection, feel there must be a great deal more clothing in the people of the County of Lennox and Addington could spare without depriving themselves of any comforts.

EVERYONE IS URGED TO LOOK OVER STORE TRUNKS, ATTICS AND CLOSETS TO SEE IF THERE IS NOT, AT EAST, ONE USABLE GARMENT WHICH COULD BE DONATED TO THE CAUSE.

Writing about conditions in Poland, a recent publicity release in connection with the Clothing Collection, spoke of the terrific cost of clothing in the country. It went on to say:

"A pair of shoes costs the equivalent of $70 in Warsaw. 100 will buy but the simplest of woollen dresses; a nightgown has cost as much as $35, and a pair of stockings $11 in Canadian funds. With such prices prevailing, the majority of Polish working people have to go without, and that is why the Canadian Allied Relief organization sent 12.91 per cent. of the used clothing that was collected last October, to Poland. The free distribution of this 1½ million pounds of clothes was made to those most in need — but there are still hundreds of thousands of men, women and children who have not sufficient covering to keep their bodies warm and enable them to fight off the diseases which malnutrition and inhuman treatment in the slave-labour centres of Germany have caused.

"The same story of distress comes from other Allied countries that were overrun and looted by, the enemies of civilization, and it is to help these stricken people that the National Clothing Collection will take place throughout Canada from June 17th to June 29th. Sponsored by Canadian Allied Relief, the aim of the drive is to obtain at least one article of clothing from each person in Canada. It is only by the generous co-operation of every one that this objective can be achieved."

HOLD ON A WHILE YET

We have been rapped over the knuckles more than once for daring to suggest that our rationing and controls be retained a while, yet. They should be maintained until the production of consumer goods and the consumer demand become a little more nearly equal than they are at the present time. Otherwise, there is bound to be purchasing hysteria, hoarding, and a measure of inflation. Recently, we visited a city in The United States. There, most of the controls have been removed;; goods are scarce and prices have skyrocketed. For the experience, we went shopping with the householder. Bread was said to be scarce. We saw a lot in a store window, but when we went in each loaf had a name on it and was marked 'sold.' Same in other stores, until we discovered "a little one around the corner." Flour? Yes, lots of reinforced flour, but not to-day; sorry ! Butter or butter substitutes, out. By the grapevine method, we learned of one place and by buying a lot of goods not really needed, we got a quarter of a pound of butter. Meat, out, bacon out. Berries? yes, lots of fresh strawberries, but we would hesitate to state the price for fear of effect on berry growers here, and so the householder said "out".

In a democratic country controls are not popular. But they are by far the lesser of two evils. It is to be hoped that the great majority of ceiling prices in our country will be maintained, and that rationing will continue until long after the danger of inflation has passed.

HURTING THEIR CASE

The Jewish people have suffered more during the past ten years than any other group of people. There have been persecutions before but never in recorded history have they been carried through with the thoroughness, cold scientific efficiency and brutal sadism as has marked the Hitler regime. The sympathy of the whole world went out to the Jews, who were herded into ghettos, and burned, incinerated in disguised torture chambers, and human extermination camps. The Jewish people have suffered for no other reason than because they were Jews, and the world, following the publication of the atrocity accounts, revolted at the news and went all out in their sympathy to those who had been so signally picked out for torture by the Nazis.

The events of the extremists among the Jews in Palestine, during the past few weeks, however, have gone a long way towards alienating that world sympathy. We have no desire to condone every action that the British Empire has taken in her long history. Of course, there have been black spots and mistakes—many of them. At the same time, the British people, and the British Government, have been friendly towards the Jews. They have shown no prejudice against them. In Great Britain, the question about a person of Jewish birth and ancestry is never raised. They take their place in business, educational institutions, professions and governments, like anyone else. And Great Britain has been the refuge, often enough, for persecuted Jews to whom hospitality and protection have been afforded.

In Palestine the situation is a complicated one. Certainly the repatriated Jews who live there have done a phenomenal job in reclaiming land, developing new industries, establishing a university, and great co-operative organizations. For this, too, they have won the admiration of all who have taken the trouble to look into their achievements.

It is regretable, therefore, that all this goodwill should be jeopardized now by the attitude of certain extremists among them who, in Palestine, are venting their spleen against the British people. With all the goodwill in the world towards the Jews, it is hard to condone the attitude and the actions of those who in Palestine are terrorizing the whole state. Palestine is not an easy place to govern. Might just as well hand over the exclusive rights in Canada to the French or the English, as to hand over sole control of Palestine to the Hebrews. For there are two groups there, almost equally divided—the Arabs and the Jews. They must learn to live together and work together. World Jewery should repudiate the actions of the extremists in Palestine and if they have any influence, see to it that reason, rather than fanaticism be exercised in the solution of this problem, otherwise public opinion may swing against them, and thus fan the flames of anti-semitism, which, for one cause or another, seems always to be smoudering just beneath the surface.

NOT BOTH WAYS

There is always a lot of speculation as to the terms of a budget speech. This year, there is more anxiety, more speculation than usual. The Government is getting all sorts of advice as to what those terms should be, but as they are probably all written now, and since Mr. Ilsley would probably not take any suggestion, we might make even if his budget speech were not written, we must exercise a good deal of self-control as there are many things we could say on the matter.

That which bothers us most in this connection is the way most people plead for lower taxes, while at the same time, seeking greater social security. We cannot have it both ways! To be sure, it would be nice to have our income tax reduced. We would be all for it under certain conditions. But, we are not all for it—if greatly reduced taxation involves reduced social services and social securities.

It is a strange thing what war does to people. During a war, nothing matters but the winning of it. Taxation is accepted willingly, enthusiastically. We have no objection to that, of course. But once the war ends, the same old clamor for lower taxation that has ever marked peacetime conditions, begins, and pressures of all sorts are exerted on governments to that end.

The same thing prevails in other areas. The papers come out with headlines of some municipality having a prospect of a hundred new houses. But it took only a few weeks to build enough houses at Ajax to house a thousand or more people. The money was made available—the will was there—and the public wege all for it. I am not suggesting war pressures be extended to peactime projects, indiscriminately, but it seems rather anomalous that in peace time, the people demand less taxes and more services, while the whole wheels of progress seem held up by these dual brakes.

We certainly cannot have it both ways!

DRAGONS TEETH

The dragons teeth which will sprout up and bear fruit in further bitterness, are now being sown in Europe. After a war, there are always a number of displaced persons. That is to be expected. But the actual tearing up from their ancestaral homes of millions of people, and shipping them to a country to which they do not want to go and which does not want them, is tragic both for the present and the future. It is the perpetuation of the Nazi theory of racial discrimination. One of the most revolting examples is the expulsion from Czechoslovakia of 2,500,000 Sudeten Germans. These people have, for generations, lived on the farms in Sudetenland; most of them are anti-Nazi. And yet they are being uprooted, shorn of all their belongings and dumped on a germany they do not know, which is beaten and poverty-stricken, and does not want them.

In a recent Worldover Press dispatch, Leon Dennen, European writer and scholar, says:

"The indiscriminate expulsion from Czechoslovakia of 2,500,000 Sudeten Germans is less an act of political punishment of Nazis than a perpetuation of Nazi race theories. 'I spent 18 months in combat,' a young, much decorated American lieutenant in charge of one of the Bavarian refugee camps told me, 'and I thought I had seen human misery at its worst. But this job of handling the Sudeten expellees is the toughest assignment I've had yet.'

"Pointing to a long row of bewildered, shabby and hungry-looking Sudeten Germans, who had just crossed the Czech border in boxcars, the lieutenant continued: 'They call it a transfer of population, but it is more like a planless stampede. People are being removed from their ancestral homes and shipped against their will and, what is even more important, against the will of those who will eventually have to absorb them into a foreign land. They are stripped bare by the time they arrive here, first by the Czechs and then by the Russian guards. And now we have no houses for them and hardly any food. Local inhabitants, hungry themselves, refuse to contribute to their temporary support. They treat them with hostility'."

The Czechs are certainly heaping up for themselves a lot of bitterness and hatred, which centuries will not obliterate.

WEDDING BELLS

CARMICHAEL - HENDERSON
A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday, June 19th, at St. Charles Church, Peel, Ont., by the Rev. R. J. Coyle, when Muriel Grace Henderson, second daughter of Mrs. Ada Henderson and the late Charles Henderson, became the bride of William Arnold Carmichael, son of Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Carmichael, of Birds Creek, Ont.
The bride looked lovely in a floor-length dress of taffeta acrim, with a sweetheart neckline and matching accessories, and carried a bouquet of red roses and maiden-hair fern. The only attendants were Miss Helen Henderson, sister of the bride and P. A. Carmichael, brother of the groom.
A reception was held at the bride's home in the evening with a large attendance, including five brothers of the groom, Mr. & Mrs. J. Carmichael, of Windsor, Ont., Leonard and Clifford Carmichael of Sellerville, and James and Alex. of Birds Creek, Ont.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JUNE 30TH, 1946

"JESUS' FRIENDS CARRY ON HIS WORK"
Text: Mark 16: 15, 16, 19, 20. Luke 24: 45-49. Acts 2: 46, 47; 5: 42.

Last Sunday the Davenport United Church, in Toronto, Ont. burned the mortgage, which had been quite a headache for a long time. The final payment was raised in small amounts by the women's organization. After the burning ceremony the women presented a resolution to the congregation, which was passed unanimously. It specified that if the managers ever again put a mortgage on the building they would have to pay back to the women's organization this two thousand dollars they had contributed.

That may seem like harsh treatment, nevertheless it represents a protest on the part of the congregation against getting too easily into debt. That was what happened after the first great war. It must not happen again. Beautiful churches are quite the thing, but the world is smashing into chaos unless the things for which it stands are plowed into society.

When Jesus finished his earthly ministry he left the unfinished task up to his followers. He said nothing about churches. He did insist that his disciples preach the gospel of the kingdom. "And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them and confirming the word by the signs that followed". Just so! Jesus fired his followers with zeal for the Kingdom of God. He led them to feel their obligation to its accomplishment. And out they went to tell the message. The church was a sort of after thought on the part of christians. All too often they have given it first place. If the church becomes an end in itself, it defeats the very purpose for which it was organized. It is of value only as it is used as the vehicle for bringing in the kingdom.

It has always been a sign of decadence in religious fervor, and evangelistic zeal, when there has been a swing towards ritual and beauty of worship. These are not to be neglected, but they must not be allowed to become a refuge from the storm and stress of the days in which we live. Jesus sent his disciples out to preach, to win men to his way of life. In the measure the church does that is it his church.

The second section of this week's lesson simply underlines this thought contained in the first section. Jesus makes it clear that before there can be any real advance in religion, there must be a repentance, and a seeking of the forgiveness. That is the sine qua non of any great revival. We are trying to develop forward movements advance movements in the church.

They will become real movements of spiritual progress, in so far as they begin with the individual's confession of his own sin and shortcoming. Jesus insists that any great revival, any great spiritual advance, must begin in "Jerusalem," Jerusalem being the place where we are. It is easy enough to think in terms of the other fellow, but the real test is one's willingness, and ability, to face his own obligation to Christ's demands, and his responsibility to the man next door, on the next farm, or at the desk in the next office.

The early disciples were gladdning evangelists, and their fervor brought results. "The Lord added to them, day by day, those that were saved". That is exactly what has always happened when men get filled with the Holy Spirit.

DISTRICT SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The annual convention of the Richmond - North Frederickaburgh townships and the towns of Napanee and Deseronto Sunday School area, was held in Hay Bay United Church on Wednesday, June 19th, at 2:00 p.m. and continued in the evening session.

The afternoon session opened with a worship service conducted by Rev. William Parker. Rev. S. Littlewood of Orono, the O.R.E.C. representative, spoke on the theme: 'New Methods for the Old Message.' He said that this theme seems a far cry from the evangelism theme of last year, but each is after the same end. Sunday School workers must keep abreast of the times in interpreting the Old Message of the Scriptures, in the last hundred and fifty years the whole pattern of man's living has changed, and with it, his thinking and spiritual needs.

Education in the schools has become largely visual and if such methods are not introduced into the Sunday School, the children may find a serious gap. In the day school, we attempt to train children to be good citizens—why should we not use similar methods and aids in our Sunday schools to produce Christian citizens?

Rev. K. J. Crawford, of Enterprise, presented a short talk on "Making the Scriptures Live," in which he gave some points on oral reading, as well as private devotions. He said that there are two kinds of reading—one that involves the eye and mouth, the other, where the words are seen by the eye, understood by the mind and heart, and spoken by the lips. To develop the latter type of reading, the reader should have an opportunity of looking over the passage beforehand.

The Bible is not like ordinary books as it is a collection of 66 books in all, by many different authors, who wrote at different times. The divisions of the text are also artificial—mainly just an aid for study. The chapters do not always contain the complete idea, or in some cases, more than one topic or story is contained in a chapter. The Bible is a live book with applications and directions for modern life.

A brief discussion of visual aids for the lesson period was given by Rev. Littlewood. He said that the movies have given us a pattern of living. Statistics show that 70 per cent. of what we see, we remember. 30 per cent. of what we do for ourselves, or remember, but only 1 per cent. of what we hear, we remember. Various pictures, charts and models were shown at this time.

The teacher, however, was warned that these aids must not be looked on as a means of entertaining boys and girls.

Rev. Hatton, of Trinity Church, Napanee, illustrated methods of making the secretary's report more interesting. The use of charts in various forms, was suggested. He emphasized that we should bring to mind that our attendance does not mean a certain number are present, but should mean that there are certain individuals we are not reaching.

In her talk, "Temperance in the Sunday School," Mrs. B. F. Denison of Selby, stated that if the temperance cause is to be a success, our Sunday School programmes must be interesting, informative and educational. We who lead, must be fired with sufficient zeal to take an extra interest in the temperance work. Material may be found in various issues of the White Ribbon Tidings, and from other temperance sources. The National Temperance Study course which appears in our Sunday School periodicals for five consecutive weeks, each Fall, was also mentioned.

After a brief book talk, the convention adjourned for supper.

EVENING SESSION

The evening session opened with a worship service, conducted by Mr. Arnold Rogers of Grace United Ch., assisted by Miss Hazel Vanalstine and Miss Mary Knapp.

During the period devoted to Question Box, various problems were discussed. The question of how we are to find time for the work of social education, may be answered by specialization, rather than general activity.

In reply to another question, Rev. Littlewood said that we must not become so involved in the mechanics of our Sunday schools that we forget the goal.

For adult visual education, slides and movies which can be rented from the United Church Film Library, 299 Queen Street, W., Toronto, were suggested.

Mrs. Ralph Whitman of Newburgh demonstrated how different hymns may be presented with their stories, so that we may "appreciate the hymns we sing."

After a solo by Mrs. Grant Secretsmith, the reports of the Resolutions Committee was given by Mrs. Roxey Hawley.

Officers Elected

The officers were elected for the coming year and are as follows:
Past President—Mrs. Jas Haggerty.
President — Mr. Sam Baird.
Vice-Pres — Mr. Karld Secretsmith.
Secretary—Miss Mildred Parks.
Treasurer— Mr. Clare Secretsmith.
Children's Department — Miss Vivian Henderson.
Girls Department — Miss Roxey Hawley.
Boys' Department — Mr. Frank Freeman.
Young People—Mr. Gerald McCaul.
Adults — Mr. William Joyce.
Home Religion — Mrs. Wm. Joyce.
Teacher Training — Rev. W. R. Merrick.
Missions — Mrs. H. Empey.
Temperance—Rev. W. H. Clarke.
In the closing address of the evening, Rev. Littlewood told us that this convention is as a mountain top experience — we must now return to our schools with the inspiration gained. Often our work seems useless but God has said: "My word shall not return to me void" — or Christ's words: "If I be lifted up, I shall draw all men unto me." We have the privilege of preaching and teaching the gospel to mankind.

Rev. Parker, minister of the Convention Church, closed the convention with the benediction.

All work, even cotton spinning, is noble; work is alone noble.—Carlyle.

...overnment Assures ...abilized Prices ...r Farm Products

...rmings, (C.P.)—Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Agriculture Minister, said in Winnipeg on Friday last that minimum wheat prices of at least $1.25 per bushel were assured for the next two years and present high prices for bacon, ham, cheese, milk and cream would continue.

The federal agriculture minister was on his way to Kenosee Park, Sask., where he is scheduled to address a picnic-meeting of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture.

Policies of the federal government had assured stabilized prices for farm products, he said.

"The Canadian Government has contracted with Great Britain to take the entire surplus of bacon, ham, cheese and milk at higher prices than at any time during the war. Contracts for pacon and ham are extended to the end of 1948 and for milk until May 1st, 1948 with every prospect that both contracts can be renewed.

"The highest floor price any farm organization has asked for wheat over a period of years is $1.25 per bushel. It is absolutely certain that by some means at least $1.25 a bushel can be assured for the next four years."

DORLAND

Dorland, June 22. — The bright weather last Sunday was much appreciated by the United Church congregation, who were celebrating the anniversary of the laying of the corner stone of the church. Rev. W. R. Merrick, of Selby, delivered two helpful and interesting sermons. Music suitable to the occasion was furnished by the choir. The front of the church was tastefully decorated with baskets of beautiful peonies and snowballs, lending a colorful touch.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Cousins returned on Monday, after spending a few days with relatives in Galt.

Mr. James Bird was recently the victim of what might have been a serious accident while repairing his barn, which was damaged during a wind storm last winter. In some way one of the other men assisting with the work lost his grip on his hammer and it struck Mr. Bird just above his eye, inflicting a nasty cut.

Messrs. C. Rombough and L. Magee have also been repairing their barns.

Quite a number have hay cut, but, owing to cool and cloudy weather, it cures slowly. The heavy rain on Thursday was a decided set back to haying operations.

Mrs. Amey returned to her home at Switzerville on Thursday, after spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Gallagher, and her family.

The Woman's Association met at the home of Mrs. F. E. Foster on Wednesday afternoon.

SCHOOL AREA

Friends :—

Most of you are aware of the efforts being made to upset and prevent the reorganization of our school system in this area. Firstly, let me say that it has been no easy matter for your Board to conduct the business of the schools through these war years, with ever mounting costs and with labor and materials still continuing in great scarcity; the school properties have been neglected to a serious extent. May I ask you to remember that the School Board is a body elected by your votes under authority of the Public Schools Act, and charged with the financing, promotion and maintenance of our public school system. It should further be realized that this Board is under the guidance and direction of the Public School Inspector who meets with them, presenting recommendations and requests designed to improve grounds, buildings and equipment.

Through the war years the recommendations of Mr. Birkin, then our Inspector, were largely ignored as the Board saw no opportunity because of conditions, to carry out major repairs, and hoped that the close of hostilities would speedily result in a return to normalcy, when materials and labor would again be available at reasonable cost. You are all aware that this has proved a false hope and that we are now faced with the highest building cost in our history.

In 1944, Mr. H. H. Langford became our Inspector and after having made an inspection of our schools and finding most of them in a bad state of repair, he requested a meeting with the Board. Let me say, at this time, that we have found Mr. Langford most fair— he has told us candidly and in detail, the condition of each school and what was required. Mr. Langford has, at no time, dictated policy to the Board, but has pointed out that increased Government grants were not designed to relieve the taxpayer of his responsibility but to make possible an improved system of education, under better conditions and surroundings.

Realizing that delay could not always continue, the Board had several meetings with Mr. Langford at which we advanced the idea of centralization, rather than rebuild and refurnish at least, five schools. This suggestion was then further studied by the Board and by Mr. Langford.

The Board visited the new Central School at Flinton and saw it in action and obtained as much information on costs as possible. The Board is and is convinced that this system offers greater advantages to the children and would bring to them opportunities of instruction they never can receive under our present system. The fly in the ointment is too high building costs and the Board is not willing to place the costs of such a building on the taxpayer at this time.

But, this decision was only a card discarded for the time. The problem of school repair was still before the Board and, added to this, was the scarcity of teachers. The next move on the part of the Board was to obtain Mr. J. Tustin, an experienced contractor and carpenter, to look over all the schools in detail and to submit to the Board his estimate on costs of the necessary repairs on each school. Mr. Tustin's report stated that Hayburn, Sillsville and Sandhurst were not worth reconstruction.

It was at this point and upon this information, and under these conditions that the Board took action, closing Hayburn, Sandhurst and Sillsville schools, and providing transportation for the children of these sections to other points. It was also the intention of the Board to proceed with the repair of these buildings sufficiently to wait over the period of high building costs.

I hope, you of this school area, will realize that no public body's actions can or will please all. The Board believes this move will result in the greatest good to the greatest number and if a few who enjoyed a school at their doorstep are inconvenienced, we of the Board, regret it, but do not esteem their privilege of past years has any right to shackle the whole area.

As chairman of the Board of Education, I invite those who have taken it upon themselves to oppose in every way the efforts of the Board to place in operation the most feasible plan they could devise without incurring great additional costs at this time, to allow the plan a trial without further obstruction.

Thanking you,

W. L. HAIGHT,
Chairman of the Board.

PRESENTATION MADE TO CLOSE FAMILY AT CROYDON

On Friday evening, June 14, about sixty neighbors and friends of the Croydon community met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Close and presented them with an address and gifts. Owing to a recent bereavement in the family the evening was spent in a social way.

Following is the address:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Close,
and Anne and Jack:

We, your friends and neighbors of this community, feel privileged to spend one more evening with you before your departure to your new homes. You have lived so long in this community and have always more than fulfilled your duties in all our church and community activities, that we cannot help but feel a keen sense of loss when we think of you leaving our neighborhood. We trust your new home will not be so distant but that we may be able to visit you occasionally and we would like you to remember there is always a welcome awaiting you in our neighborhood. As a slight reminder of your friends, we would ask you, Mr. and Mrs. Close, to accept this floor lamp, trusting it will help to lighten your future path; and to you, Anne and Jack, we would like to present this chenille bedspread and may it help to revive your memories of old schoolmates and friends.

Mr. Close and Mr. Jeffs both thanked their friends for the beautiful gifts and expressed hope that in their new homes their friends would be able to visit them.

"For They are Jolly Good Fellows" was sung after which lunch was served, and all departed to their homes wishing Mr. and Mrs. Close and Mr. and Mrs. Jeffs the best of luck in finding a new home.

GOLDEN WEDDING OF MR. AND MRS. J. S. McALISTER AT KINGSFORD

A very delightful event took place on June 10th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. McAlister, Kingsford, when they celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. They were at home to their friends on the 9th and 10th, when many from Belleville, Shannonville, Napanee, and neighbors, called to offer their congratulations.

On Monday, a family re-union, consisting of their eleven children and families, four sisters and one brother of the bride, and two sisters and two brothers of the groom, was held. The happy couple received a great many cards, a cheque and purse of money, and several other lovely gifts. A delicious dinner was served to nearly seventy guests. The tables were set on the lawn, the bride and groom's table being centered with a basket of fifty yellow roses. The lovely wedding cake was made by a son, David, of Toronto. The celebration of fifty years ago, Mrs. Robert Pennell, of Brantford, and the groomsman, Mr. David G. McAlister, of Melfort, Sask., were present. After the bountiful repast, the Rev. Mr. Lougheed, of Shannonville, who with Mrs. Lougheed, was present, addressed the gathering, expressing great pleasure in attending such an event and saying how splendid it was to see such a large family able to attend their parents' golden wedding.

Mr. McAlister made a fitting reply expressing great pleasure and thankfulness in having all present, and thanked all who heped make the event such a successful one.

Many cameras clicked and social intercourse and music brought the lovely day to a close, all wishing the bride and groom many more days of happiness.

ONCE SHE WAS DEAF...

. . . now she thrills to the first words of her grandchild!

WHEN deafness first threatened to blight this modern grandmother's life . . . when she began to miss much that was said, and felt herself straining to hear . . . she was inclined to accept it as inevitable. After all, she was getting on in years . . .

The thought of wearing a heavy, cumbersome hearing aid—of being "wired for sound", as she put it—repelled her. Then, in near despair, she attended a demonstration of a different hearing aid. It was the Acousticon "Super-Power" Unipac*, world's smallest, lightest, most powerful hearing aid.

She wears an Acousticon now. And lives the rich, normal, active life she thought she had lost—without embarrassment, discomfort or even being conscious of the light, slim, compact Acousticon that made it possible.

SOUVENIR BOOK FROM HOLLAND FOR CANADIANS

Kingston. — Canadian troops who fought through Holland when that country was liberated by the First Canadian Army, are soon to receive copies of a fine souvenir book: "Holland and the Canadians", published in Amsterdam by the Canada-Netherlands Committee.

Designed as a gift from the people of Holland to "their Canadian liberators," the book is an outstanding contribution to the literary and photographic records of the past war. Some 42,000 copies have been allocated by the Committee for distribution in Canada and these have now been shipped from Ottawa to Army Public Relations Officers in each of the nine provinces. Unfortunately there are too few books available to provide copies for every Canadian soldier who saw service in Holland.

Soldiers who were in Holland and who desire a copy should communicate with the Headquarters of their Unit as soon as possible as a limited number of books will be sent to each Unit, the Active battalion of which served in Holland, for distribution.

In a foreword to the book the Dutch Committee pays high tribute to the Canadian Army which "won great glory by its courage and self-denial and filled the hearts of our people with everlasting gratitude."

Immediately after the liberation of the Netherlands, the introduction continues, a desire was felt to offer the Canadian Army a commemorative gift which could be kept by each individual recipient and which would give expression to the admiration and gratitude of the Dutch. It was felt that such a gift should take the form of a book which, under the title of "Holland and the Canadians" would give a picture of the country they had liberated.

The book shows the country before the war, some of its powerful prosperity with its fertile polders reclaimed during a struggle of centuries with the sea; the quiet cities with their seventeenth century splendour, side by side with modern activities, and the picturesque landscape with its broad motorways. Then there will be found pictures of the period of war and occupation including the bombardment of Rotterdam, the looting of the country, the raids, the gradual pauperization of the people and their starvation and suffering during the cold war winters, and also scenes of the underground resistance in the face of death.

With the heroic struggle for Nijmegen and Arnhem began the liberation of the country which, with the conquest of Zeeland and the eastern provinces, ultimately led to the capitulation of the enemy. Finally a number of pictures show the glorious entry and the enthusiastic reception of the Canadians throughout the country.

Altogether there are 150 splendid photographs in the 144 inch book, augmented by a text, to make up 72 full pages. Mr. J. Nokork, secretary of the Canada-Netherlands Committee, and Major Norman Phillips of Canadian Army Public Relations, collaborated on writing the text and captions, and many of the illustrations are of the Canadian Army photographs provided by the Film and Photo Unit Public Relations. To many readers this book will be a collector's item. It will play its part in strengthening the ties between the people of the Netherlands and those of Canada.

The song was "Asleep in the Deep" and the singer was well and truly deep when a friendly voice from the back of the hall assailed him: "Go easy, old chap! You'll scuttle yourself if you're not careful."

Man utilizes only about 25 per cent of the oxygen inhaled in a breath of air.

Question and Answer Column

Readers may direct their questions, giving their name and address and mentioning the name of this paper, to the Information Branch, WPTB, 490 Sussex Street, Ottawa, Ontario.

Q. The other day I went in to a local grocer to buy a tin of beans. The grocer told me he must also purchase a can of pumpkin to obtain the beans. The total price was 30c. I did not buy under these circumstances. Was I right?

A. Yes! definitely so. The type of purchase you mention is contrary to Board regulations and is classed as "conditional sale" which is prohibited. As you gave us the name of the merchant who attempted this "conditional sale" we shall refer the case immediately to our investigation department for checking.

Q. A friend of mine gave me her ration book to buy her four pounds of sugar. When I made the purchase I handed the book to the clerk and not until I arrived home did I discover he had removed four butter coupons and left the sugar coupons in the book. They refuse to do anything about it and I would like to know what I can do to recover my friend's butter coupons?

A. There is no way you could recover these coupons. We repeatedly urge all housewives to handle their ration books with care. In future you should remove the coupons yourself in the presence of the storekeeper and then there will be no difficulty. The clerk could not return four loose coupons as it would be illegal for your friend to use them for the purchase of butter and also illegal for any storekeeper to accept them.

Q. Recently I read in the paper that milk should be six cents a bottle in restaurants and "I was charged ten cents the very next day. Why are such prices allowed?

A. The restaurant which you mention in your letter has always charged ten cents per bottle for milk and they are still entitled to charge that price. Other restaurants have always sold milk at six cents a small bottle with meals and they must not charge more than that now.

BATH

Bath, June 22. — The members of the Masonic Lodge attended divine service in St. John's Church on Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. The rector, Rev. L. G. O. Walker, conducted the service, and welcomed the members. The choir rendered special music. Miss B. Walker was soloist. Mrs. Tourlow was organist.

A large crowd was present on Friday night at both halls. The proceeds were very gratifying.

The ladies of St. John's congregation entered to the choir of St. Andrew's Church, Kingston. Later, the choir assembled on the lawn at Dr. and Mrs. Guiziti's for a choral program of music. The supper was served in the Parish Hall on Wednesday evening.

JOHNNY USED TO HAVE FUN blowing dandelions, but the pay-off came later when he had to dig out Mr. Whiskers' offspring from the lawn. Now, thanks to C-I-L and chemistry, he has his fun without work. His dad simply eliminates the new dandelions with a new hormone spray called "Herbate", 2, 4-D.

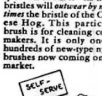
YES, DANDELIONS, plantain and many other weeds can be made to disappear, leaving the grass to take over unmolested. "Herbate" is one of the newest of new chemical products that make life more enjoyable ::: for grown-ups as well as small boys.

SERVING CANADIANS C-I-L THROUGH CHEMISTRY

Looking Ahead

Man-made bristles... Salting meet on the hoof... Weatherproof duds... Better fruit...

Here's a new brush that looks something like a question mark. But there's no question about it—its nylon bristles will outwear by many times the bristle of the Chinese Hog. This particular brush is for cleaning coffee-makers. It is only one of hundreds of new-type nylon brushes now coming on the market.



"All that they want" is the modern farmer's principle when it comes to providing salt for his livestock. With salt blocks or salt boxes in the stables, fields and pastures, animals now help themselves, free choice, and grow faster, sturdier because of it. It's just another of the advances in animal nutrition that mark our times.

Durable water repellents that won't come out in washing or dry cleaning will soon be common in many outer garments. Not only will these give protection against showers, but clothes won't spot as easily. These products, such as "Velag" from England and "Zelan" from the United States, are becoming well known to the people who are making textiles for your new clothes.

Fruit that falls prematurely means waste to the orchardist. But chemistry knows a way to keep "Limlit on the tree until it's ready to be picked. With a hormone spray called "Parmone", which strengthens the stem of the fruit, "windfalls" can be almost eliminated.

Further information on any of these products is obtainable by writing "Limlit on the tree" Advt. C-I-L, P.O. Box 10, Montreal, P.Q. 176-4-4

A MESSAGE FOR THOSE WHO NEED TRAINED WORKERS

I recommend to you
CANADA'S VETERANS . . .

To take full advantage of the great future possible for Canada, Canadian business will need men of courage and initiative — purposeful men of sound judgment. I know where such men may be found for I have worked with them, lived with them and fought with them. They are Canada's veterans and I am confident that the loyalty, initiative and unflagging determination which made them the best troops in the world will also be the qualities so essential in Canada's business life.

Many are already skilled tradesmen, and many have a sound foundation of skills on which wise employers may build. I know of no better man-power supply in the world than the men and women from Canada's armed forces.

H. D. G. Crerar,
General

CONSIDER THESE SERVICE SKILLS

ARMY TRADE FITTER
Only one of 216 army trades, the trade fitter was trained to make and fit new or reworked parts of guns, power trains, gearing units, valves and machine tools. He had to follow simple sketches and blueprints, and among other duties, make parts from metal castings, forgings and stock. A knowledge of the working properties of steel and non-ferrous metals was essential. He typifies thousands of veterans available to industry today.

ELECTRICAL ARTIFICER
In the navy, this man maintained electrical navigation equipment, lighting systems, telephone switches and was a specialist in many naval electrical installations. He was a skilled machinist, qualified for general machine work and for manufacturing and repairing electrical equipment. With on-the-job training he would be capable of house and industrial wiring.

STATIONARY ENGINEER — R.C.A.F.
His duties were the installation, operation, overhaul and repair of all heating equipment used by the R.C.A.F. He had a knowledge of steam fitting, valves, pumps of all types and underground and overhead distribution systems. He holds a current provincial first, second or third class certificate. This is only one of the many specialized trades in the R.C.A.F.

Federal Budget Promises Relief to Tax Payer

Changes to be Effective in 1947

In the Budget presented by Hon. J. L. Ilsley in the House of Commons last Thursday evening, some reductions in income tax were promised to be effective on January 1st, 1947.

Cut the flat corporation tax from 40 per cent to 30 per cent, for 1947.

Dropped the 20 per cent tax on excess profits over standard profits to 15 per cent.

Raised income tax exemptions for next year.

Doubled the Succession Duty tax.

Created a tax appeal board.

A new five-year tax agreement for the provinces on an optional basis.

And made the deduction for a child $100, plus family allowance, for which all taxpayers will apply, regardless of income.

Reduction in the tax rates will mean relief of between 50 and 75 per cent. to those immediately above the exemption limit and from 10 to 15 per cent for the majority of taxpayers. The exemptions are now upped to $750 for a single person and to $1,500 for married persons. All taxpayers with children eligible for family allowances will receive full amount of the allowance and in addition an exemption for each of these children. Dependents over the family allowance age call for an exemption of $3000.

Special tax exemptions for members of the armed forces and for the Merchant Marine are repeated for 1947.

In an effort to bring about a more equitable tax basis for married persons both of whom earn income, the 1942 concession given a husband to retain his married allowance while his wife earned income over the exempt limits is withdrawn and a husband is required to reduce his $1,500 exemption by the amount of his wife's income over $250, if her income is less than $750. This is also designed to get married women back into the home and off the labor market.

THE EXEMPTIONS

1. For 1947 and subsequent taxation years the following deductions from income are to be allowed:

(a) $1500 in the case of married persons and persons allowed a deduction equivalent to that of a married person and $750 in the case of all other persons;

(b) $300 in the case of dependents not eligible for family allowances, 100 in the case of children eligible for family allowances and amounts not exceeding $300 contributed to the support of partial dependents;

2. That for the 1947 and subsequent taxation years the deduction of $1500 from the income of a married person be reduced

(a) Where the spouse has an income of more than $250 and less than $750 by the amount by which the spouse's income is more than $250 or,

(b) Where the spouse has an income in excess of $750 by the amount by which the spouse's income exceeds $750

3. That in respect of income earned after December 31, 1946, the ordinary income tax rate for corporation income be increased from 18 per cent. to 30 per cent and from 20 per cent to 32 per cent in a case where a company and its subsidiaries file a consolidated return.

4. That the exemption of investment income for purposes of the 4 per cent tax on investment income be increased for the 1947 and subsequent taxation years from $1500 to $1800.

Groups Seek Information On Meat Coupon Plan

The contribution of almost 89,000 valid meat coupons up to the end of May is tangible proof of the widespread desire of Canadians to share with the hungry peoples of the world. But while these voluntary donations toward overseas meat shipments are increasing steadily, the Food Information Committee at Ottawa finds that there are still many interested people not clearly informed about how to contribute surplus meat coupons.

One recent letter received by the Food Information Committee read in part: "Our women's association of the United Church has appointed me to collect meat coupons. The instructions speak of 'Any organization authorized to make collections under the War Charities Act.' What makes it an authorized organization? I am willing to assist in collecting coupons but want to do so in the correct way. How do I go about it?

In answer to the questions raised in this and numerous other enquiries, the committee points out that any group who, during the war, raised funds for war charities was registered under the War Charities Act. All such groups who wish to do so may appoint coupon custodians. In addition, church organizations, whether registered under the War Charities Act or not, many appoint custodians and undertake the collection of meat coupons. The number of custodians is limited to three members of a group. When custodians are named an application for their registration, signed by an officer of the group, should be forwarded to the Local Ration Board office (addresses are listed in local telephone directories). The Ration Board then supplies the necessary identification cards.

Coupons or meat tokens may be collected at meetings, by house to house canvass or in other ways. Receipts are issued by the Ration Board for coupons turned in by custodians.

Individuals may, where convenient, take their surplus coupons to the Ration Board office.

The Food Information Committee at Ottawa emphasizes the fact that longer will not wait, and meat coupon saved and donated towards larger overseas meat shipments is a voluntary contribution from the already filled Canadian cupboards to a European larder which is virtually bare.

Corner Stone Laid For New Church at Yarker

Masonic Lodge Officials Take Part in Impressive Ceremony

Tuesday, June 25th, was an eventful day for Yarker, when Most Worthy Brother W. S. Herrington, K.C., of Union Lodge No. 99, Napanee, laid the cornerstone of the new United Church. Masons numbering about 100 from lodges from Napanee, Trenton, Lindsay, Harrowsmith, Kingston and Hamilton, gathered in the United Church Hall and marched to the site of the new church.

Following the singing of an opening hymn "Genius of Masonry Descend", the ceremonies of depositing the scroll and the phial of coins, among which were two coins given by Mr. Harvey Hicks, a veteran of the First World War, took place. Mr. Kenneth Freeman made the coin box. A second hymn, "All People that on Earth do Dwell," was sung, after which an address by Rev. A. J. Wilson the editor of The United Church Observer, was given. In his address Dr. Wilson traced the religious history of the region and told his listeners that they were inheritors of a great tradition. "There is evidence," he said, "that the faith of our fathers is living still, in spite of fire, dungeon and sword."

Greetings from the Bay of Quinte Conference were brought by the President, Rev. James Beckel, of Elgin, and a prayer was offered by Rev. W. J. Johnston, D.D., of Toronto Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge.

A brief address was given by Rev. W. G. Fletcher, pastor. The new church, taking the place of the church which was destroyed by fire, early years ago, is being erected on a new site, formerly owned by the Benjamin Wheeler estate.

After the benediction and the singing of the National Anthem, lunch was served by the ladies in the following who took part in the ceremonies: W. Bro. Harry Watson, Harrowsmith, grand treasurer; Rt. PROVINCIAL - DOMINION RELATIONS

In presenting the budget, last Thursday, Hon. J. L. Ilsley spent a good deal of time on Provincial-Dominion relations. Mr. Ilsley pointed out that the whole fiscal structure of the nation was in danger unless some definite agreement was arrived at in connection with the fields of taxation. Having failed to make an agreement with the Provinces as a whole, largely because of the opposition of the two wealthiest provinces in the Dominion, the Government now proposes to make an agreement with any Province which will accept the terms laid down. The plan calls for a five-year trial of the scheme. Originally, the plan was for three years: now it has been set at five years. The reason for the change to the five years is to give provinces which may delay accepting the plan, time enough.

The plan, outlined by Mr. Ilsley in brief, is as follows:

"(1) The agreeing provinces would agree not to levy any taxes on personal income nor permit their municipalities to do so.

"(2) An agreeing province would undertake to levy a five per cent. tax on net corporate income within the province and would also agree on behalf of itself and its municipalities to impose no other corporation tax or tax on corporations, except corporations engaged in mining or logging operations. The province would also agree to discontinue the special five per cent. tax mentioned above at such time as all provinces had made a tax agreement with the Dominion.

"(3) For the duration of the agreement also an agreeing province would either undertake not to levy succession duties at all or, if it wished to continue to do so, it would agree to accept an appropriate reduction in its annual payments due from the Dominion.

"In return, the agreeing provinces would receive annual payments from the Dominion which in no case would be less than that province's annual receipts under its wartime tax agreement — and for no province would they be less than $2,000,000'."

It is to be hoped that this proposal will be given earnest and sympathetic consideration by the Central Provinces. There can be no doubt but there is a danger in overcentralizing all taxation. This, Premier Drew has pointed out time and time again. Nevertheless, some sort of an agreement, as to who is to do the taxing and what fields are to be occupied by the Provinces and Dominion, respectively, is essential, if the Taxpayer is to survive. The Dominion proposal it worth a try, and any way, it is only for five years. Premier Drew will be in a rather difficult position, should all the other Provinces sign Ontario, accept the plan. It would be a great thing for this banner province to give the lead, even if the plan is not all that we would like.

BUDGETING FOR PEACE

Mr. Ilsley's Budget is a cautious one. It promises relief from taxation—but not this year. The reason for delaying the tax reductions is the large deficit that will face the Government at the close of the present fiscal year.

The encouraging feature of the income tax reductions is that they have to do almost altogether with people in the low salary brackets. The exemption has been raised from$660 to $750 for single persons, and from $1,200 to $1,500 for married persons. This, it is estimated, will relieve over half a million people from income taxes, completely. Then, too, those who are just slightly above the $750 or $1500 respectively, will not have to pay a tax which will reduce their income below those amounts. From this angle, then, the Government has done well. It has begun at the right end of the economic ladder, and will receive the gratitude of thousands of small salaried people, who are having a tough time to make ends meet.

Married couples who both work, will, in future, be taxed as single people. During the war, this regulation was relaxed, but now it is re-imposed. The result of this will be that married couples who work, will find their income taxed increased.

The corporation and excess profit tax have been slightly reduced. The reduction is a modest one. The concession to the corporations can hardly be called over-generous. There can be no fault found with this. There can be no doubt but that the Government designed the proposed revision to give the greatest relief to the small salaried people, which is as it should be.

The people will, we are sure, in all walks of life, admit the wisdom of the course which Mr. Ilsley is following. In the first place, reductions are small and from the taxes of those most needing them. There is a great amount of money in circulation. More people have more money than ever before in our history. There is, on the other hand, still a shortage of purchasable goods. Under such conditions there is always the danger of inflation, as purchaser bids against purchaser for goods. To have made drastic reductions in taxes would have thrown still more money into the purchasing power of the public, and intensified the inflationary tendency. In these transitional days, it is quite necessary, if the change-over from a wartime economy to a peace economy, is to be made with undue disturbance, that the tax structure adjustments be made gradually and progressively.

In presenting the budget in its present form, Mr. Ilsley and his advisers have done a good job, both for the immediate situation and as part of a long-term policy.

AN INTERESTING VISITOR

Writing of interesting personalities in public life in Great Britain, Peter Howard says of Anthony Eden: "Whether Mr. Anthony Eden was born in neatly-pressed trousers has never yet been disclosed. Certainly, it is hard to imagine him otherwise than perfectly garbed and garnished." Coming to Canada, Mr. Eden has upheld his reputation, not only as a debonair gentleman but as a brilliant and consecrated leader. Of his character, Mr. Howard says: "He was an untidy boy, and drove his father into tantrums with the objects he scattered around the house and gardens. It was hard to get him out-of-doors, as he preferred sitting inside, reading history and sticking his large collection of stamps into albums. He was a brigade major at twenty-two years of age, in the First World War. Then went to Christ Church, Oxford: specialized in Oriental languages. He can give an after-dinner speech even yet, in Persian. He was Foreign Secretary under Chamberlain, and broke with him over his policy of appeasement. He is a man of gifts and courage, and ability. He will be heard from in the future political life of Great Britain. When he received his Doctor's Degree at Toronto University, he told the students that living for the land is as important as dying for it.' That is something that our youth must learn. If the world is to be saved from chaos the men and the women who showed such devotion and courage during the war, must give those same qualities to the solving of the nation's peacetime problems. Mr. Eden is himself doing what he preaches. He is giving his talents to his country—the best he possesses."

The visit of Mr. Eden to this country and his words of wisdom and advice to the students, should go a long way to stimulate patriotism and the ideals of service in the youth of our land.

THE PRESIDENT'S APPEAL

The President of The United States, Harry S. Truman, is making great use of the radio in appealing to the people. A few weeks ago, when the whole business of the nation was tied up because of a railroad strike, he went on the air and told the whole story to the people, and made his case so well, that the strike ended and the President received almost universal support for his courage.

Last Saturday night, the President again went to the people. He appealed over the heads of Congress and Senate. This time, it was not the workers he was condemning, but the big business interests. These interests are out to make fabulous sums out of the shortage of goods and the consumer demand. The price controls in the States, while they have not been so effective as they have been in this country, have, nevertheless, kept prices reasonably within bounds. Now that the war is over, there is great pressure, particularly by the manufacturers, to have these removed. The price control regulations came to an end, over there, on Sunday midnight. The Government was trying to get a new Control Bill enacted, but the stalling practice irked the President, who told the people on Saturday that, four times he had asked Congress to speed up legislation. Well, they did not take his advice, but at the very last second, presented him with a bill to sign. The President refused to sign it. The reason for so doing, he told the people, was that the Bill was not a Control Bill, at all. He said that if he signed it, prices would jump at once. Rents would go up, the price of cars would be increased by $250 and building materials by 20 per cent.

The President pointed out that following the war, there had been grave unrest due to strikes for wage adjustments. Should the Bill become law, this struggle, he said, would begin all over again. Prices and wages would chase one another until disaster overtook the country.

What will happen now, in the States, is not known at this time of writing. But we rather suspect that the President's direct appeal to the people will arouse them to the necessity of taking a hand in the matter. The common people always suffer by inflation and now that they know the truth, the Representatives in Congress and Senate will, in all likelihood hear from the voters, and legislation more in accord with the will of the people, be framed.

The radio provides a great medium for direct appeal to the people. The United States is fortunate in having a President who it not afraid to use it, on occasion.

A-BOMB OVENS HARNESSED FOR USE IN PEACE

Oak Ridge, Tenn. (A.P.) — The great, shielded ovens that can make atom bomb ingredients are pioneering today in a new job — producing materials earmarked to serve science, medicine and industry in peacetime.

The United States Army's Manhattan Engineer District, creators of the world's deadliest weapon, disclosed the production envisions "nation-wide distribution" of radio-active substances made in the same furnaces that helped produce the atom bomb.

The great ovens, now producing limited quantities of these humanitarian by-products of atomic energy, are being geared for the Army's objective of "large scale" availability of products which they declared "may well have far-reaching importance in peace-time research in physics, chemistry, metallurgy and the medical sciences."

Meanwhile, the Army announced that hospitals, universities, and similar institutions or groups could make immediate application for small quantities of materials available.

A "reasonable charge" will be made to "cover the out-of-pocket" costs of the United States, the announcement said.

The announcement said that while present production would be increased as rapidly as possible "it will probably be impossible to meet all the demands of the country until additional facilities are built especially for radio-active substance production. This is not contemplated in the immediate future."

The bulletin said approximately 100 different radio-active substances — materials that give off invisible rays — would be available "in varying quantities," from the atom bomb project, the War Department's statement said.

"They will be used in two important ways.

"First as tracer atoms or 'tracers' for following the course of, atoms in chemical, biological and technical processes.

The radio-active materials being produced by the bomb makers are known as "radio-isotopes"—that is, they are radio-active forms of common and rare elements produced in the atom pile by the action of atomic particles.

The reaction they can be used as "tracers" in various scientific processes is that they can be mixed with the stable form of their own element and employed to trace the whereabouts of that element. The rays given off by the radio-active isotopes can be detected by sensitive instruments even when the material is coursing through the human body.

Their role as possible therapeutic agents in the treatment of certain diseases stems from the fact that they emit powerful rays which may prove to have a beneficial effect on diseased tissue.

Radium is an example of a radio-active substance that occurs in nature. Uranium is not produced in the atomic piles.

Before the war, various common elements, such as phosphorus and iodine, were made radio-active by being bombarded with high-speed atomic particles in an instrument called the "cyclotron" — or atom-smasher — but the quantities produced are extremely small.

Radio-active phosphorous already has been used in the treatment of leukemia, and radio-active iodine has been employed against disease of the thyroid gland.

But Manhattan scientists declare that the small quantities of isotopes produced by cyclotrons before the war limited the scope of research done and the number of persons using radio-isotopes.

The A-bomb uranium ovens, they say, "far outdistance" the cyclotron in production of certain elements; and, in the case of radio-active carbons, an important research weapon, they said the chain-reacting uranium atom pile can be made "equivalent in production to hundreds of cyclotrons."

The Army's announcement only hinted at possibilities of employing radio-active substances as aids to industry, but it is well-known that such substances have been used to trace new oil pools, to study the "cracking" of petroleum, and to follow the course of gases through intricate systems.

Radio-active sulphur, another of the pile's products, conceivably may be used to trace the course of "sulfa" or nilamide" drugs through the human body, Army scientists declared.

They said radio-active carbon "is expected to give great impetus to the study of all organic processes including the mechanism and growth of normal and abnormal tissues and all plant and animal functions."

No 'Silk Curtain' Rings British Zone

BY CHARLES ARNOT
B.U.P. Correspondent

If the British are maintaining a secret German army in their occupation zone of Germany, the headquarters must be in Shangri La.

That, correspondents traversed the zone up and down, back and forth, for thousands of miles and all the evidence which could be uncovered supports the belief that the Wehrmacht, the battle-axe of Prussian militarism have been smashed in the British zone just as completely as anywhere else in Germany.

While there is every indication that the German armed forces have been smashed, there was evidence of a condition which many British officers said they did not regard as healthy and which may have given rise to the charges.

This is the fact that British occupation authorities still retain 325 labor service units containing more than 107,000 former German fighting men who are forbidden to drill or call arms but who still salute and call themselves "soldiers."

There are also, as British officers frankly say, too many Germans in uniforms still on the streets. They no longer wear rank or insignia but the field gray is a reminder of Adolf Hitler's armies.

However, combing the British zone from Schleswig to the Ruhr this correspondent could find not even remnants of anything which might be called an operational German fighting force.

So completely have the German forces been dismantled and their weapons destroyed that competent military authorities estimate that it would take five to ten years for the Germans to put even a skeleton fighting force into the field.

Nor was there any evidence of a "silken curtain' or any other kind of curtain drawn around the British zone.

Regarding the matter of Germans still wearing uniforms, a British major in Hamburg about to return home for discharge said:

"To the highly uniform-conscious and uniform-loving German population the mere presence of uniformed Germans is a constant reminder of the victory they might have been, Germany's and the chance that it might come again."

Many British officers believe that the German labor units have served their purpose as an expedient to provide needed skilled labor and should now be disbanded.

A British major in charge of 20 work groups in Schleswig-Holstein said it was a mistake to retain the work groups long.

"They are no good as workers any more," he added. "All they do is complain."

British officers told me that there was evidence that the work camps have become disturbing and potentially dangerous centres of Nazi propaganda, black-marketing and militarism.

Some of the work group men openly express the hope that the day may soon come when they can join the British and Americans in fighting the Russians. However, at none of the camps did I find any evidence of military training, drilling, or weapons.

STAMPS THAT COMMEMORATE EVENTS

Six of the twelve stamps issued in Canada on June 1st, 1935, showed the portrait of the late King George V. These were the 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 8 cent stamps. The remainder of the set are pictorias.

The other values are 50 cent deep violet, showing Parliament Buildings, Victoria, British Columbia; the bright blue one dollar stamp depicts the Jubilee Monument, Quebec; the remaining value being a 6 cent red-brown air-mail with the figure of Daedalus, of Greek mythology.

The carmine 10 cent stamp honors the men of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Central in the design is a "Mountie" sitting astride a bay horse, with a left-speed able bodied, and between the ages of 18 and 40 years, nor unless he be able to read and write either the French or English language.

This comparatively small Force maintains law and order over an area larger than many European countries, helping thereby in the peaceful development of the North West. Wrong-doers came to fear them, as they soon learned that the "Mounties" always "got their man." Their ability, efficiency, tact and fairness won for them worldwide fame.

All members were deeply appreciative of the honor conferred by a notice in the Canada Gazette in 1904, which read, "His Majesty the King has been graciously pleased to confer the title of 'Royal' upon the North West Mounted Police Force."

The passage of the years brought increasing responsibilities, and the annual report for 1920 records the amalgamation of the Force, exercise jurisdiction over the whole of Canada. Thus the R.N.W.M.P. Force became the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Force.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 7TH, 1946

"THE LAW IN JESUS' DAY"

Text: Deuteronomy 6: 4-9. Matthew 5: 17-19. Mark 10: 17-22.

The passage with which this week's lesson begins is perhaps, looked on by the Jewish people as the most important section of the Old Testament. They call it the "Shema", from the Hebrew word meaning "Hear", with which the passage begins. It is used as a call to worship in the Jewish synagogue. Every Jew knows it by heart. The burden of the passage is that there God is one God and He should be loved with "all thy heart and all thy soul and all thy might." Each word "one" in contrast to the polytheism of the other peoples. He should be loved with every ounce of one's being with the inmost passion, and with every exercise of the will. Given that love, the love of one's fellow man follows, as Jesus pointed out, as a natural corollary, the two great passions founding the basis for world brotherhood.

The law in Jesus' day had a hard and fast grip on men's allegiance. To obey the law was to win God's approval, the law being the accumulation of legalistic enactments that, based on the decalogue, had accumulated through the years. Jesus fulfilled the law. That is to say, Jesus completed it. Already men were beginning to say that Jesus was destroying the law, that he was a rebel, and a revolutionary. He went out of his way to point out not only that he was keeping the law, but that he was the completion, or fulfilment of it. In the personality of Jesus all that was implied in the Jewish law was made real. Jesus did not belittle law, as a matter of fact he upheld it, and declared that he would not pass away until everything proclaimed by the law had been brought about.

We chafe under our laws. Especially do we rebel against wear time restrictions. But in an ordered society law must be upheld, and supported. The present wave of lawlessness, due, no doubt, to the aftermath of war, will be halted when men of goodwill everywhere recognize the necessity for obedience to constituted authority. Of course in Jesus' day the laws had the sanction of religion. They were ecclesiastical enactments. In our time religious regulations have little or no authority behind them. We pride ourselves on our religious freedom, which, oftener than not, means irreligion or at least lack of obedience to any religious obligation.

Jesus knew that the Jewish laws were a burden to men then and yet he urged obedience to the fundamental laws. In his own life he was obedient to the inner light from God, obedient to that nothing else mattered. That is the attitude a christian should cultivate, an attitude of obedience to the best we know in what Kant would call the Divine "ought". When a person does always the things that please God he has attained his spiritual majority.

The final section of the lesson is the well known passage about the young man who asked Jesus what he should do to attain eternal life. Jesus outlines, in brief, the law. You should keep the commandments, especially don't steal, don't abuse the personality of another, don't lie, don't defraud, and pay due respect to your elders. All these, said the young man, I have kept from my youth. Then Jesus told him, to sell what he had and give it to the poor. This proved too hard a demand. Jesus, of course, knew that there are us who would be willing to sell everything we have and give it to the poor. How many are engaged a bit to give to the recent clothing drive. How many are going light on food so that others, in Europe may not starve? That is the test. Jesus was no impossible idealist. He is quite one thing to talk about the "one thing necessary": it is quite something else to do the things we know we ought ourselves to do.

We must get the right attitude to laws and regulations, if this old world is to be saved from destruction. The world needs a changing heart, the kind of change Jesus demands and can bring about. If the spirit of man is sound, christian, and christlike, there will be no need to fear the atomic bomb.

MARLBANK

PRESENTATION TO MARLBANK COUPLE

Marlbank, July 1. — On Monday evening last over fifty friends and neighbors gathered in the community hall to present Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Burd with gifts, prior to their departure to their new home in Deseronto. Community singing was enjoyed, led by Rev. W. H. Baugh, until the guests of honor arrived. On their entering the hall they were loudly applauded and welcomed. Several duets were well rendered by Mrs. J. F. Work and Mrs. Bert Asselstine, and Mrs. Thos. McBurn and A. C. McConnell, and a contest was much enjoyed, the prize being won by Miss Edna Marlin. The guests of the evening were invited to the platform by Mrs. W. C. Marlin, President of the W. Food Conservation At Church Teas Urged by W.A. Member

Women in all parts of Canada are fully alive to the urgency of the Dominion's 'Save Food' campaign. This is apparent from the many and varied inquiries received in the daily mail of the Food Information Committee at Ottawa.

Among recent letters addressed to the Committee was one from a member of a women's church association, who wrote in part: "Our group of women still insist on serving sandwiches, cookies and iced cake at bimonthly meetings. The monthly fee of fifty cents, I am sure would be as willingly be paid and the social spirit be preserved if one piece of bread, a cookie or piece of cake were served. Our women say, 'Well, all these other churches do it. It the rest stopped, so would we.' Perhaps you can do something to appeal to these women — something across the Dominion it would be well worth while."

That is only one of numerous letters from women who feel that there should be greater food conservation at teas and club meetings — women who, whenever they eat land wherever they go, wish to share with the hungry. "Many women have probably never thought of the refreshments served at their meetings in terms of the wheat which is so desperately needed to feed the famine-areas, or they would willingly reduce those refreshments," say the Food Information Committee. "Those two or three sandwiches and those two small pieces of cake usually eaten by each one of a group of fifty people represents approximately four-and-a-half pounds of flour and those four-and-a-half pounds of flour could provide the daily bread ration of twelve hungry Greeks."

Women's organizations across Canada can make a worthwhile contribution to this country's "Save Food" campaign, the committee points out, by adopting methods which, rather than lose, in friendliness, by this sharing with the hungry.

Wives Bureau, London Proud of Record

London. — Movement to Canada of 31,000 brides of Canadian servicemen with 8,000 children has been carefully handled that 'not one fatality from illness or accident has occurred on official duty overseas.

Col. V. N. Gill, director of the Canadian Wives Bureau in London, said he was particularly proud of this record — especially in view of the reported attacks of fever carried aboard a United States army transport.

"I cannot understand why this should have happened," he said, adding that the Canadian Army had not found it necessary to refuse to transport babies under the age of six months as ruled by the United States War Department in Washington.

"On the other hand, we do not make a practice of transporting babies under four months and none are moved unless recommended by doctors who examine them beforehand."

Every possible precaution was taken to protect the infants from accident or illness during the voyage, Col. Gill said. No children were allowed to travel in ships considered unsuitable, such as the Ile de France and the Lady Rodney which have steep companionways and narrow alleys.

Because mothers with babies are not allowed aboard certain ships, the Wives Bureau received numerous complaints from mothers that wives without children have been sent ahead of them. Although all brides were handled on a priority basis, first consideration was given to the types of ship available.

One recent example was the wife of a Canadian serviceman with six children for whom six lowers and one cot had to be found, necessitating a de'ayed sailing.

Still in Britain awaiting transportation to Canada are 30,000 mothers and children and on the continent there are 6,000 and 7,000.

Hello Homemakers! Many folks tell us, "Desserts are my worst problem." It is no wonder with fruit scarce ,sugar low in supply and brittle mat and cornstarch. But if women with electric and wood stoves have difficulty thinking up desserts, the two-element-plate cooks are really up against it. They have to eliminate all those tempting oven-baked puddings and rely on top stove desserts exclusively.

Yet when you stop to think seriously about it and study cook books you discover that the situation is not hopeless after all. Puddings, good ones too, can be made on top of the electric plate.

Today we list a number of dessert ideas, hot and cold, off the top elements. Add these to the ones you have already collected and your dessert problem with disappear.

DESSERTS FOR TWO - ELEMENT STOVE DINNERS

1. For a hot, hearty dessert, make double boiler cottage pudding, cooking vegetables or other food in the boiling water underneath. Lift over puddings may also be heated in double boiler at the same time other foods are being cooked.
2. Steam batter puddings cook more quickly in individual greased custard cups than casseroles. If you have not a steamer, put cover on puddings in condensed soup tins, cover with wax paper and set in a saucepan containing two inches of water and steam. To reheat, cut two servings of and heat in a sieve. Serve with top milk.
3. Stew rhubarb, add a few raisins for variety. Serve and let cool while cooking first course. For example: Maple Rennet, Honey Junket, Chocolate Meringue Custard, Rhubarb Custard and other flavoured custards, Cottage Cheese Pudding, Bread and Milk Pudding, Barley Pudding, Cornmeal Pudding, Lemon Rice Pudding, Vanilla Crumb Pudding and Farina Pudding.
5. Quick Fruit Shortcake: Drain juice from leftover canned fruit: Thicken with cornstarch. 1 teaspoon in one tablespoon of cold water for half-cup juice. Add fruit and heat slightly. Pour over slices of sponge cake (bought) or drop cakes.
6. Top-of-stove scones may be made successfully to serve with stewed prunes, figs or rhubarb.
7. Cook rice, serve hot with canned fruit first time, with the remainder make a rice custard next day. Make custard in double-boiler, add rice, wheat and pour into serving dishes.
8. Bavarian sponges require a small amount of heat. The gelatine may be dissolved in a dipper over the tea kettle and the dessert finished at the kitchen table, according to recipe.
9. Pancakes require a short cooking time. Serve with synthetic fruit syrup or raisin sauce when sugar quota is low.
10. Press squares of bread into greased muffin tins and place over an element turned medium Toast three minutes. Fill these shells as directed.
11. Fruit dumplings can be made on top of stove this way: Cook fruit in a little syrup. Add one beaten egg, one teaspoon sugar and enough milk to moisten to one cup prepared biscuit mix. Drop by spoonfuls on top of simmering fruit and juice. Cover and let simmer, without removing lid for fifteen minutes. The wide saucepan so dumplings will not be crowded.

Double - Boiler Cottage Pudding

One cup sifted pastry flour, one and a half teaspoons baking powder, one-eighth teaspoon salt, three tablespoons soft shortening or butter, half-teaspoon vanilla, one-third cup of sugar, one egg well-beaten, half-cup milk, half-cup jam or sweetened fresh or canned fruit, if desired.

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cream shortening or butter and add vanilla and then sugar gradually. Add beaten egg and then mixture is light and fluffy. Add dry ingredients alternately with milk. Grease thoroughly top part of double boiler and one-half quart capacity. Put in jam or fruit. Pour batter over jam or fruit. Cover and place over boiling water in bottom part of double boiler. Cook for one and one-half hours or until pudding is firm on top. Keep water boiling steadily. Turn out on platter with pudding sauce or cream. Yield: four to six servings.

NOTE: If pudding is made without jam or fruit, turn out and garnish with stewed prunes or serve with a fruit or any desired pudding sauce.

Top-Of-The-Stove Scones

One egg, one-third cup of milk, three tablespoons mild-flavored fat, melted, one and one-half cups sifted flour, three tablespoons of baking- powder, half-teaspoon of salt, one tablespoons sugar.

Beat eggs, add milk and melted fat. Mix and sift ingredients and add to the milk mixture mixture is very soft. Turn on to a floured board and pat out half-inch thick. Cut in triangles. Heat frying pan and cover (preferably cast iron pan) until very hot. Put scones in frying pan, cover and reduce the heat. Cook until well puffed and almost cooked, about fifteen minutes. Turn scones and brown slightly on other side. Serve hot like tea biscuits. Be sure to keep heat as low as possible during cooking, to avoid burning. Yield: four large and eight small scones.

Lights Go On Again At Darwin, Australia

The street lights of Darwin, Australia, shone again this month for the first time since early in 1941.

Darwin lights first went out on December 11th, 1941, when the ultra-wild alert sounded only three days after the declaration of war with Japan. There were other alerts, but no real attack until February, 1942. In that raid there were 850 casualties including 243 dead. Fourteen ships were sunk or damaged, including the United States destroyer Peary and American transport and supply ships. This time the blackout was enforced and street lights disconnected.

During the war against Japan, Darwin was the headquarters and the site of many air strips and concentrations of American and Australian troops waiting for a Japanese invasion which never took place. Later British and Dutch pilots also used the area for a base from which to strike back at the Japanese.

An American racketeer says he has never believed in shooting. His motto is evidently "Spare the rod."

In Loving Memory

WEESE — In fondest remembrance of a dear son and brother, Eddie Weese, who departed from us June 24th, 1943.

Time may heal the broken-hearted,
Tears may make the wound less sore,
But it cannot fill the longing
For the loved one gone before.

Who shall say the grief is lessened,
Though the smile may hide the tears;
Memories keep the wound still open
Despite the passing of the years.

Fondly remembered and sadly missed,

She had also been active in the women's organizations of the church as long as her health permitted.

She is survived by one sister, Miss Christina, who with her niece, Miss Edna Hull, resided with her. She was predeceased by two sisters, Mrs. Vanluven and Mrs. Hull, and by three brothers, J. N. Sanderson, Northport, William J. Sanderson, Detroit and Isaiah Sanderson, Toronto.

Her funeral was conducted at her late home on Saturday, by Rev. Noble Hatton, Trinity Church, in the absence of her minister, Rev. C. D. McLellan. Interment was made at Riverview Cemetery.

TYENDINAGA EAST W. I.

Mrs. Morey opened her home to the Tyendinaga East Women's Institute on June 14, when the Mr. Pleasant pioneer ladies were their guests. The meeting was well attended by members and visitors. The president presided, opening the meeting by all singing the Ode and repeating the Lord's Prayer. The minutes and the correspondence were read by the secretary. Mrs. Provins spoke of several points stressed at the district annual convention. She also mentioned the Clothing Drive. Mrs. Percy Kimmerly gave up-to-date current events. Mrs. Garnet Dupre, president of Pioneer branch, had charge of the programme, which opened with community singing, followed by a humorous reading by Mrs. C. Nugent. Mrs. F. Henderson gave an excellent paper on cancer. Mrs. Hudson gave a demonstration with wool and exhibited several articles made from scraps of woolen yarn. Mrs. Rosa Oliver played a piano solo and Mrs. F. Stafford read a splendid paper on Home. Mrs. Dupre started Lovely Pared which proved very amusing, with Mrs. Hunter winning the dainty prize. Mrs. Morley Oliver read a poem and Mrs. A. Sexsmith read an interesting paper on Institute and Institute members. Mrs. F. Henderson and Mrs. Dupre sang a duet. Mrs. Dafoe gave a reading on advertising an auction sale. Mrs. Hart conducted an animal contest, Mrs. Frank Thompson winning the prize. Mrs. C. Russell gave a demonstration of making a fruit salad, which was served with the dainty lunch later.

Mrs. Hutchinson thanked the Pioneer ladies for their splendid program and moved a vote of thanks to Mrs. Morey and Mrs. Ross Oliver ably read.

An enjoyable afternoon was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

THE ONE O'CLOCK GUN

A familiar feature of Edinburgh, Scotland before the war, has lately returned—the one o'clock time gun fired from the Castle. "The gun fascinated the youngsters—seeing the flash of it from Princess Street and the puff of smoke several seconds before the bang came," said Scott Kennedy in "Britain To-day."

"Of course, a lot of visitors used to be taken unawares and clutched each other in the sudden shock. Citizens in the know merely glanced at their watches to check up on the time."

Canadian Reporter ON U.S.S. 'APPALACHIAN' Sends Dispatches

BY HEC STEWART

Aboard U.S.S. Appalachian, June23 (Delayed)—It is one known how much the atom bomb tests at Bikini are going to cost the United States Government, but there have been unofficial estimates ranging up as high as $500,000,000.

Vice Admiral W.N.P. Blandy, Commander of Joint Task Force One, who should know as much as anyone about the logistics of the operation, today issued his estimate. The overall cost, exclusive of the cost of the two atomic bombs to be dropped at Bikini, should be less than that of one new capital ship. And capital ships today, taking the new American Battleship Iowa as an example, run into the neighborhood of $110,000,000.

Original cost of the 77 target vessels available for the tests is estimated at approximately $400,000,000, but logistic experts here point out that these ships are now obsolete and scarcely worth their weight in scrap at the current average price of 10 per ton, even if you could sell them as scrap, which you can't. Scrap metal men aren't interested at that price because it's too costly to demolish solid ships. Instead—all are expected to be demolished in the tests and a goodly number will sail back to Pearl Harbor or the United States under their own power when the operation is completed.

In any event the tests are expected to reveal information that may result in the future saving of many ships, many lives, and many millions of dollars — a potent argument to shush the economy-minded critics.

SOME CANADIANS ON BOARD Aboard the U. S. S. Appalachian, June 24. One of the pleasant daily routines aboard this ship, as we head for the atom bomb tests at Bikini, is the morning interview between correspondents and members of the crew from all the respective States of the Union. I usually sit in, hoping against hope that I'll run into a Canadian, but I'm now coming to the conclusion that of the more than 650 personnel making up crew and passengers I'm the only Canuck among the lot.

To-day, however, it met up with one member of the crew and one "Crossroads" staff officer, who, if they're not Canadians, at least have Canadian affiliations and a soft spot in their hearts for the old Dominion.

Arthur Salzer, radio technician, first class, is married to the former Doris Bell of 46½ Gore Ave., North Hamilton, Ont. Arthur enlisted in the U. S. Navy in March, 1942, at which time Mrs. Salzer went to live with her parents in Hamilton and she is still there with her son, Arthur Jr., 7½ years old. For her information her husband is one of the busiest men on the ship, on call at all hours for repair work on the mass of radio equipment that fills every nook and cranny of the Appalachian.

Commander L.V. Juilin, U. S. N., administrative assistant to the Public Information Officer, Operation Crossroads, lives in Washington, D.C., but he is a native of Mrs. Jean Moffatt Juilin, a native of Nova Scotia who spent most of her early life in New Westminster, B.C. Mrs. Jean C. N. Beebe, lives at 3025 Jan Ave West in Vancouver. Commander Juilin is a 1937 graduate of Annapolis Naval Academy and during the war he commanded a U.S. destroyer escort "Sirad", making 17 operational voyages against the Japs. His wife and year-old daughter and son live in Washington, where his mother also now resides.

At least six officers have already told me that as soon as these atom bombs are exploded they're heading for Canada for a good, long holiday. And I'm convince a dozen of them will be. Then it's over, that they should do the same.

SCIENTISTS' VIEWS Aboard the U. S. S. Appalachian, June 24 The atom bomb dropping into Bikini Lagoon, as far as raising the temperature of the water is concerned, will be like dropping a spark from a welder's torch into a goldfish bowl. Take the word of a nuclear physicist for it.

In a unique press conference conducted by radio between this press ship and the U.S.S. Panamint, carrying scientific observers, the newsmen's well-known penchant for asking questions was matched by the facility with which answers crackled back through the ether from the experts. Questions ranged all the way from what will happen if the bomb's a dud to the biological effect upon fish life in the waters of the lagoon. "Will they be parboiled?" one correspondent wanted to know. . .

The answer to that one was a straight "no", with the added comparison of the welder's spark and the goldfish bowl. Apparently it requires 80 billion British thermal units to raise the temperature of one cubic mile of water 1/100 of a degree Fahrenheit. Or the same amount of B.T.U.s will heat one square mile of water in the lagoon 100 some 20 miles long and average more than 20 fathoms in depth) even the terrific heat generated by the atom bomb will be unnoticeable dissipated.

The question of the bomb turning out to be a dud is a prize joke among the newsmen and always raises loud guffaws when anyone suggests the possibility. One questioner wanted to know, supposing the bomb does fail to detonate and sinks to the bottom, if it would be safe to enter Bikini lagoon for the next million years.

Air Vice Marshal Ernest W. Sleeman, CB,OBE, of Ottawa, Canadian government observer, answered that one. The bomb could be salvaged, he said, and rendered harmless—as is being done in British waters day by bomb disposal squads. And if it blows up during the operation what are the odds? After all, you're going to be killed just as dead by an exploding bomb filled with T.N.T. as by one filled with plutonium.

One unknown British observer wanted to know if those American and Canadian humane societies which are objecting to the use of animals in the atomic tests, are building the same views about the Japanese rats said by Admiral Blandy to be infesting the Jap battleship "Nagato", one of the target vessels. He won the acclaim of all his colleagues.

UNRRA IN ITALY

Emergency Feeding Measures A Masterpiece of Co-ordination

Rome — Co-ordination between the Italian Government and UNRRA is keeping most of Italy's bakeries open with only local ration cuts, the Mission has advised Director General F. H. LaGuardia.

When U.S.A. grain shipments fell short in April it was obvious that Italy would feel a hunger pinch in June. In UNRRA'S office and that of the High Food Commissioner, complicated charts which are changed hourly indicate regional wheat supplies and when exhausted, when new supplies are arriving, at what ports, and when each local harvest is cut and ground. However, the shortage developed at the best time of the year, with yellowing fields promising help within a few weeks.

Both the Italian Government and UNRRA feared worse. As strategic distributi n of reserves was completed May 20th. Then the Government and UNRRA set up a system of hourly telephone communications, and waited for the bell to ring.

Cries For Food

On June 5th, cries for food came simultaneously from several regions. The northern Province of Bergamo cut the ration the same day as Mignano which, breaking, with harvesten days off, appealed to an Army Major in nearby Caserta, who relayed the message to UNRRA, in Rome.

To relieve nearly breadless Milan, 6,000 tons of grain were rushed north from Bari. It was expensive, but it saved the day. When this was gone by the arrival of an Argentine com ship changed Milan's bread from grey to yellow, and then another wheat ship changed it back to gray. Italy has been eating strange meals even the best containing oatmeal.

Sicily ran out of flour. Bari again came to the rescue.

Genoa has ground hundreds of tons of UNRRA dried beans and split peas to "stretch its wheat.

Sardinian Crisis

On June 3, too, Sardinia's malaria weakened population, in its sixth week of struggle against the record locust invasion, reported that the ration cut from seven ounces daily to 4.2; even with the cut there was enough flour in the island for only 20 days. In the drained-swamp west coast, once called Mussolinia, where grain ripens a fortnight earlier than main crops, quick reaping yielded three more days of bread. The island's 1,000,000 inhabitants; more-new reaping now feeds the island until another ship arrives. The job of getting grain around the mountainous island, as big as New Hampshire, one-third bigger than Wales, is a possible only because 200 UNRRA vehicles had been rushed from the mainland for the grasshopper fight.

Minus the drama of the battle with the insect invaders, such is the grind-to-mouth, costly, nerve - wracking, borrowing-from-Peter-to-feed-Paul all over the country. Italy's needs are thirty 8,000-ton shiploads of grain monthly; due to shortages in grain-supplying countries she received only the equivalent of three in the first twelve days of June. Now is the year's lowest point; but the Government and UNRRA expect improvement as increasing landings and harvest coincide in the latter part of the month.

Food Crisis Increases Deaths From Tuberculosis

Rome—Accompanying the long Italian food crisis, deaths from tuberculosis in children under twelve increased 66 per cent. in the last year, according to the Pediatric Clinic.

Studies made in six Italian cities by UNRRA medical workers show that deaths from this malady have nearly doubled recently, and figures still coming in show a constant upward trend. Twice as many factory workers have tuberculosis as in England. Fluoroscope tests indicate that 23 pc. more children are susceptible than were shown in tests in previous years.

To deal effectively with the scourge Italy needs more good food added to more families. Instead at least during the crucial period in June and July, she is likely to have less food, available to fewer families.

AN ISLAND HONORED

The descendants of the Bounty mutineers are pleased and honored because a ship has been named after that island home. It is a naval frigate, H.M.S. Pitcairn, and the observers have sent a message of good wishes to the ship.

One of the best-known true stories of adventure is that of H.M.S. Bounty, whose crew, under Captain William Bligh, mutinied in the year 1789 when the ship was on the way to the South Seas. Nine of the mutineers, with a few natives from Tahiti, eventually reached the uninhabited island of Pitcairn. By 1850 only one of the mutineers, John Adams, was alive, but there were several women and children from whom the present inhabitants of Pitcairn Islands are descended.

A set of Pitcairn postage stamps is to be displayed in one of the cabins of H.M.S. Pitcairn.

Question and Answer Column

Readers may direct their questions, giving their name and address and mentioning the name of this paper, to the Information Branch, WPTB, 490 Sussex Street, Ottawa, Ontario.

Q. We are living in a rented house and we enjoy three rooms. We get $7.00 per month rent for these rooms, and we pay the lights. Recently the power company raised their rates and installed another meter. This is costing us an extra $1.52 per month. Am I allowed to raise the rent for my tenants?

A. In this particular case you would probably be permitted to increase the rent. However, before you may do so you must go to the Rentals Administration of the nearest Regional Office and complete an application for increased rental, stating your reasons.

Q. My husband owned a car while he was stationed in Canada with the Army. He sold it when he went overseas and now wants to buy a new car. He has been refused a priority. How can he obtain one?

A. We're afraid he is not eligible for one. From the information contained in your letter it is clear that he does not require his car for business purposes and until there is a greater supply of new automobiles available those who require a car for business must come first.

Q. When will the remainder of our canning sugar coupons become valid? We would like to use all mine to preserve strawberries and the grocer refuses to take the coupons.

A. The second half of the canning sugar coupons become due on July 15th. Your grocer was quite correct when he refused to take coupons which had not become valid. It is difficult to arrange for the coupons to fall due at a time which will satisfy everyone. There is much fresh fruit available later in the summer than at the present time and for that reason, the coupons for early fruits were valid in May and for the later fruits in July.

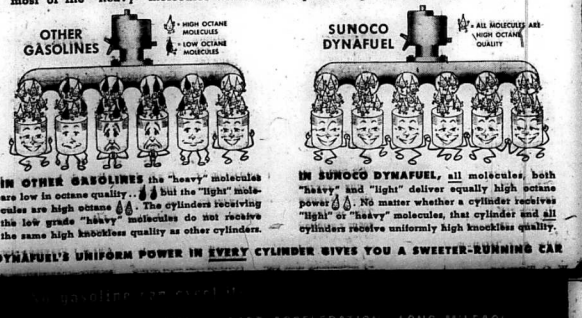
THE NEW ALL-PETROLEUM MOTOR FUEL

AND HERE'S THE REASON!

ALL gasolines (including Sunoco Dynafuel) are composed of "light" and "heavy" molecules. As the gasoline goes into the cylinders from the carburetor, some of the "heavy" molecules separate from the rest of the gasoline and go to certain cylinders which get most of the "heavy" molecules while other cylinders get mostly "light" molecules.



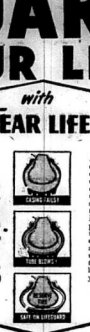
IN OTHER GASOLINES the "heavy" molecules are low in octane quality . . . but the "light" molecules are high octane. The cylinders receiving the low grade "heavy" molecules do not receive the same high knockless quality as other cylinders.

IN SUNOCO DYNAFUEL, all molecules, both "heavy" and "light" deliver equally high octane power. No matter whether a cylinder receives "light" or "heavy" molecules, that cylinder and all cylinders receive uniformly high knockless quality.

DYNAFUEL'S UNIFORM POWER IN EVERY CYLINDER GIVES YOU A SWEETER-RUNNING CAR

GUARD YOUR LIFE with GOODYEAR LIFEGUARDS

Make YOUR CAR SAFE FROM BLOW-OUT ACCIDENTS



Any tire can fail . . . even yours! Once the outside casing blows out, conventional tubes collapse rapidly . . . unable to withstand the shock or sudden weight thrust upon them. But LifeGuard's husky 2-ply reserving tire remains inflated long enough to enable you to come to a safe, smooth stop. See us about LifeGuards today . . . you can't buy better protection to save your life!

CONTROLLING THE WEEDS

Extensive Programme of Weed Spraying Demonstrations and Experiments Now Being Organized Throughout The Province

Under the direction of the Ontario Advisory Committee on Herbicides, and John D. McLeod, Director of the Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch, and with the co-operation of Agricultural Representatives all over the province, the most elaborate and extensive weed spraying and control program, for demonstration and experimental purposes, ever held in Ontario, is now getting under way. Detailed instructions on the programme have gone out from Mr. McLeod's office to al Agricultural Representatives.

The programme, Mr. McLeod announces, is divided into two divisions: (1) Demonstrations with proven chemicals. (2) Experiments with 2, 4-D chemicals. In sending out instructions to the Agricultural Representatives, he indicated the co-operation of his branch, as follows:

"If you wish to conduct one or more demonstrations with proven chemicals, we will be pleased to supply sprayer and operator for a limited number of these. You will be expected to select the area to be sprayed, purchase the chemical, provide a method of pulling the sprayer when working, assist with the spraying operation, and make observations regarding results.

"In selecting an area, we wish to emphasize the importance of picking a location with an average growth of weeds or brush. For instance, we do not believe in spraying brush which is over 4 feet high. It is more economical to cut these down and spray when new browth is two to four feet high."

Mr. McLeod also makes the following statement of policy with reference to the experiments with 2, 4-D.

"In connection with our proposed experiments with 2,4-D, I wish to point out that we are prepared to supply the 2,4-D for one plot per county up to one acre. Four different compounds of 2, 4-D are available, and several brands of each compound are being offered this year. These compounds are as follows:

"(1) Sodium or Ammonium Salt of 2,4-D. (2) Free 2 4-D sold in a carrier. (3) Ester of 2, 4-D. (4) Amine salt of 2, 4-D. We wish to experiment with one or more of these compounds on each plot. Probably at different strengths. Therefore we will seect the brand of 2, 4-D to be used.

"This will be strictly a fact-finding experiment under the direction of our Advisory Committee on Herbicides, and will be part of an extensive programme of experiments which the committee has under way. Any information of value obtained will be used in our reports. In addition to the experiments referred to, we will be prepared to assist you with any other 2,4-D experiments which you wish to undertake. It is our wish of our Advisory Committee on Herbicides that no publicity be given experiments with 2, 4-D until we have definite information regarding results."

In preparation for this campaign, the Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch has recently purchased five power demonstration sprayers. Each machine is equipped with a gun, four-nozzle broom and a ten-foot boom, and these are now available for the demonstrations and experiments planned. It is pointed out that the County and District Weed Inspectors will be available to assist the Agricultural Representatives with any project which they are undertaking.

Detailed instructions on the methods of operation and regarding various types of weed-killing chemicals have also been sent out with the announcement of the programme, as well as the following list of suggestions for experiments with 2,4-D:

In Cereal Crop—Using 2, 4-D to control annual weeds.

Pasture Field— Using 2, 4-D or Sinox to control annual and bienlial weeds.

Playground and Recreation Areas—Using 2, 4-D on poison ivy.

Lawns, Golf Courses and Cemeteries — Using 2, 4-D on dandelions, plaintain, chickweed, etc.

Cultivated Field in Rotatiin—Using 2, 4-D on field; bindweed, perennial sow thistle, leafy sourgrass, etc.

Roadside Weeds— Using 2, 4-D on wild carrot, chicory, etc.

How to Combat RHEUMATIC PAIN

Rheumatic pains may often be caused by excess uric acid, a blood impurity that should be removed by the kidneys. If kidneys fail, and excess uric acid remains, it may cause severe discomfort and pain. Treat rheumatic pains by helping your kidneys to good condition. Get any one of three special Doan's Pills. Doan's help your kidneys get rid of troublesome poisonous and excess acids—help you feel better. See what Doan's can do for you. 157

Dutch Brides Clothed To Meet Husbands

The Hague. — Dutch brides waiting to rejoin their ex-soldier husbands in Canada are discovering that a neighborly welcome awaits them at The Hague office of the Canadian Red Cross.

Responding to Dutch press and radio stories telling them the Bureau had opened, wives have been trooping in since March to see Captain Edna Coburn of Hamilton, Ont., who is in since March to see Captain Edna Coburn of Hamilton, Ont., who ling in er) Margaret Smaill, of Montreal.

More than 600 have received assistance of one kind or another. Their floral "thank yous" have kept the Bureau bright ever since.

Requests for clothing are numerous in a country in which virtually none is available for the ordinary citizen. Girls from blitzed and war-stricken towns receive especially sympathetic attention.

"If a bride says she comes from Arnhem for instance, we know automatically she is entitled to help," says Capt. Coburn. More than 130 bundles of clothing ranging from nighties to complete wardrobes, all handmade by the women of Canada, have been distributed.

"Every girl who comes for clothing receives consideration, because we want to be sure that no a single one reaches Canada ashamed of her appearance," said the Captain.

More than 150 complete layettes have been distributed.

So far only 50 Dutch dependents have left for Canada through the Canadian Wives Bureau in Holland. The flow will increase, perceptibly within a month.

Every one leaving the country spends the night before embarkation in the Victoria Hotel, Scheveningen. The hotel is Canadian-staffed and maintained, but was equipped for the purpose by the Dutch Red Cross. It can accommodate 50 but will be able to take 75 as the program reaches its peak.

BETHANY W. A.

The lesson thought, Working and Witnessing, was given and the program was as follows: readings by Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Bruce Davis, followed by a guitar duet by Shirley and Joan Davis and readings by Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Davis. The delegate gave the report from the convention. The treasurer's report was given and it was moved and seconded we hire George Pemble to take care of the church, for one year.

The closing hymn was sung and a bountiful lunch was served by Mrs. Keech and daughter, and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered them.

TO THOSE WHO NEED MONEY... for a useful purpose

For many of our borrowing customers, saving is still the prime consideration. For them, the time to borrow is equally the time to save . . . borrowing and saving go hand in hand.

Thousands of our borrowers have sizable holdings of Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates, which they leave with us for safekeeping. Indeed, a good many have substantial cash reserves in their savings accounts.

Why, then, do they borrow from the Bank? Simply because they want to keep their savings intact and undisturbed—as a bulwark of security.

These people are performing a real service not only to themselves, but to their fellow citizens and to the country at large . . .

By maintaining their programme of regular saving, they are guarding against inflation.

How? . . . By conservation.

Conservation in personal financing is practised by a large proportion of our customers. By borrowing for some useful purpose, and by making regular repayments on their loan, they are—in reality—saving for a useful purpose, and increasing profitable production for the community. Meanwhile, they are keeping their savings intact.

To Our Customers, we say: "Don't borrow unless you have to, but if you need money for some useful purpose, by all means get a loan from the Bank."

We also say: "Don't sell your Victory Bonds . . . if you need cash, get a low-cost loan and pay it back out of future earnings."

Regional Councils To Be Disbanded

Ottawa. — The Government plans to discontinue the regional reconstruction councils established across Canada to act as advisers on matters affecting the transition from war to peace because the transition has been "largely affected", Hon. C. D. Howe, Reconstruction Minister said, last week in the Commons.

Replying to Howard Green (P.C.—Vancouver South), Mr. Howe said the reconstruction program has been heavier than expected, but it was found that the work of the councils was not sufficient to justify them continuing indefinitely and arrangements have been made to terminate their work "at an early date".

However, representatives of the National Research Council which have been attached to each regional council will be kept in touch in the locality because of demand of their services.

Nationalization of Coal Mines Plan Approved U.K. House of Lords

London, (Reuters) — The House of Lords gave final approval to the Labor Government's "key" bill nationalizing Britain's coal industry.

This week the bill goes back to the House of Commons for consideration of an amendment made by the House of Lords. The controversial measure was originally read in the House of Commons May 20th.

The bill to take over the coal mines is regarded by some observers as the "key" to the nationalization plan.

A three-man Government tribunal now is holding hearings to determine compensation. Value of 1,700 colamines. Unofficial estimates have set probable compensation at around £200,000,000. It is planned to set up the projected coal board by late summer and to start Government operation in 1947.

Dwindling coal stocks and difficulty of obtaining manpower intensify importance of this measure, the latest in a series of Government efforts to re-organize Britain's huge coal industry.

Pronghorn antelopes are found only in a few isolated spots in Colorado, Idaho, Montana, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming.

The western meadow lark is one of the most useful of insect-eating birds in America.

LOCALS FAIL TO HOLD LEAD AGAINST BATA

On Saturday afternoon, the local Intermediates held the Bata Shoemen 7 to 4 for seven long innings, and pounded "Smoky" Smith long and often during the first part of the game. The pace proved to be too much for the locals and they relaxed in the last two frames to allow the visitors to edge 4 runs across to win the encounter, 8 to 7.

The feature play of the game was the "squeeze" with Mack on third and VanVlack at bat, laying down a perfect, to edge Mack across.

McTaggart and Murphy were the battery for the local with "Stan" doing a splendid job on the mound.

The locals have finally received their new uniforms and present a smart appearance on the field.

A great deal of encouragement should be shown this outfit for the splendid showing of sportsmanship in the face of bad luck, breaks, and lack of wins.

SALVATION ARMY BAND CONCERT

On Sunday night, at The Salvation Army Citadel, the service was conducted by Pte. Lieut. George Clarke of Kingston, and the soloist was Miss Shirley Clarke, who was accompanied at the piano by Miss Gladys Woodcock, all of Kingston. A group of the Kingston Salvation Army Band also contributed a number of selections. The services were in charge of Capt. V. Clarke and Lieut. R. Hall, who are the Corps officers.

After the service at the Citadel the Band played a number of selections in the Harvey Warner Park and there were a number of vocal selections including solos by Miss Shirley Clarke, of Kingston. The concert was heard by a large number of people, and was brought to a close with the playing of the National Anthem.

R.C.M.P. Charge Black Market in D. V. A.-Built Homes for Vets

Royal Canadian Mounted Police contend there is a black market of houses built for war veterans in a government-sponsored Veterans' Land Act project at Boucherville, Que.

Ordered by the Government to probe the first black market case of this kind involving Federal property, R.C.M.P. authorities revealed that veterans have been forced to pay as much as $4,690 "on the side" to purchase these government houses. Several arrests will be made, shortly, police stated.

The House of Commons heard a special report on the case, recently. The R.C.M.P. were asked by the Department of Veterans' Affairs to launch an immediate investigation into complaints that veterans had to pay as much as $11,000 for a home of which the price was set by the D.V.A. at $7,000.

Authorities stated that if the veteran wanted a home badly, he would be forced to go "black market" and pay almost twice the price — even though the price was fixed under the Veterans' Land Act.

On investigation, the Mounties said they learned that expense sheets were padded to cover up for the increase of $4,000 in costs for each home.

"Contacts" reportedly told police that the rise in price of construction materials accounted for the increase in costs. Mounties found out otherwise, they claim.

Over Three Tons Clothing Collected In Napanee Effort

Thanks Expressed By Provincial Officer

The National Clothing Collection, sponsored by the Canadian United Allied Relief Fund, which was conducted in Napanee by the U. E. L. Chapter of the I. O. D. E., resulted in donations totalling 6,470 pounds being turned in for shipment to the Ontario Headquarters.

There were 200 donors, including individuals, Women's Institutes, Red Cross Units, Church Groups, School Sections, the Order of the Eastern Star, the Rebekahs, and the I.O.D.E. In addition to a large amount of clothing, blankets and shoes, there were several generous cash donations with which children's clothing and blankets were purchased.

The packing was done, by Mr. Walter Higgs, and 178 large cartons were shipped.

The Daughters of the Empire are very grateful for the assistance rendered in making the collection and in packing and shipping, and wish to express thanks also to all who contributed clothing.

LETTER OF THANKS

The following letter, from C. A. McDonald, Executive Director for Ontario, was received by Mrs. D. C. Macnaughton, Regent of the U. E. L. Chapter, I.O.D.E.—

Dear Mrs. McNaughton:

I have been instructed by the Honourable Russell T. Kelley, Chairman of the National Clothing Collection for Ontario, to thank you and the Members of the United Empire Loyalist Chapter, I.O.D.E., sincerely for your active participation and the very excellent work which you did in your community. We are sure that this voluntary effort on your part will be greatly appreciated by those millions of destitute people who will benefit from the contributions which you and your community have made.

The generosity of our Canadian people in the Collection will greatly strengthen the bonds of friendship already existing between them and Canadian troops.

We trust that should our future require any further effort that we may have your sincere co-operation to the same extent as in this particular National Clothing Collectiin.

Again thanking you, I am

Yours sincerely,
Christie A. McDonald,
Executive Director, Ontario.

Viscount Alexander Retired From Army

London, (C.P.) — The London Gazette has announced that Viscount Alexander, Governor-General of Canada, has been retired from the active army at half-pay with rank of Field Marshal. The retirement took effect last April 6th.

INJURED IN FALL FROM BARN ROOF

Mr. Fred Prue, who besides on Robert Street, in Napanee, sustained painful injuries when he fell thirty-six feet from the roof of a barn, at the farm of Peter Miller, Switzerville, on Saturday afternoon, July 6th. He was taken to the Hotel Dieu Hospital in Kingston, where X-ray examination disclosed he had a fracture of the breast and right shoulder.

Mr. Prue was engaged as a carpenter on a new barn being built by Mr. Miller and while working on the roof, lost his foothold. He first struck the barn floor 26 feet below and then fell to the ground nine feet farther.

His condition is reported to be favorable.

Excellent Achievement

The many friends of Master "Bill" Carter will be pleased to know that he passed with honours the Grade One Toronto Conservatory of Music Piano examinations. He was congratulated by the examiner for his excellent work and understanding of music by so young a student.

"Bill" is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Carter and a pupil of Miss Letha Scott, A.Mus.

Several Bills Approved

Ottawa — The Senate gave approval to a bill permitting the Department of Transport inventory to report stocks of value as high as $1,000,000. It reflects wartime expansion.

Third reading was also given to a Commons bill to lower the interest rate on deeds of soldier settlement from the First Great War from five to 3½ per cent.

A Commons bill given second reading was one granting veterans' benefits to Canadian women who served in Britain's Women's Royal Naval Service and in South Africa's military nursing service. It was explained by Senator Brewer Robinson (L.-P.E.I.).

Ottawa, (C.P.) — One of the points worrying Canadian officials among the repercussions of lifting of United States price ceilings is the possibility of an invasion of American buyers into Canadian markets at border points.

Should American prices get far out of line with the prices of identical products in Canada, it is expected there would be a heavy run on Canadian stores in locations easily available to Americans. Such a trend would drain Canadian markets in those points.

In addition the American buyers of goods in Canada would in many instances be getting the advantage of lower prices made possible through subsidies financed by Canadian taxpayers. Probability is that should such a condition become widespread export ban would be put into effect. It was recalled that export bans were placed on meat and poultry at some points where there was a run on Canadian stores by American buyers.

Cars for Farmers Queried in House

Ottawa, (C.P.) — Hon. C.D. Howe, Reconstruction Minister, said in Commons, issuance of a passenger car priority to a farmer depends upon whether an automobile is essential to the farmer's business.

He was replying to Gordon Graydon (P.C.-Peel), who said there seemed to be no provision under classification of priorities which would give the issuing order the discretion indicated by the Minister.

Mr. Howe said each discretion had been provided under war orders and regulations, last November.

May Boost U.K. Exports But Discourage Imports

London, (C.P.) — Revaluation of the Canadian dollar so sharply with the United States dollar is likely to have the effect of stimulating British exports to Canada while discouraging imports from the Dominion, Treasury sources announced last week end.

However, purchases made on Canadian credits granted in the recent loan to Britain will not be affected since the loan is in dollars. The cost of repayment automatically will be higher, however.

"Revaluation" puts up by 10 per cent all sterling purchases in Canada, but it puts an extra 10 per cent in the pockets of British exporters receiving payment in dollars," said the Treasury official. "The result will be to encourage our exports to seek Canadian sales, although it may limit purchases which we have to pay for with sterling."

CONFLICTING OPINIONS ON BOMB EFFECTIVENESS

BY HEC STEWART

Bikini Lagoon, Marshall Islands, July 2— Opinions on the effectiveness of an atomic bomb against modern warfare ships continue to rage among the newspapermen here to cover yesterday's test, and even a conducted tour through the target fleet this afternoon didn't do much to bring about unanimity.

Personally, I am all in favour of leaving it to the presidential and chiefs of staff evaluation committees to decide the argument. I don't know anything about atomic bombs and I don't know enough about fighting ships to form that kind of opinion, nor have I, at the moment, the guidance of the Canadian experts who also observed the big blow-up yesterday. But what I do know from the evidence of my own eyes is that some of the ships in the target fleet certainly took a lot of beating.

The Independence isn't an aircraft carrier any more. The Jap cruiser Sakawa is at the bottom of the lagoon with two destroyers and two attack transports to keep her company, and the submarine Skate had to be beached on Enyu Island this afternoon to keep her from sinking. Her entire superstructure, conning tower and all, was blasted off and hanging over the starboard side. In addition, there is heavy topside damage to the battleships Arkansas and Nagato, the heavy cruiser Pensacola, and one of the LSM's.

In the boat that this afternoon most of us were more interested in the animals that went through the blast on several of the target ships. Everyone knows that a goat is a hardy beastie but just how hardy few of us appreciated until today.

Of course, not all ships have as yet been fully explored, but so far we have heard of only one goat killed and one "pretty sick" on the transport Fillon. We saw two nannies on the boat deck midships quietly chewing their cuds or whatever goats chew. Their wooden cages had been blown apart but the goats seemed to have come through the ordeal unscathed. Astern, there were two very dead sheep. A flock of little pigs and the battleship Pennsylvania gave the boarding crew a merry chase as they scampered all over the vessel. They, too, had been blown out of their cages but seemed none the worse for it.

All of us were sorry to hear of the demise of the white mice and rats on the Battleship Nevada. They may have survived the blast but fire in number four gun turret under which their cages were placed finished off the lot. But with goats on almost every ship it was the same story, "eating and doing fine."

How much radiological activity remains in the lagoon is more than I can estimate. Some of the ships were "too hot" radiologically speaking to board this morning, but by 1500 hours dropped rapidly by early afternoon. Swimming and fishing are still prohibited and we have not yet been allowed ashore on Bikini Island.

The sound of the propeller of one ship can be heard by listening near the hull in another ship's cabin because the ships are conducting the transmission of sound through the sea.

About 100 Pupils Attend Classes At Vacation School

Meet Each Morning For Study And Recreation

The Church Vacation School, which is being conducted as a joint enterprise by St. Mary Magdalene's Church Grace Anglican Church, Trinity United and The Salvation Army, is proving to be a most worthwhile service in the interest of the young people of the town. About 100 boys and girls between the ages of four and eleven are enrolled and are in attendance at the school, between the hours of nine and twelve o'clock, each week day. The school, which opened a week ago Monday, will continue this week and next week.

The Vacation School was started in Napanee, last year, by Grace Church, and Church, under the direction of Miss Hazel Vanalstyne and was so successful that this year it was decided to extend it to take in the above named churches. Rev. Noble Hatton the minister of Trinity United Church is the director and Miss Hazel Vanalstyne is assistant director.

The programme includes Bible study, worship, games, songs, and handicrafts, all of which are designed to be of great interest to the pupils. There are three groups: the kindergarten class, for boys and girls four and five years old which meets in Grace Church, under the supervision of Mrs. Mae Herrington assisted by Mrs. Norman Richardson, Dorothy Richmond and Mrs. Santer; the primary group for six, seven and eight year olds, meeting in St. Mary Magdalene's Church, supervised by Capt. Clark, assisted by Lieut. Hall, Mrs. James Haggerty, Mrs. Leonie Clark and Miss Barbara McLaughlin; the Juniors, nine, ten and eleven years old, meeting in Trinity Church, supervised by Miss Mary A. Reid, assisted by Mrs. F. W. Ramsay, Mrs. H. H. Langford, Miss Helen Reid and David Elliott.

The worship service held in Grace Church last Friday morning was under the direction of Rev. Noble Hatton and was conducted by the pupils. The members of the Primary Class contributed a chorus, Miss Maxine Herrington sang a solo and Mrs. W. F. Ramsay told a story.

Workman Injured In Engine Explosion

Mr. William Walker, an employee of the Waterworks Department of the Napanee Public Utilities, was painfully hurt on Thursday of last week, when a gasoline engine at the pumping station, exploded.

Mr. Walker started the engine and immediately after, it exploded and a piece of the metal struck him a glancing blow on the leg. Fortunately he did not receive the full impact, which undoubtedly would have broken his leg. As it was, his leg was badly bruised and he suffered shock which necessitated his remaining in bed several days.

Citizens Catch Thief After Gas Station Till Rifled

Caught in Rear of Post Office Building

On Monday afternoon of this week about 5:45, Robert Thompson, age 45, of Toronto, was apprehended in the rear of the Post Office building, following an attempt to steal money from the till at Douglas' Service Station on the Market Square.

Ronald Sladdin, who was alone at the station, at the time, was serving a customer when he heard the cash register ring and immediately went in to investigate. On entering the station he surprised Thompson scooping the change and bills into his pocket. Thompson pushed the young attendant into the corner and ran out of the building.

Several citizens heard the commotion and took up the chase across the square into the Post Office yard, where Thompson was discovered hiding in the toilet rooms of the building, by Jack O'Connor and Lorne Card, of Card's Garage. He was held until the police arrived and was lodged in gaol.

Fortunately, very little money, about $4.00 was in the register at the time and the accused only managed to pocket about $16.00 before being discovered. In his dash for freedom considerable change was lost on the road and Mr. Douglas figured he would be out less than $10.00.

Thompson will probably appear before the Magistrate this Thursday, for a hearing.

Holidays Obligatory In Alberta Province

Edmonton, (C.P.) — Annual holidays for nearly all Alberta workers was made obligatory in an order issued by Deputy Minister Adams, chairman of the Alberta Board of Industrial Relations.

The order grants one week with regular pay for workers after one years employment and after two years, workers shall be granted two weeks with regular pay.

The holidays are to be exclusive of statutory holidays and are to be given in one unbroken period and must be given within ten months after the employee becomes entitled to the order.

In the case of termination of employment the employer will pay the employee one or two weeks' pay where the employee has not been given an annual holiday to which he is entitled under the order.

The order adds that where agreements are already in effect which assure employes more favorable holiday conditions these are not affected. The order "cancels out" but it renders null and void any agreemen' which is less favorable.

Britain Plans To Use Transmission Speed Invention

London, (C.P.) — One of the "mystery inventions" upon which J. L. Baird, the television pioneer, was working at the time of his death was an apparatus capable of handling all Britain's daily outgoing cable traffic in under three minutes.

Today batteries of machines transmitting at 120 words a minute work long hours dealing with nearly 2,000,000 words daily.

Soon messages will pour out from Britain at the rate of 750,000 words a minute. It will be possible to transmit 25 pages of 500 words every second—the equivalent of five full-length novels a minute.

"We hope to install the new machinery in the next financial future," an official of Cable and Wireless, said.

B.C. Log Prices Are Boosted

Vancouver, B.C. — British Columbia log prices have been increased by an average of $4 and $5 a thousand since June 30th, H. S. Irvin, the chairman of the B.C. Loggers' Association, said in an interview, recently. In some high grades of fir, Mr. Irvin said, the increases have risen to "possibly" $6 a thousand. These are the prices lumber manufacturers must pay for logs in the open market.

It is the second time log prices have been boosted since November 17th, when average increases of $2 a thousand were made effective following the lifting of the Federal price ceiling on logs, Mr. Irwin said.

The reason for, the upward trend he added, was increased wages and shorter working hours in the logging industry; increased royalties and increased towing rates which have developed since last November.

Plans Completed For Canonization

Vatican City, Rome, Italy, (B.U.P.), Msgr. Angelo Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic delegate to Washington, arrived by air, last week, accompanied by a large number of American clergymen to attend Sunday's canonization of the first American saint—Mother Cabrini.

It was announced that Pope Pius XII would grant a special general audience July 9th in the Hall of Benedictions for prominent ecclesiastics who will attend the canonization.

It was understood that Mother Cabrini would be proclaimed a saint by the Pope at 10 a.m. The trenne bells of St. Peter's will toll the announcement to the world over the radio. The St. Peter's bell will be followed by the pealing of bells in Rome churches.

PATIENCE

The patience of the Foreign Secretaries who are in Paris trying to pave the way for a Peace Conference, must be near the breaking point. When on leaving for Europe, Mr. Byrnes of The United States said: "he was standing in the need of prayer," he was not speaking lightly. No sooner do the four Representatives get over one difficulty than they face another. First it was Trieste. That problem was finally disposed of when Molotov, the Russian representative agreed to the internationalization of the Italian city. It was a compromise agreement, but a satisfactory one.

Then came the setting of the date for the Peace Conference. That, too, was settled and July 29th was agreed upon. Whereupon, Molotov threw another monkey wrench in the works by demanding that rules of procedure be decided on before notices are sent out. At the time of writing, he is still holding out against the other three, representing France, United States and Great Britain. The point at issue seems to be that Russia wants a two-third majority before any changes can be made in the draft treaties. The others know that six Slavic States voting as a block, would make changes impossible without the consent of the Slavs. This, the Representatives, apart from Molotov, do not want.

So they go on plodding away, giving here a little, and there a little, jumping one hurdle after another. Perhaps, after a war of such ferocity, with suspicions and hatred pendered for five years, this is not unexpected. Patience is needed, and the whole world hopes that this virtue will be rewarded and the Peace Conference held, as planned.

The people of Europe need to know where they are, and what they have to face. The sooner this is done, the quicker order will be restored in Europe.

THE AFTERMATH

An Associated Press dispatch from Washington reports J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, as saying that the United States "is facing a potential army of 6,000,000 criminals," and "an ever increasing wave of lawlessness, which is feeding the criminal ranks with a never ending supply of recruits."

"Our homes and our lives," Mr. Hoover is reported to have declared, "are daily threatened by this vast army. Law enforcement, today, is facing one of its most gigantic tasks. The crime increase, so far this year, is even greater than the 12.4 increase reported for 1945: and every 20.1 seconds last year, a serious crime was committed. Every 6.4 minutes, someone was raped, feloneously assaulted or slain."

Mr. Hoover stressed — the report continues — that the "vast army" of "criminals" is "ten times greater in number than the number of students in our colleges and universities, and for every school teacher in America, there are more than seven criminals."

This is not a pretty picture! It is one, however, which we confess, with shame, that our nation shares. In the same issue of the paper carrying Mr. Hoover's statement, was a news item to the effect that a young Windsor Ontario lad, of eighteen years of age, had been arrested and charged with the murder of two people and the attempted murder of three others. Another item reported a Hamilton youth, sixteen years old, being sentenced to two years and six months for 42 cases of arson, to which he had confessed. These included a fire in a Hamilton school and in a church in the same city. These are just items seen at a glance; there are probably more, were we to look for them.

This situation arises as a result of war conditions, parents away from home, breakdown of moral standards, the glorifying of killing which accompanies the war effort, and the abnormal increase in drinking which accompanies organized hostilities.

To meet this situation is not an easy task, as Mr. Hoover admits. But it can be attempted, and it is one of the encouraging signs of the times, that Service Clubs, Lodges, Churches, and Groups of all sort, are making plans to organize the sports and leisure of young people. These should be supported to the limit by every citizen who has the welfare of the community at heart. There should be no inclination to "let George do it." It is a responsibility resting on each individual.

BREAD

The people of Great Britain who have suffered all sorts of privations during the war, have now to submit to bread rationing. This, we are told, has become necessary because of the depleted stock of grain in the country. Naturally, the British housewives are up in arms. For it is on them that the burden falls heaviest. They have to do the purchasing, often going from store to store, and standing endless hours in line to get a bit of this or that to eke out the family larder. The children have to be fed. The men folk out to work, must have meals ready for them. The housewife bears the brunt. Is it any wonder then that six million of them signed a petition to the King, asking relief from this intolerable situation?

We, here in Canada, know nothing of scarcity. We have suffered no privation during the war; a slight inconvenience to be sure, or perhaps a change in diet, but that is about all. We have shared our grain with others. We have sent all that carriers could be found for, to Europe and Great Britain. The United States, too, has caught up on her committments overseas. On July 1st, The United States had fulfilled her promise covering the first six months of 1946, having sent over in that time 6,000,000 tons of bread grains. The greatest record ever made by any country. So that this North America has done something, not, of course, all that should be done, but something. Thousands, perhaps millions of lives have been saved because of this help from Canada and The United States. But it must continue to be given; even if all the nations of Europe produce this year, they will still need food to help them through 1947. There must be no let up in our efforts.

At the same time we cannot help but believe that there are ways in which Great Britain particularly could help herself. Far too much grain goes into alcoholic beverages. In Scotland, alone, the drink bill for 1945 was over 60,000,000 stirling or $250,000,000. This amounts to over $600,000 a day. This would take a lot of grain that might better be used for bread.

Then, too, there is something wrong with the marketing of food, even yet. A little news item in the Weekly Scotsman, published in Edinburgh, says: "Herring landings totalling over 6,000,000 fish, completely overwhelmed the home market demand at Northeast Scottish ports on May 23rd, and it was decided to close the ports of Peterhead and Fraserburgh. . . . Salesmen at Aberdeen fish market on Monday were unable to sell fifty tons of good quality fish, which went for manure and animal feeding stuffs.

It is quite evident that there are quite a few ways in which Great Britain could improve her food situation. One would be to cut down on her liquor production, and another would be to devise an equitable system of distributing the fish harvest.

HOLDING THE LINE

Canada seems to be determined to hold the line against inflation. This determination deserves the earnest support of every loyal Canadian. There can only be one end to inflation. That which goes up must come down. This is as true in economics as in physics. It seems incredible that there are still those who refuse to learn the lessons of history. Following the First World War, prices ran riot. They soared until a telescope was needed to see them. Then came the crash of 1929, when prices tumbled; thousands of people went broke; millions were thrown out of work. The banks in The United States were all closed. Then industry and business started up the long, hard incline, to ordered production and distribution. They were only making noticeable headway when the Second World War broke out, and created all the economic conditions of the First World War. Now we are in a post-war world, with a scarcity of foods and an abundance of purchasing power.

The Governments, both in this country and The United States have tried to hold the line against inflation. In the United States, the Government has failed temporarily. Price ceilings have been removed, and prices have mounted phenomenally in many commodities. Unless another bill, holding prices, soon becomes law, the fears of inflation expressed by President Truman, will materialize — with wages chasing prices in an unending race. The result will be another 1929.

One result of the increasing prices in the United States has been to devalue the purchasing power of their dollar. This is reflected in Mr. Ilsley's announcement of the removal of the 10 per cent. premium in this country on American funds. The American dollar and the Canadian dollar are now at par. Along with this announcement went another and equally important one, that the ceiling prices in this country were to be maintained. This is good news. It has been hard to hold these, heretofore, against the pressure of certain business groups. It will be much more difficult to hold them should the prices in the United States go unchecked. The Canadian economy is linked so closely with that of our Neighbor to the South, that what happens there is bound to affect us. At the same time, the announcement with respect to dollar parity, and the determination to hold price ceilings in this country, shows that our Government is not lacking in courage and is ready to go to bat with the threat of inflation. It is to be hoped that they may have the support of every Canadian in this effort. Failure to hold the line now will bring untold sorrow and despair to millions, later on.

"JESUS AND SUPREME LOYALTY TO GOD"

Lesson Text: Exodus 20: 3-6; Joshua 24: 16, 22-24; Luke 14:25-27

The injunction against idols which forms the heart of this lesson, is plainly against idols and all images are out. God will have none of it. The prohibition was necessary. For the Hebrew people, like others, loved to have images, and idols. They wanted something they could see, and touch, and reverence—symbols maybe, but nevertheless idols. God forbade them.

The first verse of the lesson, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me" simply says the Israelites were to worship God, and God only. There is no denial that other gods may exist, but so far as the Hebrews were concerned they were to worship their own God, and if the Israelites obeyed, then all other gods would, for them, cease to exist, and polytheism would be done away.

Along with the belief in many gods there went in the day in which this was written, much idolatry. The Hebrews had many idols at this period in their history. When idol worship began we do not know. Probably it arose with the birth of art. The inspired writers continued all through the Old Testament to preach against the practice. Isaiah, it will be remembered, wrote vigorously against the use of silver and gold in idols (Isa. 2:8, 20). In the New Testament pure religion is implied on; use of idols is prohibited. In Christianity the principles of spiritual worship are laid down, and the introduction of anything bordering on idolatry is reprehensible. Of course there are in the christian churches certain branches of the practices of idolatry. Early in the fourth century began to revive the practice condemned by the Hebrew prophets as idolatry. R. H. Charles, one of the most profound students of this subject, puts it strongly when he writes, "Since, then, images are the embodiment of an utterly inadequate and, likewise, a degrading conception of God, God can never represent the invisible God. Israel was forbidden their use in worship. If it be Gods purpose to reveal to Israel, and through Israel, to the whole world, some of the highest and truest conceptions of the Divine attainable by man, the prohibition of images is inevitable at some period in the course of the Divine education of man. For as far as religion makes use of images, it anchors itself inevitably to a pagan level."

At the time of the reformation, the reformed church protested against the use of idols, as that were forbidden. The use persists in certain churches, and there is a growing disregard for the prohibition against their use recorded in scripture. Christians have to be on guard against this tendency. "God is a spirit and they who worship Him must worship in spirit and in truth".

The final section of the lesson is taken from Luke. It insists on the necessity of giving God first place in our lives. It is not to suggest that we should hate or ignore those related to us. What he wanted us to do was to make it clear that the service of God was primary and could not be put aside for any reason nor upon any excuse.

This phase of the lesson has many applications. Oftentimes there are many who worship God, but whose real God is other than the One to whom they claim allegiance. What is that around which life is organized? There is where we will see is your idol. Money holds most of us in thraldom. We may not be willing to admit it, but money is the fascination for most people in this materialistic age. It may not be a love of money, but rather, for power which the possession of money brings, or for the things which money can procure, by security, convenience or luxury.

Popularity, selfishness, sports, pleasure. All these, or any of them, may be a god, and is a god, when life is organized round their acquirement. Watch the people in the street car at the sports page or at the racing sheet, or the stock listings. It is not hard to decide what is their god. We cannot give God first place when these have pre-eminence in our lives. We cannot serve God and mammon.

Average Crop Seen In Western Canada

Ottawa. — Moderate rainfall and good growing weather over the next four weeks should assure "at least an average" crop in Western Canada this season, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics said in the fourth of a series of eight telegraphic reports covering crop conditions across Canada.

The Bureau reported general fair to good conditions" have been maintained in the three Prairie provinces over the last week, with "timely" rains falling in many areas where relief was urgently required.

Average precipitation since April 1, as compared with normal, has improved in all provinces while temperatures for the week ranged from three to eight degrees below normal.

Hot, dry weather in the Maritimes has reduced the hay crop and pastures are becoming short. Grain and potato crops are still promising but the early strawberry crop has been reduced. The prospects for apples still are good.

Reports from Quebec stress the seriousness of crop conditions owing to continued drought and intense heat. Hay yields are well below normal and pasture conditions have deteriorated seriously. All crops are affected by these conditions and fruit crops will yield appreciably below last year's production.

The Late Jacob G. Loucks

Jacob G. Loucks, a lifeling resident of Napanee, died at his home, Newburgh Road, on Saturday, July 6th, in his 85th year. He had been in failing health for some time, but had been confined to his bed for only a few days before his death.

He was born in the cider part of Napanee, known as Clarksville and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Loucks. When he retired, about ten years ago he had completed 54 years in the butcher business and at the time was one of the oldest business men of Napanee, both as to age and number of years in business.

He was predeceased by his wife, Nellie Philips, several years ago and by six children, Mrs. Mabel Jennie, Percy Ray, Percy Ray and Abraham. He leaves one daughter, Josephine, Mrs. Mark Shults, who resided with her father. He also leaves two brothers, Thomas, in Melita, Man., and Fletcher in Winnipeg; and one sister, Mrs. Della Wood, of Harrisburg Pa. He was predeceased by three brothers, Richard, Hamilton, and Willis.

His funeral was conducted Tuesday afternoon at the Tierney Funeral Home by Rev. Charles E. Cragg, Kettleby, Ont., a former minister of Grace Church, of which Mr. Loucks was a member, and by Rev. Noble Hatton, minister of Trinity United Church. Interment was in Riverview cemetery.

The pallbearers were four nephews, Bruce Earl, Ross and Ray Loucks, and two grandnephews, Allan and Harry Benn.

The death occurred on Thursday, June 27th, at his home in Selby, of Frederick William Weese, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Weese, of Richmond Township. Deceased was a life-long resident of the community and being of a genial disposition was liked by many. LETTER FROM GREECE

All those who have been working for the Red Cross, especially in the Enterprise Unit, will be interested to know that some of our work reached Athens, Greece, as the following letter was received recently by Miss Adelaia Wagar, of Enterprise:

Athens June 8, 1946.

Dear Madam,—

A slip of paper I have found in the pocket of a nurse shirt made me know your address, and write you. I do not know what a good thought made you do this. Anyway, it is wonderful to me, a young nurse, to know excellent land of victory and progress. My imagination flew to you, a lady of gentleness, and good heartcd. I hope you have given a lot of help to other persons during this miserable time of war.

So maybe a friendship will start between you and me, but I am so far and you understand that is impossible to meet you. The only way is to write to each other. So, by you writing, I shall hear about you time by time.

I shall write you everything about my land. I hope you have heard a lot about Greece; what hard years we passed during the German occupation.

The bright start the leader of the way to the victory and glory.

I am sorry because I don't know the American language well. Now I take lessons to the English Institute

Yours, sincerely,

Lennox - Addington Baseball Schedule

Following is the balance of the Lennox and Addington Baseball League schedule, formed this year by five teams consisting of Newburgh, Forest Mills, Enterprise, Centreville and Tamworth. Being twilight ball, five innings will be called a game and starting at 6:30 seldom more than five innings can be played before darkness.

The first three teams enter the play-offs and these will be played in the afternoon. All teams have experienced considerable trouble obtaining equipment and after six or more years of softball or more often no ball, it is only to be expected the class of ball is not fast. With public support, however, it is hoped that the younger boys who are showing a lively interest in the game, will bring baseball back to the sport it was some years ago in this county.

At the present time, Centreville is leading the league, having lost only one game, and with all teams improving we can expect better ball at play-off time.

WEDDING BELLS

HUFFMAN - WARE

A wedding of wide interest took place in Christ Church, Tamworth, at 2:00 p.m., on Saturday, June 29th, when the Rev. P. G. Ware officiated at the double wedding ring ceremony of his younger daughter, Mildred Constance, to William George, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Huffman, Tamworth, Ont. The church was filled to capacity as the beautiful but solemn rite of holy matrimony began. At the close of the ceremony the Rector spoke a few words to the couple personally, advising them to follow the exhortation provided in the Book of Common Prayer (so seldom read to-day) as a perfect guide to a successful, holy and happy married life. This part of the form of solemnization of matrimony was then read in a clear, distinct voice, which could be heard by the whole congregation. The church was decorated with white peonies, daisies and fern; the altar with Japanese and Calot peonies, and the guest pews with white bows.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. James Frith, of Toronto, entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March. She was attired in a period gown of white silk organza with printed floral pattern of orchids and lily-of-the-valley, the waist with sweetheart neckline, long row of buttons fastening the back and full length pointed sleeves. She wore a Mary Queen of Scots headdress from which fell her finger tip veil of embroidered net. Her bouquet was a cascade of red roses and bouvardia. Her only ornament was a single strand of pearls, the gift of the groom.

Miss Florence Mary Ware, elder sister, was the bride's matron of honour and was attired in a floor-length frock of pink marquisette with matching mohair picture hat and carried a colonial nosegay. Miss Mildred MacNish, of Ottawa, was bridesmaid and wore a Marie Antoinette gown of light blue taffeta, matching mohair picture hat, and carried an old-fashioned nosegay of summer flowers. The little flower girls were the Misses Joan and Barbara Leeder, nieces of the bride. They were dressed alike in pastel shades of yellow and mauve chiffon, with matching net poke bonnets with ribbon and flower trimming. They carried baby nosegays of yellow and mauve coloured flowers.

The groom was assisted by his only brother, Mr. Donald Huffman, Tamworth. The ushers were Mr. Mac Carscallen and Mr. Fred Richmond.

A reception was held by the bride's parents, at the rectory. Mrs. Ware received in a gown of Navy blue sheer with matching accessories and wore a corsage of American Beauty roses. She was assisted by Mrs. E. Huffman, mother of the groom, who wore beige faconni crepe with matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations and mauve sweetpeas. The dining room was decorated with peonies, Canterbury bells, four o'clocks, sweetpeas and pink lupin. The bride's table covered with a white linen cloth, was adorned with white tapers, flower petals and was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake. The buffet luncheon was served in the diningroom, livingroom and on the large verandah, against a background of shrubbery, summer flowers and small trees. A bevy of the bride's and groom's young friends assisted in serving luncheon to about sixty guests. Confetti was the bride and groom were taken on the lawn. Following the reception, the bridal bouquet was thrown from the stairs and was caught by Miss Anna McGrath.

After spending a honeymoon at Niagara and the Muskoka district, Mr. and Mrs. Huffman will reside in Tamworth.

The out-of-town guests were Mrs. Lorne Leeder, sister of the bride and two daughters, the Misses Joan and Barabara Leeder, Belleville; Miss Florence Mary Ware of Napanee, Mr. and Mrs. James Frith, of Toronto; Miss Mildred MacNish, of Ottawa; Mrs. Ralph Whitman, of Newburgh, and Miss Marie Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Stewart, Mrs. G. Bolin and Bryce Bolin, all of Lyn. Among those present from Kingston, were Mr. and Mrs. Mac Carscallen, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Carscallen, daughter Jean, and son, George, Mr. and Mrs. William Rogers and Gerald Rogers.

FOOD AND DRUG ACT TO BE AMENDED

Ottawa (C.P.) — The Senate gave second reading to a bill to amend the Food and Drugs Act. It was sent to committee.

Senator F. W. Gershaw (L. Man.) said its main effect was to enable regulations to be made to govern sale of 'potent new drugs,' the full potentials of which are not yet known to the medical profession. It would also strengthen bars to "rotten or disgusting commodities which might be brought into Canada and sold.

The woodcock has eyes set far back in its head so that it can see its enemies when its long bill digs deep in the ground for worms.

Being twilight ball, five innings can be called a game and starting at 6:30 seldom more than five innings can be played before darkness.

The first three teams enter the play-offs and these will be played in the afternoon. All teams have experienced considerable trouble obtaining equipment and after so many years of softball at 9:30 often on no ball, it is only to be expected the class of ball is not fast. With public support, however, it is hoped that the younger boys who are showing a lively interest in the game, will bring baseball back to the sport it was some years ago in this county.

At the present time, Centreville is leading the league, having lost only one game, and with all teams improving we can expect better ball at play-off time.

WEDDING BELLS

HUFFMAN - WARE

A wedding of wide interest took place in Christ Church, Tamworth, at 2:00 p.m., on Saturday, June 29th, when the Rev. F. O. Ware officiated at the double wedding ceremony of his younger daughter, Ethelreda Constance, to William George, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy J. Huffman, of Tamworth, Ont. The church was filled to capacity as the beautiful but solemn rite of holy matrimony began. At the close of the ceremony the rector spoke a few words to the couple personally, advising them to follow the exhortation provided in the Book of Common Prayer (so seldom read to-day) as a perfect guide to a successful, holy and happy married life. This part of the form of solemnization of matrimony was then read in a clear, distinct voice, which could be heard by the whole congregation. The church was decorated with white peonies, daisies and fern; the altar with Japanese and Calla lilies, and the guest pews with white bows

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. James Frith, of Toronto, entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's Wedding March. She was attired in a period gown of white silk organza with printed floral garlands of cendle and lily-of-the-valley, basque waist, sweetheart neckline, long row of buttons fastening up the back and full length pointed sleeves. She wore a Mary Queen of Scots headdress from which fell her finger tip veil of embroidered net. Her bouquet was a cascade of red roses and lily-of-the-valley. Her ornament was a single strand of pearls, the gift of the groom.

Miss Florence Huffman, elder sister, was the bride's maid-of-honor, and was attired in a floor-length frock of pink ninon taffeta, matching mohair picture hat and carried a colonial nosegay. Miss Mildred MacNish, of Ottawa, was bridesmaid and wore a Marie Antoinette gown of light blue taffeta, matching mohair picture hat, and carried an old-fashioned nosegay of summer flowers. The little flower girls were the Misses Joan and Barbara Leeder, nieces of the bride. They were dressed alike in pastel shades of yellow and mauve chiffon, with matching net poke bonnets with ribbon and flower trimming. They carried baby nosegays of yellow and mauve coloured flowers.

The groom was assisted by his only brother, Mr. Donald Huffman, Tamworth. The ushers were Mr. Mac Carscallen and Mr. Fred Richmond.

A reception was held by the bride's parents, at the rectory. Mrs. Ware received in a gown of Navy blue sheer with matching accessories and wore a corsage of American Beauty roses. She was assisted by Mrs. E. Huffman, mother of the groom, who wore beige faconni crepe with matching accessories and a corsage of white carnations and mauve sweetpeas. The dining room was decorated with peonies, Canterbury bells, four o'clocks, sweetpeas and pink lupin. The bride's table served with a white linen cloth, was adorned with tall white tapers, Peter Rabbit and was centred with a three-tiered wedding cake. The buffet luncheon was served in the diningroom, livingroom and on the large verandah, against a background of shrubbery, summer flowers and small trees. A bevy of the bride's and groom's young friends assisted in serving luncheon to about sixty guests. Pictures of the bride and groom were taken on the lawn. Following the reception, the bridal bouquet was thrown from the stairs and was caught by Miss Anna McGrath.

After spending a honeymoon at Niagara and the Muskoka district, Mr. and Mrs. Huffman will reside in Tamworth.

The out-of-town guests were Mrs. Lorne Leeder, sistgr of the bride and two daughters, the Misses Joan and Barabara Leeder, of Brockville; Miss Florence Mary Ware of Napanee, Mr. and Mrs. James Frith, of Toronto; Miss Mildred MacNish, of Ottawa; Mrs. Ralph Wightman, of Newburgh, Mr. and Mrs. Harris MacNish, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Stewart, Mrs. G. Bolin and Miss Verna Bolin, all of Lyn. Among those present from Kingston, were Mr. and Mrs. Mac Carscallen, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Carscallen, daughter Jean, and son, George, Mr. and Mrs. William Rogers and Gerald Rogers.

BIRD — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Robert A. Bird, who passed away, July 11th, 1945.
In a quiet hillside graveyard,
Where the breezes gently blow,
Lies the one we loved so dearly,
That we lost one year ago.
God knew the path was weary,
And the hills were hard to climb,
So He called you away dear loved one
And whispered, "Peace be thine."
You left behind some aching hearts,
That loved you most sincere;
We never did, we never will,
Forget you, father dear.

"What do you mean . . . I'm lucky?"

Lucky lad! Getting snagged on the wire in his effort to climb over a Hydro barrier . . . probably to recover a ball . . . may have saved his life. Some boys have not been so lucky.

Hydro energy is one of the finest things we have in Ontario to make for better living. But it can stop one from living, if you thoughtlessly give it a chance to flash through your body. Every possible precaution for safety is taken by your Hydro; but once in a while someone gets careless or "takes a chance", and tragedy strikes. A boy climbs a pole and touches a wire. Or he flies his kite near a Hydro line, and it contacts a high-voltage circuit and carries death or injury to whoever is holding it. Sometimes a storm breaks down a line and someone takes hold of the broken live wire with disastrous results. These are just examples of acts that are beyond the power of Hydro to prevent. Your Hydro can only warn of danger, and seek co-operation of parents and teachers and all who have influence with those who might expose themselves to that danger.

Hydro need never be a threat to anyone who:

1. Will not climb poles.
2. Will stay away from distribution lines and transformer stations.
3. Will keep away from fallen wires.

For your safety, in case of trouble immediately notify your nearest Hydro office. But never, never touch a fallen wire.

IF YOU SOMETIMES FIND TELEPHONE SERVICE SLOW...

There's a Reason!

When your telephone call takes longer than you think it should, please remember —

There's a critical shortage of telephone equipment all over the country—in fact, all over the world!

In order that as few applicants as possible may have to wait for service, we are connecting more telephones than our central office equipment was intended to handle. It is heavily overloaded. Our operators are doing their utmost to complete calls with a minimum of delay, but slow service on some calls is inevitable.

Manufacturers of telephone equipment are working night and day to catch up on civilian needs after having had to devote all their output to war purposes. Intricate equipment takes time—both to manufacture and to instal.

We are confident that our subscribers will be indulgent if service is slow on some of their calls when they reflect that the prime reason is that we are trying to serve as many applicants as we possibly can.

We ask your tolerant cooperation until we are able to clean up this difficult equipment shortage situation.

The regular meeting of Maple Ridge W. I. was held on Thursday, June 13th, at the home of Mrs. Roy Robertson. There was a good initial attendance of members, and several visitors, including three brides, recent newcomers to the community. The meeting was in charge of the president, Mrs. Harold Dupre, who reminded the members of the roll call contest which is being conducted this year to encourage and interest all in general participation in the programs. The contest got off to a good start with response to the June roll call. A recipe using your Favorite Vegetable. Also reminded to help in the coming drive for clothing for shipment overseas. A letter was read re a short course in Citizenship to be held at Queen's University, from July 8 to July 19.

Mrs. O. Young, district director, spoke of the course in Citizenship to take place this Fall, also of the officers' rally, same time as the spring. Members were asked to turn in all meat coupons that could be spared and Mrs. Benn was appointed to receive the coupons and hand them to the local Ration Board. An interesting feature was an exchange of plants and slips. Current events were given by Mrs. Frank Amey and Mrs. E. Robinson of Selby demonstrated the making of bias binding. Mrs. Merle Denison read an article on the manufacture of the different varieties of sugar, after which Mrs Jas. McCarter contributed a pleasing song. Mrs. H. Schermerhorn gave a very ful report of the Dist. Annual Convention, held in Napanee on May 29, stressing the need of leadership in all W. I. work. We should acquaint ourselves to taking a small part in every meeting and as this becomes familiar and easy, proceed to something more difficult. The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Women's Institute will be observed next year and all branches are urged to have a special program to commemorate the occasion. Mrs. Denison and Mrs. James Rose, Selby, gave a skit, which was enjoyed. Humorous items were served and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

SELBY MISSION BAND

The monthly meeting of the Selby Mission Band was held in the Sunday school room on Saturday afternoon, June 22. The meeting opened by repeating the Members' Purpose. In the absence of the president the vice-president, Frances Robinson, read the call to worship. A hymn was sung and Marie Price led in prayer. The scripture consisted of three readings by Judy Kimmett, Muriel Pringle and Frances Robinson. Five questions were asked, which were answered responsively. The roll call was answered by a verse from the Bible, containing the word love. The minutes were read by the secretary and approved. Marion Henderson gave a piano solo which was much enjoyed and Shirley Frisken read a piece on Canada for the watch tower. Muriel Pringle gave a reading on temperance and a hymn was sung. Edith Pringle took up the collection and Shirley Frisken gave a reading. Mrs. Frisken read a chapter from the study book and a hymn was sung after which all repeated the Mispah benediction. Frances Robinson conducted a Bible contest, and boxes of assorted cards were given out to sell.

The programme, based on social welfare, was prepared by Mrs. Ivan McFarlane. Assembly singing was followed by a reading by Miss H. Armstrong. Current events were outlined by Mrs. Morley Schermerhorn and Don. McFarlane favored with two vocal selections. Bob Bessett gave a piano solo. Mrs. Ivan McFarlane read a splendid paper on Adult Education and Dental services in our Public Schools. SWITZERVILLE MISSION BAND

An outdoor meeting of the Busy Bee Mission Band was held at the home of Mrs. Fred Wales, Wednesday afternoon, July 3rd, with the president in charge.

While the children were gathering some played games while others were busy at African cut-outs. After the opening exercises the call to worship was responded to in a song. Mary Vanalstyne gave the scripture reading and Beulah Craig the prayer. The offering was received by Glen Benn and Jack Spafford and was dedicated in song.

Short items on temperance, stewardship and peace were read by the beralds, Garnet Craig, Gerald Benn and Elaine Benn, and watch tower notes were read by John Craig, Leonard Moore and Rosemary Moore.

We were pleased to have with us Miss Muriel Craig, the first president of our Band, when it was organized, who is now training for missionary work. Small Sums Exempt From Investment Control in Britain

London (Reuters) — Governmental control of investments in Britain will be limited to those of more than £10,000 ($44,500) in any one year, under a Government amendment accepted by the House of Lords last week.

Dominions Secretary Viscount Addison, leader of the House, said the amendment was intended to make it clear the Government did not desire to interefere with small transactions.

The Conservatives agreed not to insist on their amendment, passed last week by their overwhelming majority in the Lords, which would have limited the power of control to a period of five years. The House of Commons refused to accept this amendment, stating that it was the Government's intention to make such control permanent.

U. S. War Department Members of Eldorado Mining, Refining, Ltd.

Bath, June 29. — Honor and distinction has come to five citizens of Port Hope , for participating with specili in the development of the world's most spectacular and sensational scientific discovery to date, the Atomic Bomb.

These folks are employees of Eldorado Mining and Refining, Limited. The honor is that of being chosen to receive public mention from the United States War Department, the chief agency responsible for bringing the atomic bomb into use as a weapon during the recent war and at present the custodian of the vital secret formula on which its production is based.

The five mentioned are as follows: J. C. Burger, J. B. Kearns, R. H. Farmer, A. H. Ross and Miss Grace Brackenbury.

A few days ago each of the five named received from Washington, a certificate which read as follows:

United States of America
War Department,
Army Service Forces,
Corps of Engineers,
Manhattan District.

This is to certify that ——, Eldorado Mining and Refining, Limited, has participated in work essential to the production of the atomic bomb, thereby contributing to the successful conclusion of World War Two. This certificate is awarded in appreciation of effective service.

Henry L. Stinson,
Secretary of War.

Washington, D.C.

This citation does not disclose details due to the unparalleled secrecy surrounding the whole episode. These five members were chosen because of the importance of the duties entrusted to them in the perfection of the bomb. They also received a lapel crest, bearing the words, "Manhattan Project — A-Bomb," set over the seal adopted for the Manhattan Project. Certain phases of the work on the bomb were carried out at a plant in connection with Chicago University's metallurgical laboratories.

WAR BRIDES ENTERTAINED AT MELROSE HOME

A very pleasant afternoon was spent recently, by approximately fifty war brides, children and friends, when Mrs. Jack English, Melrose, entertained at a delightfully arranged garden party on the spacious lawns of her home. Mrs. English, who was born in Shotts, Scotland, found a number of her guests from her native country, although the majority of the brides were from England. During the afternoon the brides were given the opportunity of visiting with friends as the children went on tours of inspection to admire cows and rabbits. Later, tea was served as the guests sat around tables placed on the verandah. After the guests had all been seated, Mrs. English announced that three "lucky chairs" were marked, those sitting on them to receive prizes. The three winners were Mrs. Rodgers, of Newbury, Berkshire; Mrs. Lester, Cottenham, London, and Mrs. MacDonald, Glasgow, Scotland.

Assisting Mrs. English in receiving the guests and serving the delcious refreshments were Mrs. William McMechan, Mrs. Russell McFarlane, Mrs. Kenneth Badgley, Mrs. Eugene Badgley, Mrs. Sherry DeMille, Mrs. Ed. Lasier, Mrs. G. Morgan and Mrs. C. E. Sexsmith

Readers may direct their questions, giving their name and address and mentioning the name of this paper, to the Information Branch, WPTB, 420 Sussex Street, Ottawa, Ontario.

Q. My husband has not yet returned from Overseas and I am worried about him getting civilian clothes. I notice priority certificates are no longer issued to veterans. Is there anything I can do about it before he arrives home in September?

A. You have been misinformed. Priority certificates will not be issued after October 30, 1946, but your husband will be entitled to receive one if he arrives home before that date. These certificates will be valid for purchase of a suit up to December, 1946.

Q. Is the price of an automobile controlled by the Board when it is offered for sale at an auction?

A. Yes. All motor vehicles are subject to price ceiling regulations regardless of how they are sold.

Q. We have returned man and my wife an English bride, we are not very familiar with price control regulations. I went into a store and bought a quarter of a watermelon and was charged 70c. I saw a quarter in another store for 45c. Is this legal?

A. It is possible that both stores were selling watermelon within the ceiling price. The melon is sold by the pound and ceiling price a pound is 26c. As you probably noticed, some of the melons are larger than others and, naturally, a quarter of a larger melon would weigh more than that of a smaller one. If you write again and send your name and address we will place your wife's name on our mailing list to receive a copy of Consumer's News each month. This pamphlet contains latest news on price control and rationing regulations.

Q. Is there still a ceiling price on hotel rates? I sent my reservations in for accommodation for two weeks and find the rates almost twice what they were last year.

A. Yes. There is still a ceiling on hotel rates. Hotels may not raise their prices without permission from the Rentals Administration, and while a few increases have been granted, certainly no hotel would be permitted to double their rates. Every hotel room must display a card indicating ceiling rent.

ANDERSON W. A.

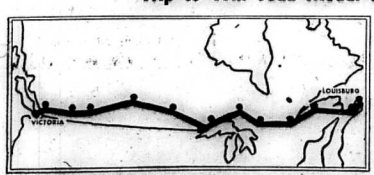
ANOTHER "FIRST" FOR CHEVROLET

Brigadier R. A. Macfarlane, D.S.O.

1946 Stylemaster Sedan Makes First Trans-Canada Trip to Win Todd Medal for Brig. R. A. Macfarlane



DOWN "CANADA'S MAIN STREET" — The Trans-Canada Highway, which links province to province, from sea to sea, and opens the way to a great new era of tourist travel.

Rolling along "Canada's Main Street" — the Trans-Canada Highway — from coast to coast, Brigadier R. A. Macfarlane, D.S.O., at the wheel of a new 1946 Chevrolet Sedan, has just completed the first ocean-to-ocean automobile trip without leaving Canadian soil.

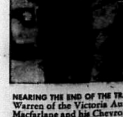
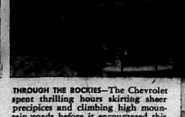
The Chevrolet used was a stock 1946 model powered with a standard six-cylinder valve-in-head engine. It was selected by Brig. Macfarlane — who held the responsible posts of Director of Mechanization and Deputy Master-General of Ordnance, at Defence Headquarters, Ottawa — because he is convinced that a "sturdy, light, economical passenger car is ideal for the average Canadian citizen." With his extensive experience of army vehicles, on the testing grounds and on active service in two wars, Brig. Macfarlane made the new Chevrolet his choice for his history-making trip—another "first" for Chevrolet!

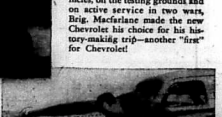
NEARING THE END OF THE TRAIL—J. V. Johnson and George Warren of the Victoria Automobile Club, meet Brigadier Macfarlane and his Chevrolet a few miles outside Victoria and escort him into the City.



THE AWARD—Winning of the Todd Medal, offered in 1912, became possible with completion of the Trans-Canada Highway. It is now awarded to Brig. R. A. Macfarlane for the first authenticated journey from Louisburg, Cape Breton, to Victoria, B.C., over a specified all-Canadian route.



THE PACIFIC!—After 4,743 miles of rapid, trouble-free driving, Brigadier Macfarlane and his co-driver dip the front wheels of their Chevrolet in the Pacific Ocean — to win the A. E. Todd Gold Medal.



THROUGH THE ROCKIES—The Chevrolet spent thrilling hours skirting sheer precipices and climbing high mountain roads before it encountered this quiet little valley in Canada's Rocky Range.

Lumbermen's Picnic

An all-time attendance record of 5,000 featured the Lumbermen's Picnic, held at Cloyne, on Saturday, June 29th afternoon and evening. The grounds were a swarming mass of humanity and never before has this little village been visited by so many people at one time. The few intermittent showers in the early afternoon did not dampen the spirits of the crowd who were too interested to think of taking shelter.

This annual affair has gradually grown from a small group of lumber mill operators and their employees to one of the features of the year. Everyone within a radius of seventy miles goes to The Lumbermen's Picnic—in fact this year's attendance proved it was no longer a small group's "day out".

Most of the credit for the success of the big day goes to the committee headed this year by Wallace Johnston of the Sawyer Stoll Lumber Company, and his assistants. Hugh Wilson and Doug. Aikenbrack. Mr. Melvin Cuttan was Secretary-Treasurer. The smaller lumber companies cooperated in no small way, but it was "the big three" that really supervised the program and made all the arrangements.

The parade which was scheduled for 2:00 p.m., was held up when the St. Andrew's Girls Pipe Band, and the two ladies softball teams failed to arrive by bus from Toronto. Later, the event went on without the Toronto girls to take the lid off the day's program and it was nearly 4:00 p.m. before the band and softball teams arrived from the Queen City. However, they took an important part in adding to the day's enjoyment when they finally did put in an appearance.

In the parade were the line team of the Sawyer Stoll Lumber Co., driven by George Atkinson, the 4-horse hitch driven by Mr. McLean, and owned by T. A. Wilson, and two more Sawyer Stell teams driven by Dan Laberge and Cecil Dafoe. T. A. Wilson also showed another team, followed by teams driven by Mr. Fenwick of Enterprise, A. F. McKnight, Selby, and a stallion owned by Robert Thompson, of Picton.

LUMBERMEN'S SKILL TESTED

The ability to saw through a timber thirteen inches square proved to be no mean feat, with W. Schuster and L. Muscow sawing themselves to victory in 14½ seconds. L. Marquardt and his partner R. Swartz, took second place by finishing two seconds later, and third prize was won by Harold Zadow and A. Verch, completing their job in 18½ seconds. Jamieson Eady had filled the axes of all three winning teams.

After the hand sawyers had demonstrated their technique, W. B. Beatty and C. C. Murphy of Tazmine, showed what could be done with the latest power-driven chain type cross-cut saw. The mechanical equipment cut through the log in a little over six seconds, proving that human power is no match for a master machine.

The ancient sport of catching the greased pig, proved somewhat unsuccessful for both animal and hunters who, were handicapped by overzealous spectators rushing in their path. Harry Warren, Arden, caught the slithery porker, which was the prize for the event.

BEAUTY QUEEN CHOSEN

The beauty contest provided a galaxy of good-looking northern maidens, thirty-five in all, bedecked in everything from slacks to dress-up costumes. Some of the entrants were even trailed by their offspring. Doris Woodman of Flinton was judged the northern beauty queen, with Miss Annie Meeks, Cloyne, Jean Murray of Cleveland, Ohio, and a sister of the winner, Alice Woodman, capturing the balance of the prizes.

The Baby Show was also greeted with a large entry list. Little Miss Judy Thompson, Northbrook, took honors, with tiny Alice Westgate, of Griffith, and William Charles Wells, Cloyne, close contenders.

With only a pike pole to help him keep his balance, Lawrence Woodcock, Henderson, kept an even keel while he pushed a log across the water in the log burling contest. He was so adept at this particular game that he even sprawled on the log, sat on it with legs criss-cross and finally managed to take a drink from the lake. All this was enacted without a single ducking. The other contestant, Wesley Good, gave up the prize-money after his second dip into the briny deep.

With chips flying where they may Harold Zadow chopped his way to first place in the chopping contest in one minute flat, followed closely by W. Scruder in one minute and six seconds.

In the horse drawing contest, the beautiful team owned by T. A. Wilson, Canningt.n, walked away with the heaviest load. Arthur McKnight a team, of Selby, and Oscar Fenwick's of Enterprise, took the remainder of the honors. Mr. William Woods of Tweed, supervised this event.

OLDEST MAN

John Cassidy, Stoco's grand old man of 93 years, was the oldest person present. His ten children, still living, all reside in the Stoco and Tweed districts, and many of his offspring are connected with the lumbering business. R. W. Ramsay, of Napanee, at the youthful age of 75 years, lets his family operate his business now. Mrs. Nathan Mallory, women of Mountain Grove, was the oldest lady present, at 87 years.

After the Toronto softball team had arrived on the Tote-to-Fun, defeated Crofton ladies 6-5, Tweed men's team took on the all-stars promising the latter a tune of 13-10.

Mr. E. J. Courneya, Tamworth, local auctioneer, acted as master of ceremonies, assisted by Mr. D. C. Aikenbrack. Photographers from the two dailies were on hand to get pictures of the big show, along the National Film board photographer. Also in the crowd were executives of large Ontario firms and companies.

In the evening, thousands were about the grounds and danced to the open-air floor and the Radio Rhythmers' orchestra. Tweed

All in all it was a big day and one men, the latter didn't have a chance from the outset. that will be remembered in northern history as "best yet."

"Just as the newspapers sold in the streets of the thirteen quarrelsome states of the Union, so also can the newspapers sell federalized to the world," says Ada P. McCormick, in the Magazine News-Letter.

Vigorous Address Heard With Interest By Orangemen

Large Attendance at Celebration in Napanee

The Anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne was observed in an enthusiastic celebration at the Napanee Driving Park on Friday, July 12th, by hundreds of Orangemen of the County of Lennox and Addington and nearby districts and many of their friends and supporters.

The attendance at the Driving Park totalled several thousand people, who heard with interest addresses by Hon. T. Ashmore Kidd, M.P., Kingston; Grandmaster of the Ontario Grand Lodge, and W. G. Armstrong, editor of "The Sentinel." Entertainment included a baseball game, motorcycle races and horse races.

The County Master, Charles McConnell, Napanee, acted as chairman and welcomed the members of the lodges, and visitors, and the speakers. Past County Master E. P. Purcell, Colebrook, introduced Col. Kidd who, in turn, introduced the guest speaker, W. G. Armstrong.

COL. KIDD SPEAKS

Colonel Kidd made a brief reference to

1. The Canadian Citizenship Act.
2. The Act dealing with the change from Dominion to Canada Day;
3. The Flag;
4. Redistribution.

In nothing else has been accomplished, he said, by the presentation of these Acts, it has brought to the attention of the public, that there is no anti-British element in the House of Commons and throughout Canada. This definitely came out in the discussions which took place when these Bills were being presented.

At the present time there is no finality on the Flag nor on Canada Day.

Our Order has every reason to be proud of the leadership it has taken and the stand it has taken on these issues.

Referring to the immigration issue, he said:

"Immigration cannot be approached without dealing with emigration. Our Order has never hesitated to make known its views and the stand it has taken for the last quarter of a century, particularly immediately before and since World War I.

"There is to-day, a condition rapidly developing in Canada which is most alarming. It is a repetition of what occurred from 1920 and 1930. During the past twelve months, hundreds, yes thousands, of Canada's best citizens have been emigrating across the border to The United States. This is no fault of their own. It is due to the condition existing in Canada at the present moment. Boys from the best Canadian families who have been educated in our collegiates, technical schools and universities, are going across the line to better themselves and for the reason that no suitable employment or positions are available for them, here, at home. You will recall that in the early twenties, Canada lost 100,000 citizens, annually for a period of ten years, 1,000,000 of our best Canadian citizens are now coming to Canada when the wives and husbands of the Canadian Army who were married overseas and are now coming to Canada when transportation is available. Canada's immigration should be most carefully supervised to see that there is no re-occurrence of the happenings in the early twenties. During the ten year period, there entered Canada 150,000 annually; 100,000 from the British Isles and 100,000 from Central Europe and elsewhere. This meant that for every three immigrants entering Canada, only one was British, and for every British immigrant entering Canada we had two native Canadians to The United States."

MR. ARMSTRONG'S ADDRESS

In his address, Mr. Armstrong congratulated the officers of the County Loyal Orange Lodge for making the arrangements for celebrating the Anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne. Never in the history of Canada, he said, was there a more serious time than to-day. The Orange Lodge, he added, was criticized for celebrating the anniversary of the Boyne, when he said there was as much reason to go back to that victory over Roman Catholicism as for the Protestant Churches to go back to Palestine and The Nazarene. The Battle of the Boyne had saved Protestantism for Europe and also for the whole world. If the battle of the Boyne had not been won Protestantism would not be existent to-day.

Referring to current issues, Mr. Armstrong said that, what is taking place at Ottawa is no surprise. There is a definite plan and a great design, he added, for the domination of Canada by forces that control Quebec. To-day the Government of Canada rests in the hands of the 65 members from Quebec in the Parliament of Canada. The Quebec members can go to the Government and ask for anything they want and, if they don't get what they want, they can put the Government out of power. That is why, Mr. Armstrong said, the Government has, this week, introduced a bill for a new Canadian flag, and why the Government is being asked to change the name of Dominion Day to Canada Day.

The new Citizenship Bill, Mr. Armstrong said, means that people from Great Britain must wait as long to become citizens of Canada as any Alien from Central Europe. Another feature of the Citizenship Bill is that that to become a citizen of Canada, the applicant must speak either English or French. That, he said, puts the French language on the same basis as the English language throughout Canada. There will never be real unity in Canada, he added, until all Canadians speak one language, and that language — English. United States unity, he said, is based on the fact that all the people who are citizens of the country are required to speak English. In Quebec, the French language, he stated, is used as a barrier from the other people in Canada.

Before the last general election in Canada, there were rumors prevalent, Mr. Armstrong said, that indicated the Liberal Cabinet was committed to a platform which would lead to the breaking away of Canada from the Empire. Recent events led one to believe that such a movement was on foot. Col. Ralston, a former member of the Cabinet, an ardent Imperialist, was out of the Cabinet on the conscription issue. A new flag for Canada is on the way and Quebec wants to see Canada out of the Empire and a member of the Pan American Union.

One of the greatest disasters that could befall Canada, Mr. Armstrong said, would be to have it withdraw from the British Empire. The Empire is bound together by sentiment and is a force for peace in the world. Canada, he stated, is the keystone of the Empire. Canada must remain in the Empire and must oppose the ideas being advanced by Quebec.

Mr. Armstrong concluded his address by stating that whatever flag is adopted for Canada, the Orange Order will continue to fly the Union Jack.

British Wives to Join Men in Germany

London (Reuters) — A plan to enable wives and families of men of the British forces in Germany and of the Control Commission to join their men will begin operating Aug. 29, Capt. F. Bellenger, financial secretary to the War Office, told the House of Commons.

Men who expect to serve at least another year in Germany may apply to have their families sent out. An appeal to War Secretary Jack J. Lawson in the Commons to have this qualification reduced to six months, was turned down.

Tributes Paid Gifts Presented

(By Moscow Correspondent)

The Moscow Community and Moscow Red Cross Units sponsored a "Welcome Home Night" for those who had served in World War II. The reception was held in the United Church, followed by lunch which was served in the Orange Hall. Both the church and hall were nicely decorated with flags and cut flowers.

Mr. Edgar Drew acted as chairman and seated on the platform with him were Rev. Mr. Oldham, pastor of Camden East parish, Rev. Mr. Baugh of Tamworth United Church and Mr. W. Breault, of Centreville. Reeve of Camden Township. Mrs. Arthur McGaw acted as pianist and Moscow Young People led in assembly singing.

Those in the service were ushered to the front seats and all sang "O Canada". The chairman welcomed the boys and girls to the community and expressed the wish that, as each went back to civilian life, they might find the calling they were best suited for.

In the absence of Rev. Mr. Fletcher, the pastor of the church, Rev. Mr. Baugh of Tamworth United Church and Rev. Mr. Oldham of Camden East Anglican Church, gave very splendid talks to the boys and welcomed them back to Canada and to the churches of their choice. Mr. Breault, Reeve of Camden, also spoke feeling to the guests of honor and welcomed them home again.

Two minutes silence was observed in memory of those who had lost their lives during the war.

Miss Leafa Drew gave a vocal solo and Miss Dorothy Kerr a reading, both of which were well received. The chairman asked the secretary of the Red Cross, Mrs. C. A. Baker, to read the names of the guests of honor and as each came to the front, Miss Ella Fox, president of the Red Cross, presented them with a pen and pencil set. Of the twenty-six servicemen, twenty-three received gifts at that time and only three were left to be mailed.

A lunch was served at the hall by serving girls and boys of the community taking charge of the serving.

The chairman expressed the thanks of the community, to all who had helped to make the evening so successful.

SMALL GIRL VISITOR FROM MANITOBA DROWNED, ROBLIN

A very sad fatality occurred at Roblin on Saturday, July 13th, when Lily Ellen, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Llowarch, of Carman, Manitoba, was drowned in the Salmon River, near the village.

The young girl, who had come from Manitoba the day before to visit Mrs. Llowarch's cousin, Mrs. Voiney Woods, and family, was fishing, and by her father, Mr. Llowarch's fishing line became entangled in a tree on the bank opposite where she was fishing, and, before wading across the river to loosen it, he left his daughter on the river bank. When he turned to look for her a few minutes later she was nowhere in sight. He thought she might have returned to the Woods' home and went to look for her. Not finding her there he returned to the river and discovered her body on the river bed in a few feet of water. Efforts to revive her were unavailing, said Dr. T. A. Galbraith, Napanee, Coroner, who was called, pronounced death due to accidental drowning.

The little girl was Mr. and Mrs. Llowarch's only child. Mrs. Llowarch was formerly Idris Dewitt, daughter of the late John Dewitt, formerly of the Napanee district.

Her funeral was conducted at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Volney Woods, Roblin, on Monday afternoon, and interment was made in Riverside cemetery, Napanee.

Mrs. William Barnes, sister-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, and her family, of Napanee, were also guests.

Sports Programme Provided For Crowd At 12th Celebration

At the Napanee Driving Park on Friday, July 12th, the committee in charge of arrangements for the L.O.L. celebration, in addition to arranging for the programme of addresses, provided an interesting programme of sports, which followed the addresses.

The track was in rather bad condition because of the rain of the previous night, but after being dragged for some time in the early part of the afternoon, the scheduled motor cycle races were run off.

Five young men from the vicinity entered the races. They were Bruce Bishop, Belleville; Bill Earl, Kingston; Murv. Burkholder, Belleville; Walter Scott, Kingston, and George Bennington, Kingston. The starter was Mack Smith and the timekeeper was Bob Smith. George Bennington had a crackup, in which his machine was badly damaged, but he himself escaped injury.

A baseball game between the Rotary and Legion resulted in a win for the former, with a score of 5—2.

During the afternoon drawings were made on a pair of quilts, which were won by Mrs. B. M. Black, and on a pair of pillow cases, won by L. Lecoeur, London, Ont.

Car Sideswiped On Dundas Street

On Friday afternoon, July 12th, Constable Benn investigated a motor accident at the foot of Piety Hill, where a tourist from the United States was sideswiped by a Smith Transport while attempting to pass the transport. Both cars were going west and the passenger car struck a metal sign on the south side of the street.

The transport failed to stop and no evidence is available in connection. The driver of the transport informed the Belleville police that he had no knowledge of striking the car and no charge was laid. Damage to the passenger car was not very extensive.

Lions International Elect C. D. Pierce New President

Annual Convention at Philadelphia This Week

Chicago, (Special) — Clifford D. Pierce of Memphis, Tennessee, is the new president of the International Association of Lions Clubs. He was unanimously advanced from the first vice-presidency to the presidency at the annual convention of the Association which closes July 19th, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Pierce succeeds retiring president, Dr. Ramiro Collazo, of Havana, Cuba.

The Philadelphia convention conducted one of the most successful years in the history of Lions International, according to the report made by the Secretary General, Melvin Jones. He reported the formation of 685 new Lions Clubs and the addition of 60,532 men to the roster of the Association in the twelve-month period ended June 30th, 1946, which raised the total club figure to 5,400 and the membership to 270,116, which is the largest in the history of the International Association. He also stated that during the year Lions Clubs had been established for the first time in three additional countries or territories—Ecuador, Bermuda, and Curacao, NWI.

In 1930 Pierce became a member of the Memphis Lions Club, which club is one of the first 27 of the Association. He has been secretary and president of his club and has served continuously as a member of its board of directors. He has been zone chairman, deputy district governor, governor of the Lions of Tennessee, and vice-chairman of the board of governors of Lions International. He was elected a director of the International Association at the annual convention held in Toronto, Ontario, in July 1942, and since that time has held the offices of third vice-president, second vice-president and first vice-president of the Association.

Lion Pierce was born on a farm near Somerville, Tennessee, and lived in Weatherford, Texas, from 1900 to 1905. With his family he returned to Tennessee where he attended school and was graduated from Fayette County High School, Somerville, in 1917. Upon graduation he immediately began war work in Washington, D.C., and during World War I he served in the Student Army Training Corps. After four years in George Washington University he was graduated, in 1921, with the degree of LL.B. He promptly returned to Memphis Tennessee, where he began the practice of law.

President Pierce is a partner in the law firm of Harris and Pierce of Memphis. He is a Kappa Alpha, a Scottish Rite Mason, a Shriner and a Methodist.

Newburgh Int. Edge Lions Juveniles

The Lions Juvenile Baseball Team were visitors at the Newburgh Intermediate Club on Monday of this week and were defeated to the tune of a small ball game.

The kids held the homeruns to three for three innings, when a hit and two bunches paved the way for four more runs. The locals gathered another counter on a walk and stolen bases and a pass ball. In the last frame the Newburgh team took the lead when a long hit to right field scored it by two, and it minded to made the circuit.

The game was called owing to failing light when Clarke was hit on the forehead by a wild pitch.

The return game is scheduled for Wednesday evening, July 24th, at 6:30, and should draw a record crowd.

Local Intermediates Win Ex. Ball Game

At the Lions sponsored Gibbard Park on Saturday, Newburgh the boys Intermediates had little difficulty in the presence of the Kingston Nationals in an exhibition affair.

Loose playing and errors paved the way for their 14 to 9 count for the locals.

Perry and Blute did hurling duties for Napanee, and George and Campbell went the route for the visitors. A fair crowd witnessed the encounter.

Magistrate's Court

In the Magistrate's Court on Thursday Glen Lochbrenn and W. R. Wilson, both of Napanee, pleaded guilty to having liquor in a public place and each paid a fine of $1.00 plus costs.

Lawrence Fox, Napanee, for being intoxicated in a public place went to gaol for 10 days, failing to pay a fine of $10.00 and costs.

James McMahon of Yarker, charged with two counts of driving a motor car while under the influence of liquor on the highway, paid $5.00 and costs.

Jack Sutton, Napanee, charged with careless driving, was remanded one week for hearing and sentence.

Donald Wilbur Sudbury, Brockville, was charged with the theft of approximately $200.00 from E. J. Courtenay, Tamworth. Part of the evidence was taken and the case was adjourned for one week.

Fourteen Strike-Outs In Junior Tilt

On Friday night, at the Lions sponsored baseball park the Lions Juniors edged Rotary 8 to 7 in one of the best games of the season.

Gladden for the Lions, struck out 14 would-be hitters and allowed only one hit until the end of the sixth, Lions led until that time, 5 to 0, when both teams tired and costly errors ran up the score.

Tommy Williams, for Rotary, also pitched airtight ball, but was let down in the latter part of the game by his teammates.

IN PALESTINE

The situation in Palestine is to say the least, tense. Just what the solution will be is anybody's guess. But it is quite evident that a false move now, or a wrong decision may precipitate a great deal more carnage and bloodshed. The Arabs in Palestine do not want any more Jews in the country, other than those permitted under the British agreement. The Jews, on the other hand, press for unrestricted immigration into Palestine. The joint British and American Committee recommended that one hundred thousand Jewish Refugees from Europe be permitted to enter the country. There we have the three points of view. The Jews already in Palestine and their Zionist friends all over the world, are pressing for more of the displaced Jews to enter Palestine. The Arabs are fighting to keep them out.

The time has probably come when we should take another look at political Zionism. We have been sympathetic with the desire of many Jews to return to Palestine and build up again, a national home land. This is political idealism. As much as we would like to see that, it seems now as though the movement is a misguided one. It is idealistic, to be sure, and would be well enough were there no Arabs in Palestine. But with half the population Arabs, the idea of large numbers of Jews being permitted entrance must be viewed realistically. There are Arabs in Palestine. They do not want more than their quota of new Jewish families, and are prepared to resist any effort to bring them in.

Should violence go much further, it is not at all improbable that many of the Jews now resident in Palestine may be set upon and killed by the enraged Arabs. A Press correspondent who has spent thirty years in the Middle East, writes, that "it is possible to argue the merits of political Zionism on the basis of right and wrong, of aught and aught not, of why and wherefore. Here on the ground, where the complications are infinitely clearer than at a distance, one can only try to make the outsider see the consequences of forced immigration. And one of these consequences may easily be suffering, even the slaughter of countless Jews residing here for generations. Must they remain the forgotten men of the Jewish world?"

It is to be hoped that extremists on both sides will be cooled off and a sane and permanent policy be reached.

MORE OF THE SAME

Last week we drew attention to the statement on crime and punishment recently made in The United States by J. Edgar Hoover. A graphic and real example of the conditions against which he protested was given to the Ontario public last week. An eighteen-year old inmate of Guelph Reformatory was shot to death as he tried to make his escape.

It is to be hoped the whole matter will be investigated. On the surface it would seem as though there should be some other way of apprehending an escaping youth than the use of firearms. It is a natural impulse for a young man who is in custody to attempt an escape. At eighteen they will take a chance. Guards should know that and act accordingly. Surely there must have been a car, a motorcycle, or a horse available, with which to give chase. Here is a young lad in gaol for stealing and forfeiting his life for an attempt to gain freedom. This is another evidence of the need for prison reform.

Speaking at the funeral, Rev. John Frank, rector of Holy Trinity Anglican Church, Toronto, put the matter well when he said:

"No hysterical outburst on the part of the public will help this boy or the conditions largely responsible for the tragedy," Mr. Frank continued. "If we are honest in such an extremity as this we only ask God's mercy for him and forgiveness for ourselves. If public opinion really helps to focus concern on parental delinquency, wretched living conditions, and a crying need for penal reform in this province, then it will have a chance to do something that this boy himself might have accomplished had he lived."

In appraising the blame for such a tragedy, however, the parents must not be overlooked. They were divorced, and the mother remarried. The children were brought up by the Children's Aid. The home life was neglected. The parents have much to answer for!

BLUNDERING AGAIN

Hon. Humphrey Mitchell, Minister of Labor in the King Government, has the happy faculty of blundering in the pursuit of his duties in connection with labor disputes. His latest move was the appointment of a controller for the steel business. That, in itself, was not an evil. As a matter of fact, had the controller been given a chance, the situation might not have gotten out of hand. But when Mr. Mitchell announced the appointment of a controller, he also said that the companies would offer the men Ten Per Cent increase and no more.

That was no way to deal with groups who were at a critical stage in their wage negotiations. At least, we have the right to expect from Government leaders, that they will not prejudice a case in which they are themselves involved. Had the Government appointed a controller and instructed him with full power to continue negotiations, the matter would have been well in hand.

The result, under the circumstances, is exactly what we would expect. The men were vexed. They felt that one had been put over on them, and in spite of the penalty of a fine for striking, they have gone out on strike.

The strike is being carried on under methods that have been tried time and again in the United Steel plant. As many men as possible are kept in the plant; beds are provided; food and clothing will be there in plenty; all sorts of privileges will be provided. Rosy accounts are already coming out of men in the plant organizing a choir, getting in a band, and being provided with all sorts of recreational facilities.

On the merits of the case, only those are able to pronounce, who have access to the facts and figures. Whether the Steel Companies can increase wages or not is a matter that can only be settled by a committee of experts. Of one point, however, we are sure, and that is the discrimination against the Maritime steel workers should be removed. Men in the Maritimes who do similar work to those in Ontario should be paid the same wages, under the same labor conditions.

Mr. Mitchell should move fast if he wishes to undo the wrong he has already done by his premature announcement as to wage increases.

WHY NOT MORE ?

Just when will our Government do something about immigration? Naturally, shipping is so disrupted and disorganized since 1939, that it is nonsense to expect the Government to inaugurate any large scale influx of population in the immediate future. Soldiers must be returned, wives and children of soldiers, married in Great Britain, must be brought out. The boats are no doubt crowded with these and with men and women of high ranking priorities.

What we have in mind is not immigration this week or next week, but the announcement of an immigration policy.

We have a great country, plenty of everything for a much larger population than we now possess. The disillusioned, displaced wanderers of Europe can hardly be blamed for looking with envy to our wide open spaces, and our rich resources. It is doubtful, indeed, whether for all time these displaced peoples and those from the crowded areas of Europe, will forever stand aside as passive spectators at this unequal distribution of the earth's surface. Canada should now be studying this situation and making ready a policy to meet it.

Canada will be the first to benefit. It will not be forgotten that in the early days of the war, a comparatively few families of Sudeten Germans were brought to Canada and settled in the Northwest. What happened to them? A dispatch from W. S. Edgar, in The Worldover Press, has this to say, of them:

"Hospitality to refugees is paying good dividends to Canada in at least one striking case — that of 130 families from Sudetenland who have transformed great tracts of Dawson Creek County in the Peace River district of the Canadian Northwest.

"These Germans, fleeing from Hitler after the absorption of Czechoslovakia in 1939, were settled in an uninhabited stretch of territory, almost entirely bushland. Most of it is now under cultivation. The Sudeten Germans have paid in full for their land, their small but clean and comfortable homes, their barns and outbuildings. Most of their machinery and equipment is held without lien. None of the settlers plan to return to Europe. Few had any experience in farming, but while building up their holdings, forty of them earned $25,000 swinging picks and shovels on the Alaskan Highway."

Canada can absorb a lot of people of that type!

A FANTASTIC YEAR-LONG CRUISE

New York, (B.U.P.) — The Coast Guard are seeking to learn how many cases of vodka-drinking baboon took aboard the zany Liberty ship Ada Rehan when he signed the skipper and started pushing up seaweed.

The skipper said the mischievous monk nipped the whole crew. The crew said the little nipper nipped the skipper, but skipped the rest on board. The skipper, Capt. Frank H. Haas —especially about three giggling Iranian women on board when she ship made port.

Here's The Story

Here is the story as told by the crew: The Ada Rehan left San Francisco on August 16, 1945, for a two weeks' voyage to New Orleans. It docked in Jersey City recently, ten months and three weeks late.

The crew said the Ada was two days out of San Francisco when it was ordered to proceed to Chile and take on a cargo of nitrate for Alexandria, Egypt.

After a hectic voyage, climaxed by a mad night in a mine field off Tripoli, the original skipper, Capt. Harold B. Ellis, went ashore for a rest cure. First Mate Haas inherited the title of captain and a mess of trouble.

At Suez several of the seamen went ashore. Some of them liked it ashore and wouldn't come back. Haas said please. They said no. The sailing of the ship was held up for several days, until the sensitive seamen gave in. They said things were never like that in California.

From Suez, the crew said, the ship went to Korramshar, Iran, where it took on some new crewmen and three women, said to be well known about town.

Haas said he did not discover the three women, Theresa, 41, Anna, 39, and Zinat, 25, nor Zinat's son, Butsum, five, until ten hours out of port. Ship's cruiser Donald B. Nevins, said the skipper not only knew about the women, but sent a party ashore to get their baggage.

The crew said they liked neither the women nor Rutsum, who had a worse disposition than the baboon Chippy.

Haas said he bought Chippy at Korramshar, unaware that the baboon was a tippler. He said the animal was shot because it had threatened to bite everyone on board.

The crew said Chippy was a good sport who liked his beer and vodka and bit the skipper only because he had been denied a snort to ease a hangover. The half-shot Chippy was shot.

The crew said the only ray of hope they had was when Maj-Gen. W.A.M. Doll of the British Army and his wife were passengers between Ceylon and Singapore. Mrs. Doll started yelling for a deodorant to kill the smell of the ship. They turned out to search, but someone had filled a stick a deodorant.

Haas said he tried to get rid of the women at Ceylon, Singapore, Hong Kong, Shanghai and Noumea, New Caledonia, but Port officials would not allow them to land. He picked up 41 G.I.'s at Noumea for the trip home. They didn't like the women either.

The women along with Rutsum, the boy, were held by immigration authorities at Ellis Island.

Old Army Uniforms Released for Sale

Ottawa, July 15. — A quantity of used army uniforms, reprocessed and dyed brown or navy, are being released for retailing as outdoor or work clothes, War Assets Corporation has announced. Samples have been distributed to all branches of the corporation from coast to coast in the expectation this former army clothing will soon appear on store counters, at a reasonable price.

CANADIANS HOLDING THE LINE

When recent price increases were granted on various goods, some people began to wonder if this was the beginning of a price spiral. The cry of "inflation" was started in many quarters throughout the country. Remembering high prices after the last war, they were prone to dizzy heights after the first great war, many Canadians felt they were doomed to another such period of inflated prices.

These price increases were allowed mainly to compensate manufacturers for greater production costs following a subsidy removal and as an incentive to greater production.

These same people however, might possibly have forgotten that during and after the First War, Canada had taken no effective measures to combat inflation. As this last war became inevitable the Government, seeing the imminent danger of inflation, took far-reaching steps to curb it.

Throughout the war and up to the present, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board with its price control policy and rationing system, and most important of all — the whole hearted support of the Canadian public — have made it possible to stave off this danger.

The press and radio, however, must go a great share of the credit. Through these sources the public were kept constantly informed of the latest rationing and price control news.

All of these efforts of co-operation were not useless. Ample proof that Canada and Canadians are guiding the line against inflation is shown below in a price comparison list of various goods as they were in 1920 and as they were in June, 1946:

Foods — 1920		Foods, June 1946
Butter	35cb.	Butter	44cb.
Milk	18c qt.	Milk	12c qt.
Eggs	61 doz.	Eggs	44c doz.
Lard	42cb.	Lard	21cb.
Sugar	25cb.	Sugar	08cb.
Potatoes — 90lb bag	$4.50	Potatoes — 75lb bag	$2.14

During 1920 prices for farm equipment were fantastic. Returned men going on the land paid $500 to $700 for a team of horses, $80 to $100 for a common grade cow, with $2 apiece for hens. Hay was $25 a ton.

Men's and women's clothing prices had also skyrocketed. Ladies' fine suits were selling for $125, silk hose was $5.50, plain serge skirts went for $35, silk bloomers were $10 each, and shoes were $18.

A returned soldier's suit of civvies cost him $75 to $100, shoes sold at $12 to $18 a pair, sweaters $13.50, and razor blades went up to $1.00 a dozen.

Anthracite coal in November, 1920 was $20.35 a ton while bituminous was $15.00.

With no rental control, rents increased 62.8 per cent from July 1914 to May 1923 when it reached a peak of 117.4 per cent.

ARMED FORCES NOW TOTAL 100,000

Ottawa. — There are less than 100,000 in Canada's fighting forces as compared with nearly 600,0000 at the wartime peak strength. At present the strength of the Navy is more than 8,000 but its peacetime strength is put at 10,000; the Army is around 68,000 with its peacetime strength to be 25,000 and the Air Force is down to 19,575, with its strength in peacetime to be 16,000.

There are still about 5,500 conscripts in the Army with only a few overseas who are mainly on repatriation depot staff awaiting active service men back to Canada. At present the Army has signed on for its interim force about half of the men it requires for its peacetime needs. The Air Force figure for the interim force is about the same as the Army.

It is learned that a recruiting campaign, operated jointly by the three services is now under active discussion.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 21ST, 1946

"JESUS AND TRUE WORSHIP"

Text: Deuteronomy 8: 11-14, 18-28. Isaiah 40: 30, 31. Mark 12: 28-34.

The first section of this week's lesson comes from the Book of Deuteronomy—one of the great Books of the Bible and this chapter 8 is one of the great chapters, if not the greatest chapter, in the Book. Written much later than its position in the canon would indicate, it has as its background, a condition of life which the people, having grown rich, were trusting in their riches and their own prowess. And the writer warns them against the danger of forgetting God, and assuming that they could get along under their own steam.

That sounds modern—very modern. In the past century, and even more recently than that, man has learned many of the secrets of the universe. He can fly far afield, go down in submarines, build bridges, and cut through mountains. He has come to feel that he has unlimited power. But just see what has happened. The power of the universe has been put into man's hands and he is afraid of it. They are having a meeting of national representatives to see how to use atomic power. We have no confidence in man's spiritual qualities which would enable him to control such great power. Beware lest when man has grown powerful and rich ye forget the Lord thy God.

Then the writer puts the matter positively in the next section. "Thou shalt remember the Lord thy God, for it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth, etc." Then the writer goes on and says that if we should, by any chance, forget God and walk after other gods, we shall surely perish. Well! That is history. We have had to read what happened to other nations which grew rich, powerful and self-reliant. They are one with Nineveh and Tyre. Gone, all but forgotten. That law is as inevitable as the laws of physics and chemistry. A nation's strength is finally in the character of her people, and character is based on religion. Not only so, but character is based on a certain type of religion. The important matter in the life of the individual and the life of the nation is not that he believe in God, but the character of the God he believes in.

In the next section the writer points out that belief in God is more than intellectual assent. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength". Personal character depends on continual and close contact with the God of Jesus Christ. So shall we become like Him and strong as He is strong.

In the next section the situation is carried to its conclusion. Not only must man worship, but only must they worship the right God, and the God they worship has a rule of life and conduct for his followers. Love to man and love to God. We must love God, certainly, but we must love our fellows as well. That does not mean the highly emotional attitude unduly associated with the word love, rather it means looking on the other man as we look on ourselves. That goes for everybody. Jesus made no distinction of class, race, color, or station. What a world this would be if that condition permeated, meeting of the big four, of labor-management, conferences, and of all other groups and nations. If that spirit prvails at the peace conference, we shall see the new brave world we have been waiting for born.

BRITAIN TO CONTINUE MINTING FARTHINGS

London (Reuters) — The humble farthing, Britain's smallest coin which is about the size of a Canada one-cent piece and worth rather less, was given a reprieve in the House of Commons, recently.

Labor member J. A. Sparkes had asked for abolition of the farthing— which in more recent issues sports a chirrupy robin instead of a ponderous Britannia on its reverse. However, Hugh Dalton, Chancellor of the Exchequer, declined, stating that bread and milk prices were reckoned in farthings, and that abolition of the otherwise almost useless coin might lead to increases.

Says Flag Move in Canada Premature

Halifax, (C.P.). — Canada is not yet ready for her own flag, Jean Francois Pouliot, independent Liberal M.P., for Temiscouata, Que., contended in an interview, last night.

Addressing a meeting of the Commercial Club in Halifax, Mr. Pouliot said the time had not come in Canada's political growth when there should be controversy about selection of a flag.

"We are still colonially-minded. We have an inferiority complex."

Until the proper time comes, he said, we should maintain the "full-size Union Jack . . . We should not minimize it. We should not have a flag that will lie to the whole world. We should describe ourselves to the world as we are. There is no reason to change the Union Jack for the red duster red ensign."

The little Gloucestershire England, community of Longleaze has ended its own housing problem. A model village is under construction following young couples acquiring families to take over larger homes when elderly people whose families have left home. It's a straight swap, no financial strings.

Australian Troubles Similar to Canada's

Regina, (C.P.) — Mr. Justice T. C. Davis, former Canadian High Commissioner to Australia, said in an interview last week, that Australia is suffering from the same conflict of Federal and State powers as the Canadian Federal Government and provinces have experienced.

Mr. Davis, former Attorney-General of Saskatchewan who returned from Australia last month following retirement from the post, said that chief difference in the constitutional set-up between the two countries was that all residuary powers were held by the Federal Government in Canada and by the separate states in Australia.

Canada and Canadians stand high in Australian esteem, he said. Best emissaries were the returned Australian airmen who had trained in the Dominion.

M.P. Asks Relaxation Of House Dress

Ottawa.—A shortage of "ice-cream suits" should cause the government to relax the requirements that members of the Commons wear their coats, D. G. Ross (PC-Toronto St. Paul's) suggested last week end.

"Now that it's hard to get ice-cream suits, why shouldn't we be allowed to sit her in a polo clean shirt," he asked.

"What do you mean, shirts?" a member asked.

Jet Inventor Foretells Future

Buffalo, N.Y. — Air Commodore Frank Whittle of the R.A.F., British inventor-designer of the jet propulsion engine, believes the age of propellers in aircraft soon will be abandoned.

"I look forward to all propellers being thrown away, though prejudice may keep them turning awhile.

"And, unless you're content to dawdle along at 200 or 300 miles an hour, the piston engine in aircraft is dead—though it may take a time to lie down."

WEDDING BELLS

WALSH - MEAGHER

Standards of delphinium and Regal lilies formed an attractive setting in St. Charles Borromeo Church, Read, for the marriage of Mildred Elizabeth daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Meagher, to Joseph, son of Mr. and Mrs. James V. Walsh, Marysville, at ten o'clock Wednesday morning, July tenth. Reverend R. J. Coyle celebrated the nuptial mass. Miss Mary V. Walsh was at the console of the organ and the vocalists were Mr. Michael Walsh and Mr. Alan Meagher.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a beautiful gown of blush ivory satin, with molded basque and long sleeves finished in lily points. The full skirt with princess panel front, fell in a soft sweep. Satin cording accentuated the lowered waistline, giving a hoop effect. Her fingertrip veil of blush tulle fell from a coronet of pearls and her arm bouquet was of cream roses and bouvardia. She was attended by two of her sisters, Miss Dorothy Meagher, maid-of-honour, wore a gown of pale pink chiffon and lace over taffeta. A matching shoulder veil and a bouquet of pink delight roses and bouvardia completed the costume. Miss Jean Meagher was junior bridesmaid in a youthful gown of ice blue taffeta with shirred bodice, a bouffant skirt, matching mitts and a shoulder veil. She carried a nosegay of roses, baby's breath and forget-me-not.

Following the ceremony a sumptuous dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents. The guests were received by the bride's mother, attired in a costume of dove grey with black accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses. The groom's mother assisted, wearing an ensemble of French blue with contrasting accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Out-of-town guests were present from Ottawa, Brockville, Kingston, Belleville, London and Windsor.

LEST WE FORGET!

PUNCHARD — In loving memory of Frederick E. Punchard, who fell in Sicily, July 19th, 1943.
We often sit and think of you, of how you fought and died:
To think we could not say goodbye
Before you closed your eyes.
No one knows our longing and no one sees us weep—
We shed our tears from aching hearts
While you, dear Freddie, sleep.
Lovingly remembered by

In Loving Memory

KIRKPATRICK — In memory of John Kirkpatrick, who passed away July 17th, 1943, at Marlbank.
God saw that he was suffering,
That the hills were hard to climb
So he closed his eyelids
And whispered 'Peace be thine'
Away in the beautiful hills of God
By the valley of rest, so fair
Sometime, someday, 'we know not when
We will meet our loved one, there!
Ever remembered by
29ap SONS and DAUGHTERS.

GREER — In loving memory of a dear aunt, Emma Ann Greer, who passed away July 13th, 1943.

KIRKPATRICK— In loving memory of my dear father, John Kirkpatrick, who passed away July 17th, 1943, in Marlbank, Ont.
Dear Dad ofttimes I shed a silent tear
But God alone can tell,
The last time I closed your hand
I never knew it meant farewell.
But I know you would understand
It was your daughter, Nell.

"NERVES" She Called It
Losing interest—losing friends—she never went out any more—always too tired. "Nerves," she thought—but it was her kidneys—the filters of her blood—that needed attention. She used Dodd's Kidney Pills at once. The improved action of her kidneys helped to clear away blood impurities and excess acids. Fatigue, backache, headache, lack of energy disappeared. Dodd's Kidney Pills contain essential oils and medicinal ingredients that act directly upon the kidneys—and help restore their normal action. 144

Question and Answer Column

Readers may direct their questions, giving their name and address and mentioning the name of this paper, to the Information Branch, WPTB, 490 Sussex Street, Ottawa, Ontario.

Q. My children are going to a large camp for two months. I do not like to trust them with the ration books and wondered if I could mail sufficient coupons to the camp director?

A. No. The loose coupons would be of no value to him . . . it would be illegal for him to attempt to purchase rationed food with these coupons and also illegal for any storekeeper to accept them. We suggest you either give the books to whoever is responsible for such things in the camp or send them to the director by registered mail.

Q. Would you please let me know when rental restrictions will be lifted so I can move into our own home by giving one month's notice to our tenants?

A. There is no indication that the "freezing order" will be lifted in the near future. When the regulations are changed to permit persons to give tenants one month's notice to vacate you may be sure there will be ample notice given both in the press and over the radio.

Q. My grocer has pork and beans and tomato ketchup for sale in his store but cannot buy either one unless you buy a can of tomato soup and a can of vegetable soup at the same time. Is he allowed to do this?

A. No. This is a "conditional sale" and such sales are illegal. The display of merchandise in a store in Ontario does not make it necessary for the storekeeper to sell. In other words he can refuse to sell articles which are in limited supply, but he cannot ask a customer to buy something else in order to obtain any other product.

Q. I will be staying at a hotel for one week. Must I take my ration book?

A. No. It will not be necessary to take your ration book along. A ration book is required only when a stay is for a period of two weeks or longer.

COAL RATIONING UNLIKELY IN DOMINION

Edmonton, (CP) — Despite a not-too-bright coal supply outlook for Canada this winter, nothing so drastic as coal rationing is contemplated, E. J. Brunning of Ottawa, Dominion coal controller, said last week in an interview.

"The domestic coal market will be tight but I feel we'll get through next winter all right," said Mr. Brunning, who is here conferring with district coal operators. He warned, however, that Canadians should heed the repeated advice of authorities to lay in coal supplies early.

The coal controller pointed out that for the first time in history all Alberta mines are operating virtually full capacity in what is normally considered the slack summer season. Mine operators of the west were pleased with result of the "buy your coal now" campaign which was keeping the mines in operation on a balanced load basis and employing miners at a season when they usually are laid off.

Mr. Brunning said a large amount of the briquet output from Alberta's Canmore and Brazeau fields is being diverted to Ontario to help compensate for an acute coal shortage there which resulted from the recent United States coal strike.

Alberta now had a fine opportunity to secure permanently a good share of the Ontario domestic market and continuance of subsidies by the Dominion government to facilitate shipments from this province to the east.

Many Secret Weapons On Nazi Terror List

Washington, July 15. — Hitler's scientists were at work on a supersonic bomber designed to bombard New York, the United States Army Air Force disclosed last week end—one item on a terror list of 138 secret weapons they were striving to perfect or improve at the war's end.

Col. L. L. Putt, deputy chief of the Air Material Command's technical intelligence division, said the bomber was expected to reach 154 miles above the earth. It was never finished, but Col. Putt expressed belief that "time was the only obstacle" to its completion.

"The Germans hoped to destroy any city on earth with a fleet of 100 of these bombers with a space of a few days' operation," he said.

Col. Putt drawer the official report on the Nazis' development of guided missiles and other ultramodern weapons.

One giant long-range winged rocket, which was in design stage, was to carry smaller rockets. These were to take off on their own at a specific point, attain speeds up to 8,000 miles an hour, and finish their trajectories in a long glide. Range of this weapon was calculated at 3,000 miles, sufficient to span the Atlantic.

Other weapons, listed in a resume of Col. Putt's report, included rockets with which the Nazis hoped to break up the Allies bomber formations which levelled German cities.

The German missiles "used every known type of remote control and fusing means, including radio control, wire control, radar CW (continuous wave) acoustics, infra-red light beams and magnetics. In similar fashion all methods of employing jet propulsion for subsonic and supersonic speeds were being fully exploited."

GOVERNMENT OUTLAYS SOAR

By James A. Oastler
Montreal Star Correspondent

Ottawa. — If the taxpayer is to get much needed relief which the Minister of Finance promised for next year, something will have to be done to halt the Government expenditures. According to the latest available figures from the Comptroller of the Treasury, ordinary expenditure, apart from war and reconversion, are going at startling rate.

For instance where ordinary expenditures in the month of May last year were just over $50,000,000 this year saw more than $106,000,000 spent. Agriculture is up more than $110,000; fisheries on the national scale up $4,000,000; labor up $330,000; mines and resources, $110,000; national revenue $180,000; post office, $193,000; public works $409,000; transport $294,000 and a number of other departments show increases when compared with the same month last year.

It is only when one gets into the reconversion expenditures that one really gets startled. Under finance

CHURN, DOG BATH AIDED SCIENTISTS

Oxford, Eng. — Short of equipment, British scientists investigated the secrets of penicillin with a milk churn, dog bath and other home-made facilities, one of the pioneers in development of the wonder drug said, recently.

After tracing the early wartime story of university research experts, Dr. E. Chain of Oxford said a vast field of research was opened by penicillin's extraordinary biological and chemical properties and the curious molecular "rearrangements" of which it was capable. He said the chances of finding a synthetic substitute for penicillin seemed slight.

UNRRA IN GREECE – A News Roundup –

SLIDING SCALE DEVISED FOR JUNE WHEAT DISTRIBUTION

ATHENS—UNRRA wheat was distributed to Greece during the month of June on a sliding scale weighted in favor of the cities and 45 large towns and other nonagricultural areas, it has been announced by the UNRRA Mission Chief, Buell P. Maben. Only 36,000 tons were available for June, as compared to 66,000 tons in April and 50,000 in May, Mr. Maben stated. The caloric content of UNRRA food for distribution comes basically from wheat. The current bread ration, which was reduced twice in the last three months, will be maintained at an average per person of 601 calories daily, in cities and large towns. In other districts the rations will vary from 801 calories in nongrain-growing areas to 468 in regions of early harvest.

Local food production in Greece, Mr. Maben said, now averages 723 calories per day per person. Actually, some of the regions receiving the lowest UNRRA ration will be better off than others getting the maximum, because of variations in local production and distribution. The overall average, from UNRRA plus locally grown food, will amount to slightly more than 1,500 calories daily.

Answering a question as to whether UNRRA's earlier estimates of local food production would have to be reduced as the result of floods in the Peloponnesus and Thessaly, Mr. Maben said: "The figure of 723 calories per day for the local production average is a factual estimate. Our figures on Greek production are accepted by the Greek Ministry of Agriculture. Obviously, they will have to substract losses from floods."

Greek Doctors Studying In U. S. On UNRRA Fellowships

Washington — After spending a fortnight in Washington, a group of four Greek physicians in this country on UNRRA fellowships has departed for further study in other cities where special training is offered in their fields. Dr. P. Kapalai is to take a special course in antimalarial work at Atlanta, Ga. Dr. N. Spyropoucos and Dr. M. Liatrostos will study pediatrics and child health at Cornell University. And Dr. C. Mavromatis will study port sanitation and disinfection in New York City. Dr. Liatrostos is well known in Greece as the director of the Foundling Home in Salonika.

Course On Use Of Farm Machinery Given In Salonika

Salonika — A traveling UNRRA school opened a six-day course last June 3rd to teach Greek agriculturists how to use the farm machinery imported by UNRRA, the Mission has reported to Director General F. H. LaGuardia. A similar short-term course was recently conducted at Volos.

Students for the traveling schools are recruited from the Greek co-operatives and machinery stations operated by the Greek Ministry of Agriculture for the benefit of the farmers. In addition to the traveling school, which will rotate through all the farm districts, the chief instructor, Boss L. Clark, plans to establish a permanent school in Volos for from 30 to 35 farm boys.

Mr. Clark, an experienced vocational instructor in farm machinery, has been loaned to UNRRA for this work by the Near East Foundation. His assistants are Minas Karidis, an agricultural engineer, and Phoebus Cartagianis, agricultural expert, who are both native Greeks and graduates of Salonika University.

Greek War Relief Has Project For Care Of Orphans

Washington—The enormous orphan population of Greece will be assisted in part by a Greek War Relief project designed to place numbers of these children in foster homes, UNRRA Director General F. H. LaGuardia has been advised. According to the latest official estimates, there are 45,976 full orphans in Greece and 325,000 half orphans, or almost 17 percent, of the country's population.

Many of these children are temporarily housed with friends and relatives, and others are cared for on a makeshift basis in homes for the aged, monasteries and other institutions not suitable for orphanages. While some are fairly well provided for, most of them receive very poor care and some, lacking any attention, wander about the country.

In Drama, where there are 1,241 full and 9,107 half-orphans, Greek War Relief has started its program with the enthusiastic support of the Government and the UNRRA Greece Mission. More funds will be needed if the Greek War Relief is to extend its activities in this connection to all districts, as presently envisaged.

Butter Production Has Reached Peak

The peak production for butter for Ontario for the year 1946 appears to have been reached during the third week in June, according to a summary of creamery instructors' reports issued by C. J. Lackner, Director of the Ontario Dairy Branch. While some sections had their peak a week earlier, the hot weather of the last week of the month had the effect of curtailing the peak season. Despite excellent pasture and production conditions generally, says Mr. Lackner, the peak did not quite reach the levels of that of a year ago, although quite a number of plants report production for this time of year equal to that of last year.

When it became evident that June production was not going to exceed that of last year, the butter market firmed considerably, rising a full cent a pound between the first and the last of the month. Because of the difficulty in obtaining supplies last winter, it appears that many plants are endeavouring to guard against a repetition and are storing all their surplus. Supplies reaching the larger centres were smaller and just sufficient to take care of current needs. While cream prices were dropped during the first part of the month, the rise in butter prices was reflected in a rise in cream prices toward the end of June, particularly in Western Ontario.

The butter quality competitions this year are more keenly contested than ever, with a large percentage of the competitors having little or no undergrade butter to date. Based on grading returns, Ontario is producing the highest quality of butter in Years, and is a full ten per cent better than last year.

Millions Are Starving WHO IS TO BLAME?

The present food shortage throughout the world, has for the first time in history put Britain on the ration. What is even more tragic, it literally faces millions of human beings with starvation and death. Naturally these conditions accentuate emphasis on all waste or misdirection of food and multiply humanitarian appeals for personal and cooperate food saving. By our action we rescue or doom to death multitudes of human beings.

Perusing the official reports from the Bureau of Statistics re the Distilling and Brewing production in Canada, the following facts came to light.

The distilling of spirituous liquor in the financial year 1944 consumed 179 810,080 pounds of cereal grains, and the brewing of beer 236,206,383 pounds. These totals are made up of wheat, corn, rye, rice, barley and possibly a small quantity of other grains.

Each of the grains mentioned has been in historic times, the main staff of life of multitudes of people — one might almost say of nations. As animal foods they are of the highest quality.

The calories supplied for food from these grains run from 1590 to 1628 per pound. If we take as an average estimate 1600 per pound, we would be giving the liquor producers generous room.

In Central Europe the best fed people were recently getting all-told 1500 calories per day, and in other sections the quantity available was much less — in some cases as low as 700. (Approximately 2,500 calories per person are needed to maintain health and vigor).

In normal diet cereals furnish only about two-thirds of the requirement, and would go much further if so fed. But, fats and other commodities are also inconceivably short in this crisis. We will ignore this supplementary but uncertain supply. (Another consideration which is generous to the trade).

Considering cereals then, as the sole source of caloric supply, and on the basis of the highest ration in the American occupied area, the grain consumed by the liquor business in Canada during 1944 would have satisfied 4,750,594 persons for six months.

Early this spring, however, the Canadian Government limited the use of grains in the distilling business to 30 per cent. of that used in the previous year. What the amount for 1945 was has not yet been revealed, but using as a basis the figure for 1944 this would mean that the grain consumed in Canada under this new arrangement in the current year would, on the basis outlined above, have fed for six months 3,463,674 persons — nearly as many people as there are in Ontario.

Schedules For Potato Sprays Are Announced

Information on the spraying and dusting of potatoes, based on the latest tests with DDT and other materials, is contained in a statement issued jointly by Prof. R. W. Thompson, Provincial Entomologist, O.A.C., Guelph and K. Richardson, Plant Pathologist, Dominion Laboratory, at St. Catharines. According to this statement, potatoes should be sprayed or dusted every seven to ten days from the time the plants are six to eight inches high until the tops either ripen naturally or are killed by frost. With such a schedule, all new growth is kept covered as soon as it develops. Only foliage thus covered is protected against insect and disease attack throughout the season. The report then goes on to give the following details:

"When you spray to protect potatoes from diseases and insects use either Bordeaux 4-4-40 or some other tested, reliable fungicide. To each 40 gallons add one pound of 50 per cent. DDT wettable powder. In case of other than 50 per cent. DDT being used, enough must be added to give half a pound of actual DDT in each forty gallons of spray. Apply the combination spray for diseases and insects at about 100 gallons per acre per application. Good agitation in the tank is necessary to keep the DDT well mixed in the spray solution at all times.

"When you dust use a combination mixed copper-DDT per cent. DDT dust and apply at the rate of 25 to 50 pounds per acre. Never use DDT with copper-lime dust because the lime in this form destroys the effectiveness of the DDT. In other sprays or dusts where DDT is used, no other poison such as lead or calcium arsenate should be added. The DDT will give good control of all common potato insects.

"Disease and insect control costs far less than many other items in potato production, and yet gives much bigger returns per dollar outlay.

Control, however, can be obtained only by following rigidly a definite programme of sprays and dusts. Other work should never be allowed to interfere with this spraying and dusting.

Sudbury Girl Survives Bear Attack

Sudbury, (C.P.) — Her lip torn so badly that she could talk only with difficulty, 19-year-old Alice Brabant, of the Sudbury district settlement of Azilda, took a pencil and scrawled out the story of a fight with a bear that menaced her employer's two children. The girl was flown to hospital in Sudbury.

Charles Clement, of Sudbury, said he had been staking gold claims near Biscotasing, 100 miles north, and had left Miss Brabant in charge of his two children in an isolated cabin. In his absence a black bear apparently broke into the cabin.

Clement told Dr. T. P. Dixon, Sudbury, that when he returned to the cabin Saturday morning, he found Miss Brabant unconscious, lying in a pool of blood on the floor. Sleeping in their cribs nearby were the two children.

"Miss Brabant's lip was badly torn and two of her teeth were knocked out. The rifle she was using to shoot at the bear must have backfired and hit her in the face.

"It is difficult to find out what happened, as her torn lip makes it painful for her to talk. Mr. Clement tried to get the story from her in writing.

"She told him she fired two shots at the bear, and that's all she remembered. When Mr. Clement arrived there was no sign of the bear.

Residents said the black bears of the north country seldom attacked humans although they frequently broke into trappers' cabins and damaged food caches. Occasionally a mother bear with cubs will threaten to attack men if she feels her cubs are in danger.

Lake district housewives in England who find housework too much for them, call for the regimental sergeant-major of a Sydney Porter, demobilized after ten years' army service. Now he is prepared to call regularly at any home for a fee and do all the scrubbing, polishing and other heavy work.

In Mexico a patient will inquire whether medicine is to be taken with the right or left hand. If the former, the liver is believed to be benefited; if the latter, the kidneys.

NOTES ON MAKING GOOD JELLY

2 Cherries, strawberries, peaches, pears and rhubarb require a pectin or jel-rich combination to give the best results. For example, use one part of one of the fruits listed in No. 1 to 2 parts of one of fruits listed in No. 2. Or a commercial pectin can be used.
3 Fruit should not be over-ripe and should be carefully cleaned. Measure all ingredients or weigh fruits and sugar.
4 Jelly should be boiled rapidly. Use a large preserving kettle to prevent boil-overs and stir constantly.
5 A jelly thermometer assures you of a good jelly or jam and prevents reduction of the amount by too much evaporation. This handy device is hung inside as liquid begins to boil and when it records 220 degrees, it is time to pour.
6 You always skim jelly as the liquid boils.

BLACKBERRY JAM

4 lbs. blackberries, 3 lbs. of granulated sugar, juice of one lemon. Look over blackberries carefully, and wash if it seems advisable. Put blackberries and sugar together in a preserving kettle, mix and let stand for about fifteen minutes, or until the juice is partially extracted. Then cook gently uncovered, stirring often, until a few drops of the jam will thicken on a cold plate. Add strained lemon juice and cook for five minutes longer. Let stand a few moments and skim; then stir before ladling into hot sterilized jars. Cover at once with a thin film of hot paraffin around the edge of the top of jar—tip and tilt the jar to seal carefully. When cold, cover the jars or tie down with paper.

BLUEBERRY-CURRANT JAM

Two pounds (about 1½ quarts) blueberries, two pounds (about 4 cups) slightly-crushed currants, three pounds (or a little less) of granulated sugar.
Combine prepared blueberries and currants. Add sugar. Cook mixture with frequent stirring, until a few drops will thicken on a cold plate. Cool slightly, skim, then stir. Fill hot sterilized jars and seal.

CINNAMON APPLE JELLY

Five pounds apples, sugar, red food coloring, cinnamon extract. Wash apples; do not pare or core. Cut in eighths removing seeds and blemishes. Barely cover with water; cover; simmer until soft. Strain through jelly bag. Measure juice; heat to boiling; skim; add three-quarters cup sugar for each cup juice. Stir until sugar dissolves. Cook until the syrup sheets off spoon. Color with red food coloring. Flavor with a few drops cinnamon extract. Pour into hot sterilized glasses. Paraffin-seal. Makes four six-ounce glasses.

PLUM JAM, SPICED

For seven pounds of plums to be used for jam, allow one cup white vinegar and one and one-half tablespoons each of whole cinnamon, and cloves and allspice; tie the spices in cheesecloth, and simmer with the fruit.

MOSCOW

Moscow, July 15. — Recently Misses Mary and Helen Evans took a trip to the northland, and visited with Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Dillon and family in Timmins. Miss Helen Evans was in charge of 35 pupils from the School for the Deaf, in Belleville, taking them to their homes for the summer vacation. On the second night of their sojourn in Timmins the girls were invited to an Assyrian dinner at the home of friends of Mrs. Dillon. Here they were impressed with the various foods prepared for the occasion in the Assyrian style. These included such dishes as "kousa", "dobrae", and "c'bil". The "kousa" was a preparation of lightly seasoned rice, tomatoes, and lamb rolled and baked in grape leaves. An interesting feature was their attendance at a baseball game, played in a beautiful park on ground which formerly was a lake, but now filled in with waste from the Hollinger mine. During their stay in Timmins the girls visited the Macintyre, the Hollinger, the Paymaster, and other smaller gold mines.

LOAN TO BRITAIN SEEN AID TO WORLD STABILIZATION

Washington, July 16.— The United States Government now has a clear mandate from Congress to press co-operation with Great Britain toward attainment of long-range economic objectives for world stabilization, as worked out by the two nations' joint policy makers.

That is the basic satisfaction of Administration leaders in their victory for the financial agreement with Britain in the House of Representatives.

In debate on the agreement, even those who opposed it did so largely on irrelevant grounds, such as criticism of British Palestine policy. The real objectives of the proposal were not under serious attack. At the same time, the ultimate economic advantages to the whole world, and especially this country, were emphasized by proponents throughout the discussion.

An economic alliance even more important than a military one, President Truman may call it as he signs the $3,750,000,000 Loan Act with ceremony. Objectives are stated officially as a lowering of trade barriers; elimination of discriminatory trade regulations; progressive abandonment of exchange controls and stabilization of currencies.

Unofficially, and as stated repeatedly in debate, the primary purpose is support and rehabilitation of this country's most important ally.

The other side of the picture, the question of a loan to Soviet Russia, will claim immediate attention. It already is doing so, in fact, on the basis of apprehension that such a loan is under Administration consideration. Some opponents of the British agreement even based their position on fear of establishing a precedent for aid to the Soviets.

The regular monthly meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Ross Oliver on Thursday afternoon, July 4. The president, Mrs. Garnet Dupre, opened the meeting with the singing of the Institute Ode, followed by the Lord's Prayer repeated in unison. Several members answered the roll call. The minutes of the last meeting and treasurer's report were given. Communications and bills were then discussed. The sum of $8.00 was realized from the traveling apron, Mrs. F. O. Oliver winning the apron.

This being Children's Day, the boys and girls had charge of the programme, consisting of several readings and recitations, and a song by Marjorie Hogeboom.

The meeting closed with the National Anthem, after which lunch was served with candy, popcorn and lemonade as a treat.

THIS is not selfishness, but the realization that a community is no better, no sounder than its citizens.

The welfare of our community—Canada—depends not alone on those charged with the government of the country, but on each of its citizens—12,000,000 strong.

Today, that welfare is menaced by the danger of inflation. Already, millions in lands devastated by war suffer misery because of it.

Inflation, to the citizen, means simply less and less value for his dollar . . . his living costs soar as free and careless spending drives up the price of goods still in short supply.

War always brings the threat of inflation in its wake . . . only the prudence of the people can keep it in check.

• • •

How? Mainly, by conservation . . . by buying only those goods which are in fair supply, and by saving money for the day when goods now in short supply will be readily available.

This helps to keep prices steady—to keep your dollar at its real worth.

This means that, if you are a No. 1 citizen, you will rigidly avoid black market purchases and you will save money by

- building up your savings account;
- keeping up your insurance;
- buying Government bonds and War Savings Certificates;
- holding whatever of these securities you have bought.

Barn Burned Horses Killed in Electric Storm

Heavy Rainfall Puts Out Forest Fires

The severe electrical storm which passed over most of Ontario Friday evening, last week, resulted in the death of two horses in Napanee, which were struck by lightning, burned a barn at Moscow, which was hit by a lightning bolt, and caused other minor damage.

The two horses killed at Napanee belonged to Lester Shaw and Archie Richmond. The animals were in a field at the rear of Mr. Shaw's residence on Thomas Street, near the Driving Park, and were not near a tree or building, when the bolt struck them. Both were valuable animals, the one belonging to Archie Richmond being a trotting horse.

A barn near Moscow belonging to John Vanvikkenburg, was struck by lightning and was burned to the ground in a few minutes. Most of the season's hay crop, which had been stored in the barn, was also lost. Horses which were in their stalls in the stable were released before the fire reached that part of the building. Neighbors who answered the fire alarm given over the telephone were able to save the other nearby buildings, including the farm house.

In the northern part of the county trees were blown down and at Tamworth a transformer was struck and the power service was interrupted for an hour.

The rain which accompanied the storm will benefit late crops, but was too late to be of any good to raspberries, which apparently will be scarce again this year.

A serious bush fire which had been raging for some days in the Cloyne district, was put out by the heavy rainfall.

VACATION SCHOOL CLOSING EXERCISES

The Vacation School, which has been in progress for nearly three weeks and which was sponsored by Trinity United Church, Grace United Church, St. Mary Magdalene Church and the Salvation Army, was brought to a close on Thursday night, when a considerable number of the parents and friends gathered in Grace United Church, Sunday School room to review the work which had been undertaken by the pupils. There was a class of approximately 100, and, during the past week, each department held a picnic for its members. Rev. Noble Hatton, minister of Trinity United Church, was in charge of the proceedings and the three departments all took part with the kindergarten giving two songs and a drill, the primary group singing several songs and repeating memory verses which they had learned from the Bible, and the juniors giving a recitation and also a drill.

At the conclusion of the program, which was heard with keen interest, the parents and visitors were shown a display of handicrafts, which included a model farm made by the kindergarten, pot holders, aprons, model planes, soap carving, and pasteboard houses. There were all nicely done and reflected much credit on the children. Mr. Hatton expressed his appreciation to the loyal band of workers who had assisted in the instruction, and also expressed his appreciation of the fact that the Lions Club had assisted the school with a donation of $25.00.

CHILD FOUND DEAD NEAR NORTHBROOK

Coroner Dr. T. M. Galbraith and Provincial Officer J. A. Morden, of Napanee, were called to the northern part of the county on Sunday, to investigate the death of Doris Mary Shaw, one month old daughter of Rita Shaw, who resides east of Northbrook, near the border of the county of Frontenac.

The child was found dead in bed on the mother's arm early on Sunday morning, on Sunday, about an hour after she had been fed by the mother.

After investigation, the coroner decided death was due to natural causes, as there was every indication that the child was well cared for and no inquest will be held.

Four Persons Held In Sugar Racket

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police have uncovered a sugar black market outlet involving some 10,000 tons of the rationed staple, and four persons will be summoned to court in addition to a bank manager already facing charges, it has been learned.

According to Sergt. J. A. Thivierge and Const. J. R. Carriere of the R.C.M.P. the four men connived with the bank manager to draw sugar from the latter's growing coupon checking which were torn up by the bank manager when they should have been charged to their account.

Police said that some 10,000 tons of sugar were "legally" put on the market through the process.

The Corner stone of the new church will be laid at a ceremony to be held on Wednesday (today) July 24th at 6.30 o'clock. Those who will take part in the ceremony are the Moderator of the United Church of Canada, Rt. Rev. J. H. Agnew, D.D., Rev. James E. Beckel, Elgin, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference. Rev. K. J. Crawford, Minister of the Church, and Rev. Dr. James Semple, Peterborough, who will be the preacher for the occasion. The 100th Anniversary had been observed only a few weeks previous to its destruction and at the time of the Centenary Celebration, which was conducted by the Minister, Rev. H. E. Frair, several fine memorials presented by present and former members of the church, were dedicated. Nearly all the Memorials and most of the furnishings of the church, were destroyed. The piano, an organ and some rugs and the pulpit were saved.

Rev. K. J. Crawford has been the Minister in charge of the Circuit during the past year.

CANADA PLANS CLOSER MILITARY TIES WITH U. K.

Ottawa, (C.P.) — Because of Canada's geographic position, the Dominion's military planners are aiming for close co-operation between Canada and the United Kingdom in Empire defence and Canada and the United States in hemisphere defence.

Hemispheric defence already is on a solid footing embodied in the joint Canada-United States Defence Board whose co-chairman is Gen. MacNaughton, also Canada's representative on the United Nations Atomic Commission.

So far, Anglo-Canadian co-operation has not extended beyond discussions, exchange of officers and informal talks. However, planners hope the day will come when an Empire defence body might be formed under which would sit representatives of Commonwealth countries.

Empire defence and the part each Dominion could play was understood to be among the topics discussed at the meeting of Empire prime ministers in London, last Spring.

Marked Improvement In Employment In Canada

In June, for the third successive month, there was a marked improvement in Canadian employment conditions. This occurred despite continued shortage of materials and lay-offs of workers, as well as the adverse effects of labour unrest. At July 4th, there were 179,000 unplaced applicants registered with the National Employment Service. A decline of 31,000 took place during June, thus demonstrating again the absorptive capacity of the current labour market. More than 38,500 ex-servicemen were discharged during June. The thousands of students released from secondary schools and universities at this time have also been assimilated without difficulty.

Unfilled vacancies totalled 118,000 at July 4th—an increase of 4,000 during June, as compared with a rise of 2,000 in May. Jobs becoming available during the month are being filled very rapidly as the number of monthly vacancies notified has not slackened.

Employment conditions improved most markedly for male workers. At July 4th, unplaced male applicants totalled 141,000, as compared with 170,000 at June 6th. The decline of 29,000 in male unemployment was due to the fact that current labour demand is concentrated in industries such as construction, mining, and iron and steel, where male workers are the chief requirement. There were 72,000 unfilled vacancies for men at July 4th, an increase of 4,000 during June.

Female unplaced applicants declined from 40,000 to 38,000 in June. The shortage of women workers is greatest in industries listed as having vacancies totalled 47,000 at July 4th —outnumbering applicants by 9,000. The largest demand exists in industries where wage standards are low or working conditions unfavorable; in such cases, it is difficult to fill the labour demand.

BD. OF EDUCATION PURSUES PLANS FOR NEW SCHOOLS

The Special Building Committee of the Napanee Board of Education is actively engaged on plans in connection with the building of two new schools which are proposed to erect in the Town of Napanee. There is nothing definite to report, as yet, concerning the location of the new school in the Western part of the town, but negotiations are on the way toward the securing of options for land.

The School in the East Ward will likely be erected on Dairy Avenue on land which belongs to the municipality.

The architects are busy on the plans and details of the two new buildings, but the difficulty in securing steel and other materials will probably delay the actual erection of the buildings.

"Monty" To Visit Canada and States Aug. and September

London, (C.P.) — Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, in one of his infrequent public speeches, disclosed that he has obtained information from a captured German General Ritter von Thoma, which "saved many British lives."

Addressing a luncheon after receiving the freedom of the city of London, Lord Montgomery said he invited von Thoma to dinner after the German Afrika Corps commander's capture at El Alamein.

"There was, I think, certain criticism of this action," Lord Montgomery said, "but I got from von Thoma certain information about the character and military methods of Rommel, his superior commander, that stood me in good stead in later battles and which without question saved many British lives."

The new Chief of the Imperial General Staff is to visit Canada and the United States in August and September.

GREEKS NAME STREET "CANADA"

Ottawa, C.P.) — The name "Canada" has been given to one of the main thoroughfares in the Greek city of Rhodes, Premier Mackenzie King has disclosed in making public an exchange of letters with Mayor Kazoulis, of Rhodes.

Mr. Kazoulis wrote that the street had been renamed "in token of eternal gratitude to your heroic country, the friend and protector of the Greeks."

In expressing the appreciation of the Government and people of Canada, Mr. King replied:

"It is a source of pride to the Canadian people that they were able to assist in some measure in the preservation and liberation of the Greek people and their homeland."

On Dominion Day Prime Minister Tsaldaris announced that historic Leophetius Street in Athens had been re-named "Mackenzie King Street" in honor of Mr. King and in recognition of Canada's assistance to Greece.

Starvation stalks in many lands. If we in Canada say and use less bread, flour and other wheat products — if we cut our consumption of meat, eggs and cheese, the Dominion government can ship abroad greater quantities of these vital foods to the hungry.

I.O.D.E. To Collect Surplus Meat Coupons

The Wartime Prices and Trade Board has authorized the U. E. L. Chapter of the I.O.D.E. to receive meat coupons and tokens, which can be spared by the people of the town and county, to provide more meat for shipping to Europe. Mrs. Percy Vine, Mrs. Ed. China Promises Help To Starving Millions

Nanking, (B.U.P.) — The Ministry of Social Affairs has outlined a program to extend social security to China's 500,000,000 people, subject to countless generations to poverty and mass starvation.

The program, modelled after Britain's Beveridge plan, "will within ten years guarantee the poverty-stricken Chinese population freedom from fear and general security of life," Ministry spokesman Chou Kwang said.

China's oral preliminary social security measures already are in effect and that the overall social security plan has been approved 'in principle' by the Executive Yuan.

Prospects for Crop In this County Reported Excellent

More Moisture Would Make Conditions Even Better

Mr. C. W. Buchanan, Agricultural Representative for the County of Lennox and Addington, who is in touch with crop conditions throughout all parts of the County, in an interview this week stated that prospects were good for a bumper yield of nearly all farm produce this season.

Like last year the hay crop was exceptionally heavy and many farmers found it difficult to harvest and store it. This year hay was a little lacking in clover, but the quality was generally very good. Practically all the hay in the County has been harvested.

What most farmers in Lennox and Addington is not very great, but the quality is quite good and it is ripening very fast as a result of the heat of the past few weeks. Oats and barley are expected to yield much above the average.

In some sections the prospects for corn are excellent. The recent rains have helped a great deal, but still more moisture is needed.

The fall wheat in Lennox and Addington is not very great, but the quality is quite good and it is ripening very fast as a result of the heat of the past few weeks. Oats and barley are expected to yield much above the average.

In some sections the prospects for corn are excellent. The recent rains have helped a great deal, but still more moisture is needed.

The strawberry crop was certainly better than last season, but would have been much larger still if the rains had come earlier. Vines were well covered with blossoms, but many of the berries dried up before they had a chance to ripen. Raspberries are reported to be drying up fast and will be a short crop. Some sections of the County are yielding better than others, depending on the amount of moisture.

Lennox and Addington does not produce many apples even in the best years but this year the conditions in the orchards are generally quite good and there should be a fair crop to harvest.

The pea crop was exceptionally good this season. In many instances the yield was so heavy there was difficulty in harvesting and a large acreage was partly because of fast ripening during the extreme hot weather.

A larger acreage than in previous years was planted with tomatoes in the County, and there is every indication the yield will be extremely high if enough rain continue to come to develop the fruit.

Up to the present pasture has been excellent. Reports show that the flow of milk has been good, but is dropping off a little now. With more rain pasture would improve again, resulting in an increased flow of milk. The make of cheese in the County has been as good, or a little better, than last year up to date, but there are indications that it will begin to decline unless pasture improves.

The matter of help on farms continues to be a problem, but as a result of co-operation among farmers the crops will be harvested. Nineteen farm laborers from Western Canada reported for work in the County, and most of them were placed.

During the past week Mr. Miller Carl, of Peterborough, has been in the County judging the Field Crop Competition in oats which is being conducted this year by the Lennox Agricultural Society, the Addington Agricultural Society, and the Ernestown Agricultural Society. Mr. Carl's report will be issued in the near future.

FIELD - DAY AT PRESQU'ILE FOR BOYS AND GIRLS

In another column of this issue will be found an advertisement concerning an event which should be of interest to the boys and girls in the rural parts of this county. It concerns a field-day to be held at Presqu'ile Point, on Friday, August 2nd, which is being revived again as an annual event in connection with boys and girls club work under the direction of the Junior Farmers Association of Ontario.

During the afternoon and evening there will be ball games between teams of the various counties in the district, with the final games to be played at 6.30 p.m. From 9 p.m. to 12 p.m., there will be dancing in the pavilion.

Mr. C. W. Buchanan, the County Agricultural Representative, is endeavoring to secure teams of boys and girls to enter the contest.

CORNER STONES

A few weeks ago the cornerstone of a new United Church at Yarker, was laid. To-morrow another cornerstone will be laid for a new United Church, at Centreville. Both of these have attracted attention beyond the immediate bounds of the congregations concerned. Some of those who took part in the ceremony at Yarker came from Toronto and other parts of the Province. The programme for to-morrow night at Centreville, shows that leaders in the Church, from a distance, will take part. That this is so, indicates a widespread interest in these two events.

Certainly the communions concerned are to be congratulated. Both the former churches were destroyed by fire, and both are being erected on new locations, nearer to the population centres of the communities. These are not easy days in which to build: materials are inadequate and scarce, and there is a dearth of workmen. But with courage and vision that is commendable, these churches are going ahead with their building projects.

This earnestness and diligence is encouraging. For we live in a time when the things for which the Church stands, have been sneered at by some, openly opposed and ridiculed by others. The world is suffering war's aftermath: the breakdown of moral sanctions, the weakening of the family relations, and a general secularization of society. This situation is so serious that even men not religious, in the ordinary sense, are calling on the Church to redouble her efforts to stem the tide that threatens the overthrow of established convention, and perhaps of organized society, as we now know it. The Canadian Churches have accepted the challenge and have, one and all, embarked on a crusade.

The rural areas have always been the back bone of the religious and moral life of our country. There is a stability about rural life, where people are bound up with the soil and where they have leisure to think their way through the eternal problems of life. From these rural areas there pours into our cities, a continuous stream of fresh leadership. It is essential that the sources of that stream be kept clear and vigorous. That the people of Yarker and Centreville are putting time, money and energy into new places of worship, is evidence that the heart of our rural life, beats sound, and with the heart sound, the future health of the body politic, is assured.

BACK TO NORMAL?

. . The Monday morning newspapers, in Ontario and in the United States, give a rather grim picture of the results of the week-end holiday. There are accounts of drownings, near drownings, and motor car accidents, galore. It would seem as though the nation is getting back to pre-war conditions. It is little use to offer advice. People never think that it will happen to them. Off they go in a boat; a bit of carelessness, over-confidence perhaps, and the unexpected happens. A family is bereaved; a bread-winner is removed, or a son and daughter taken. No amount of caution is too great to be exercised when near the water. Even strong swimmers can be overcome. Caution !— and more caution !

Then, too, it is strange the effect which gasoline has on some people. There are those who under ordinary circumstances, seem placid and self-controlled enough. But put them behind the wheel of a car and their whole personality seems to change. They become impatient, eager to pass everybody on the road — cutting-in, taking a chance, is quite the normal practice for them. Once again — with the usual results.

During the war, when speed was restricted to forty miles an hour, we seemed to get along well enough. But now that the rate is increased to fifty, many take that to mean sixty or more. Careful drivers are driven on to the shoulders, even at times by the transports, whose drivers ought to know better, and cutting-in becomes so common as to almost terrify those trying to drive within reason.

There probably is little that can be done about this, either. People who act crazy will probably continue to do so, and the toll of accidents will continue to mount. Only those with iron nerves and under imperative necessity, should tackle the single thoroughfare on a week end.

THE STRIKE

Only an expert is able to tell whether or not the Steel Industry of Canada is able to pay the increase in wages that the workmen are asking. Readers of this paper will know how diligently we have supported the idea of price and wage controls. Long before the end of the war when we anticipated the post-war race between wages and prices, we expressed the hope that the controls would be kept on, and were condemned by certain sections of the Press for so doing. With an unprecedented amount of money in circulation, and with a great shortage of consumer goods, there is bound to be a drive towards inflation, unless the situation is controlled. The Canadian Government has done a good job in keeping the curb on inflation, by means of price and wage ceilings.

The Wartime Prices and Trade Board, to be sure, has had to make some revision upward. Among those who received an increase in the price of their commodity were the steel companies who were allowed an increase of $5.00 a ton. The workers maintain that they should have a share of this. Their research men declare that the increase includes a wage increase. This the management denies. Strikes, to-day are not what they were, even a few years ago. To-day, well trained research men on the labor side, know as much about the costs of production, as management, and can present their case with equal accuracy and conviction. Whether in this case the five dollar a ton increase in the price of steel is sufficient to permit the companies to pay an increased wage demanded by labor, the experts will have to decide.

One factor that must cause some misgivings in the mind of the impartial observer, is the amount of money that is available by the companies, to break the strike. The story of what is happening in Hamilton, does little to win support for management. Glowing stories are coming from the Steel Company of the way the non-strikers are provided for. Food, clothing, gloves, shoes, cigars, cigarettes—and it is even said, beer—are provided free for all who have remained in the plant. That there should be plenty of money for this purpose, when it is maintained there is not enough to give the increase in wages, needs some explaining.

RATIONING BREAD

The British people who have gone through years of mental strain and physical agony cannot be blamed for a certain resentment against the imposition of bread rationing. Protest has been made; a petition to the King, presented, and a revolt of the bakers just averted. When rationing became effective, all but those in Northern Ireland accepted the situation with as good grace as they could muster. In Northern Ireland the bakers refused to obey the law and the military were called in to get the bread delivered. The next few days will be the critical ones. If the country weathers these, then the new regulations will probably be carried on until the wheat situation eases somewhat.

The Labor Government has shown courage and determination in the present crisis. It was anything but a popular move to impose bread rationing, especially as it had not been done, even during the war. The Government must have had the very best reasons for the action they took. Nothing short of a crisis would have prompted them to impose restrictions on "the staff of life".

A sign of the deterioration in political action is shown by the attitude of the Opposition during this crisis. Ordinarily we would expect the Opposition Party to take advantage of an unpopular government bill; that is what is called playing politics, and is to be looked for. But it was not to be expected that the Opposition would take advantage of a situation which involved the very life of the people. It was surely not too much to expect that the Opposition would have confined its remarks to suggestive criticism, on details of the bill. But, instead of that, from Mr. Churchill down, they condemned the bill, holus bolus, and declared the shortage of bread was due to mismanagement. Several by-election campaigns are now under way. In these, the Opposition is using the present crisis for political ends. Mr. Attlee has said that there is no wheat to be had. The old crop is all used up and allocated, and the new crop is not yet in. In view of the unprecedented shipments of food grain from the producing countries to the hungry peoples of the world, his explanation should be taken at face value. There is only so much wheat available and it must be made to go round, until the new crop is available.

The situation in Great Britain should serve to help us, in this country, appreciate the privileges which are ours. If there is any way in which Canada can further help Britain, it should be done.

THE WORLD and THE GESTAPO

BY WAVERLEY ROOT

Almost no attention has been paid to one piece of information which has been turned up as a result of the Allied occupation of Germany—the fact that the Gestapo was working in cooperation with the political police of thirteen other nations before the war, six of them countries which were later to fight against Germany.

Yet there is much instruction to be gained from an examination of this situation. It demonstrates, for instance how a weakening of internal democracy opens opportunities, for foreign totalitarianism to attack democracy from without. It reveals the fundamental nature of the "past war as an international civil war in which totalitarians within every belligerent country were ideologically more in sympathy with the theories of the enemy than with their own, and in which the alignment of the various nations depended upon which of the two ideas secured control of the governmental machinery in which they did in some instances by a very wide margin and in others by a very narrow one.

It is worth while, in one more field, how greatly the Germans were served by their principal international propaganda theme, their insistence on the menace of Communism, for it was on the basis of international action against Communism that the German police succeeded in cooperating with the police of other countries when they did in some instances by a very wide margin and in others by a very narrow one.

It is worth while, in one more field, how greatly the Germans were served by their principal international propaganda theme, their insistence on the menace of Communism, for it was on the basis of international action against Communism that the German police succeeded in cooperating with the police of other countries when they did in some instances have been expected to refuse to have any relations with the Gestapo.

Police representatives of these thirteen countries met with the Germans in Germany in August and September, 1937, and laid the foundations for cooperation with the Gestapo whose effective operation was reported to Goering by Reinhard Heydrich one year later. These dates are important. In 1937 the Nazis had been in power four years, in 1938 five. The blood purge, the persecution of the Jews, the establishment of the concentration camps, were all behind them. Between the two dates the Anschluss had occurred and the campaign which led to Munich had got under way.

There was no possible doubt about the nature of the Gestapo. It was known throughout the world that it was not a normal police organization, bound by law and devoted to the prevention of crime. It was an instrument of oppression and persecution, designed to maintain an oppressive and autocratic regime in power. Yet among the countries which were willing to work with it, were several democracies!

Some of the names which appeared on the Gestapo list are not in the least surprising. First there was, naturally, Japan, an authoritarian country subservient to the imperial power which was wielded by the militarists and the, Zaibatsu, as in Germany the power had long been retained, under various governments, by the General Staff and the Junkers-Industrialist combination. Then there was, of course, Italy, the first adherent to the Axis a totalitarian dictatorship like Germany herself.

In what might be called the first reserve of Germany's later allies were three nations who joined her openly only some time later. Hungary was a dictatorship under Admiral Horthy. Finland, in spite of her republican form of government and her considerable democratic elements, was, in fact, a dictatorship directed by Field Marshal Mannerheim. Bulgaria was a monarchic dictatorship where King Boris was the decisive factor.

Then there was the country which never entered the war, but which served the Axis probably to greater effect than it could possibly have done as a belligerent — Spain. Another dictatorship, under Franco, who owed his position to Axis attack against the Spanish republic. Spain was also a natural partner in this police coalition. A little more surprising, perhaps, was the appearance of Portugal in this group for that country had long been in close relations with England.

But Portugal was a dictatorship, too, under Salazar. The effects of her tie-up with the Gestapo were to appear later when refugees from Hitler began to pour into Portugal and to find themselves once again pursued by a political police force, for that branch of the Portuguese police charged with dealing with them was completely under the influence of the Gestapo.

Now we come to the astonishing part of the list — the six countries which, in spite of their cooperation with the Gestapo, turned up later among the United Nations.

Among them was Brazil. She was the first such at that moment, for she was a dictatorship under Vargas. (If it seems surprising that Argentina was not on the list, it must be remembered that not until 1943 did the strong reactionary influences in Argentina gain complete control of the government. But they were already on the way to that control, and Heydrich, in 1939, reported that cooperation with Argentina was in the "initial stage." Later Argentina, after that it progressed well beyond that stage in the years which followed).

Also on the list was the fifth country to be attacked by German armies — Poland. But Poland as the time was a dictatorship dominated by the policies of the pro-German anti - Russian Colonel Beck. Yugoslavia was another partner—and at that time a monarchial dictatorship dominated by Stoyadinovitch.

The conquest of Yugoslavia was preceded by an attempt to sign an agreement with Germany on the part of the government which the nation refused to accept, upsetting the regime which had signed it. Greece, later to be one of the sorriest victims of Germany, also was on the list of Gestapo allies—but there was then a Metaxas dictatorship. The alignment of all these countries with Germany was perfectly natural.

But the other two names provoke real surprises. For these are those of two countries long considered liberty-loving and democratic, Holland and Belgium. The explanation for their inclusion in the list is to be found in the nature of the political ideas dominant in them at this period.

Holland was an ultra-conservative country, ruled by a sort of oligarchy of great financial powers. Their control of the nation was not oppressive, because the greater part of the population was quite content with their leadership, which rested on the consent of the governed. But Holland was afraid of the Left, afraid of Communism and hence predisposed to take the bait of the Gestapo crusade against it.

In Belgium a heavily industrialized country, the Left was much stronger, but the balance of power among the three political parties, the Socialists, the Catholic and the Liberals, was so close that no one of them was able to form a government of its own, and the consequent three-way coalition cabinets had much less actual directive power than, when it was possessed by a restricted oligarchy dominated by the international financiers and the big industrialists. The fact that the Belgian administration was inspired by the ideology of these ultra-conservative groups made it possible for the Belgian police to treat with the Gestapo.

Perhaps even more significant than the list of those who did co-operate with Germany's secret police was the list of those who did not — the freedom - loving countries of the north — Denmark, Norway and Sweden: the one really democratic state of central Europe, Czechoslovakia; and the leaders in the war against Germany, the United States, Great Britain, France and Russia.

These nations may have made mistakes of tactics in dealing with Germany, but their fundamental soundness was indicated by this touchstone of their aloofness from all contact with the Gestapo. The United States may have weakened the democratic front in the 30's by her isolationism, France and Britain may have surrendered at Munich. Russia may have made an accord with Germany as a matter of strategy rather than a matter of principle, but none of them allowed the long arm of the Gestapo to reach into their territories and pursue their political victims there.

So far as I know, only one of the nations which were in this police conspiracy has tried to offer a defence—and that was so self-revealing that the wisdom of the others in saying nothing seems to have been justified. Robert de Foy still director-general of the Belgian Ministry of Justice, who was director of Belgian Public Security before the war said:

"Just before the war a number of German political and non - political refugees sought sanctuary in Belgium against Gestapo persecutions. Naturally we desire to know with whom we are dealing."

Death-Ray Process Reported Discovered

Bogota, Colombia, (B.U.P.) — A report in several newspapers here, said that artillery Lieut. Hernando Faccini and Marco Montoya Lopez have perfected a death-ray process with which it is alleged they succeeded in carbonizing several small living animals from a considerable distance.

According to the report, the basis of the process is the ionization of certain radio - active substances which, when hurled in an electric beam can extinguish all life over an undetermined distance.

The inventors of the process will be ready to demonstrate it before the President of the republic and high army officers some time in September, when they will have improved their present experimental installations ,the report said.

Pepper To Be 12 p.c. Peppier From Now On

Toronto. — Beginning last Monday Canadians may find their pepper tastes slightly more like pepper than it has for the last four or five years. The reason is that the imitation variety, introduced during the war, will have an increased amount of pure pepper added to the mixture.

Manufacturers here said Canadian firms, using a government formula, have been producing a pepper substitution composed of 40 per cent pure pepper mixed with flour or cereal and chilli, in order to conserve the scarce stocks of the spice. This month the percentage of pure pepper has been raised to 50% per cent.

NATURALLY COLORED COTTONS

Russian scientists and research men working at the Delta Experimental Station of Mississippi, are said to have succeeded in producing cotton colored by nature's own hand. The scientists claim that they have produced color-fast tints in red, burn, greeff, dark brown, blue and khaki.

Some of this colored cotton is being hand-processed and made into yarn to see if it is just wishful hope it is. Whether this will prove to be a profitable commercial discovery has yet to be proved.

LAND OF NITRATE, IODINE AND EARTHQUAKES

A South American Republic and thin in shape, lying between the Andes mountains and the Pacific. Chile is about two and a half times the size of Great Britain, and has a population of 4,879,414 — or rather more than half that of London. The climate is temperate, but earthquakes are frequent.

Capital, Santiago, with a population of about 700,000. Chief seaport, Valparaiso, with a population of about 200,000. Magallanes is the only rearing centre. Is the southernmost city in the world. Chile produces much of the world's copper, nitrate and iodine. Agriculture is also important industry there.

Some of the people are descendants of the early Spanish settlers and others a mixture of these and the native Indians. Spanish is the language spoken.

WOMAN PROFESSOR

A woman holds a Chair at Oxford for the first time. The lady is a famous eye surgeon, Dr. Ida Mann, who has given up her private practice to carry on research in problems of vision. Oxford University has long granted degrees to women but this is the first venture in appointing one to a Chair.

The Royal Free Hospital, London, is staffed entirely by women, and many women in Britain have reached high rank as specialists in all branches of medicine and surgery. And as a point of interest, all staff doctors at the Toronto Women's College Hospital, are women.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, JULY 28TH, 1946

"JESUS AND REVERANCE FOR SPIRITUAL VALUES"

Text: Exodus 20: 7. Leviticus 19: 12. Matthew 5: 33-37. Mark 7: 5-8

The first section of this week's lesson consists of the third commandment. It is a prohibition against a false oath. It is a prohibition against perjury. "But the third commandment may be taken as directed not only against perjury, but against any wrong, or idle, or irreverent use of God's name, as we may infer from Leviticus 19:12 (which is a second passage) which gives a fuller definition of this commandment ..... Profanity is a flippant and common use of the Divine name."

Few would defend perjury. It is a serious crime and, if condoned, would break down, or undermine, the whole foundation of society. It is significant and typical of the teaching of Jesus that all lying is put on the same basis as perjury. Jesus would have man's word as good as their bond. He insists, in the passages that are taken in the remainder of the lesson, that it makes no difference whether one takes an oath or not, a man should always speak the truth, live, think, and act the truth.

There are endless applications of this lesson. In the first place, perjury cannot be condoned. There is no case when lying under oath can be sanctioned or defended.

The next prohibition in the commandment is against profanity. Profanity is a breach of the law and is a mark of a vulgar, evil mind. The profanity of the lumber camps and the primitive society has had a recrudescence during the war. War which breaks down all moral sanctions does a great deal in camps and in the actual combat to foster and develop profanity. That is understandable. War is like that.

But, perhaps, worse than the profanity of the lumber camps and the barracks, is the polite polished form which, in the modern novel, parades under the name of art. It is a sad commentary on our civilization that rarely a novel can be written but that one or more chapters are colored by the base and the low in a polite and a polished form. Swear words, in which the name of God is taken in vain, are taken for granted in books and on the stage. The effect is, undoubtedly, to develop a levity and flippancy in the use of God's name, and towards God and all He stands for in the world.

The rest of the lesson underlies the implications of the third commandment, and puts Christ's seal of approval upon them, and this is that men should speak the truth for truth's sake. In other words there should be no lying, whether under oath or not. Of such character has more than one application. Truth is not only truth of word; there is truth of thought, truth of life, as well. It is unnecessary to say much about truth of word. Two thousand years ago Cicero tells that Publius Scipio Nasica went to call on Ennius, the poet. The maid said he was not at home. Later when Ennius called on Scipio, Scipio, himself, yelled out: "He is not at home." Whereupon Ennius protested, Scipio said: "You are an impudent fellow. When I called at your home I took the maid's word for it that you were not at home, and you refuse to take mine." Two thousand years ago "white lies" were thus discerned by the philosophers.

Truth of life is harder. It is difficult to be consistent and truthful life. The open hypocrite is despised, but it is hard not to be inwardly hypocritical. Sincerity. To avoid that requires courage, character and inner christian strength. We always be true to men and women we know we ought to be, to act as we feel, is not merely an art, it is an achievement. "Candour, open-mindedness, honesty, singleness of motive, are not merely virtues, they are part and parcel of the truth of life."

Truth of thought—straight thinking — how difficult to obtain, and how scarce is spiritual common sense! For too often we trim our thoughts to suit the occasion, we compromise rotating to how to the line. We become 'safe' men rather than fearless outspoken and truthful men. To thine own self be true, and it follows as the night the day thou canst not then be false to any man.

The Third Commandment has great scope for wide application, in the modern world and in the life of every man.

UNRRA Veterinarian On Tour Of Poland

Lublin.—Dr. Argyle Wilder, head of the veterinary department of the UNRRA Mission in Poland, has been visiting this city as part of a tour of several weeks during which he will study Polish veterinary colleges and centres and their needs. He expressed admiration for the professors and students, who are carrying on their work under the most difficult conditions, and promised help from UNRRA in the form of funds and equipment for the rehabilitation of veterinary clinics at Lublin University.

Dr. Wilder, who is particularly interested in the training of veterinary surgeons and in lab ratories and study of animal diseases in Poland arrived from Washington only a few weeks ago via England. En route he visited Belfast to inspect Irish horses purchased by UNRRA. Two hundred and thirty-eight of these horses had already been shipped to Poland by mid-June and 1,000 more are expected shortly.

Transit Camp Opened By UNRRA For Returning Poles

Berlin — A new transit camp for 5,000 persons has been opened by UNRRA for Poles returning home by sea routes. It is the fourth of its kind which have been specially organized for the displaced Poles from the British Occupation Zone. British authorities estimate that about 10,000 Poles will pass through the camps each week.

UNRRA Parcels Given As Overtime Rewards

Warsaw — Polish workmen employed on the rebuilding of the Poniatowski Bridge have been rewarded with 6'0 UNRRA parcels by the Ministry of Supply, for working overtime.

Eggs From UNRRA Hatched In Poznan Incubators

Poznan — The eggs flown recently to Poland by UNRRA have been hatched in incubators here and shipment twice weekly of the chicks was started in mid-June to Czczecin, where they are being distributed to various farms. The Szczecin incubating cooperative society will receive a total of 4,800 American eggs.

FISHING FLIES KEE' INJURED SEAMAN BUSY

Seattle — Hugh Cooney, former merchant seaman now laid up in a dockside accident at Seward, Alaska, five years ago and he has been tying a wheel chair ever since. His spine was crushed and doctors told Cooney he would never walk again.

But flies, fishing flies, that is, have given Cooney a new lease on life.

More than a year ago, after instructions from members of the Washington State Fly Club, Cooney started in the business of making fishing flies.

He has a complete workshop beside his bed in Seattle's Marine Hospital and now supplies twenty sporting goods stores with the lures.

"I manage to turn out from six to eight dozen flies a day," Cooney said. "The orders keep rolling in. I have even got my mother and one of my hospital buddies helping me."

WOOL PROTECTS

The exigencies of the war have tested all clothing materials and it is matter of interesting speculation just what material will ultimately win out for men and women clothing.

Wool is excellent as protection against cold, but it has been found that a long cotton garment worn over the wool increases the warmth thirty per cent. The recent introduction, rayon, is greatly in demand for women's clothing, and nylon, also, is certain to be popular, while Saran and Velon, two new plastics, are in the field as competitors. Linen and silk will still be in demand.

London, (C.P.) — Hugh Dalton, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons that licences had been issued for the import of 250 timber-framed houses from Canada of £118,750 (475,000 total value, and no further licences would be issued.

If further applications for licences to import such houses were made, they would be considered systematically by his department which controls dollar purchases.

He was answering C. Osborne, Conservative member for Louth, who had asked what sum had been provided to import Canadian timber-framed houses to Burton-on-Trent district.

A BIRD ACTOR

A contortionist among birds is the flamingo, which is all twists and turns about its long thin neck and still longer and thinner legs.

Its nest is a mound of mud often 15 inches high. Usually one egg only is laid about the end of May and hatched four weeks later.

The birds live together in hundreds and their lovely pink feathers make a bright splash of color at their feeding grounds.

Driving Carefully With Rest and Relaxation Will Reduce Accidents

"The worst example of folly is the person who takes a vacation as a means of rest and relaxation and then exhausts himself in diving to or from the place where he plans to rest and relax." "Hygeia, The Health Magazine", declares in an editorial:

"If one is planning to drive by motor either as a form of vacation or as a part of a vacation plan, drive only a few hours each day and get plenty of rest and relaxation between the periods of driving," the magazine advises.

Discussing "Motor Accidents On American Highways," the editorial says:

"Sudden death still strikes on American highways. Traffic fatalities still continue as a major cause of death in the United States. The time may yet come when the motor-car will be known as Public Killer No. 1. With a record of 35,000 killed and at least 1,200,000 seriously injured each year in motor-accidents, the motor vehicle would seem to be more deadly than the tunnel of bombers.

"An average big day was October 4th, 1940, when eighty-five people were killed and 1,895 others were critically injured. Sixty-three were men and boys, and twenty-one were women and girls. One was a philanthropist, another was a prominent doctor, another was a university professor and still another was a worker in the sugar-beet fields. However, the motor car accident is no respecter of persons. The great and the small, the high and the lowly are figured largely among the wreckage.

"In almost every case the driver of the motor-car is responsible. Occasionally, it is the machine, but as with accidents now occurring in airplanes, the driver is far more often responsible for the accident than is any breakdown of the machine. For that reason, the National Institute of Health, utilizing its physicians, psychologists, biochemists and scientists, has completed an intensive study of 880 truck drivers, with a view to determining accurately the mental and nervous fatigue resulting from hours of driving under actual road conditions.

"The test showed that driving efficiency decreases most sharply after the first two or three hours, and thereafter decreases gradually. It is impossible to determine the actual point at which driving efficiency drops beyond the safety line. However, the Interstate Commerce Commission now requires that truck and bus drivers be off duty eight hours after driving ten hours. Unquestionably, safety requires the average motorist to avoid long, uninterrupted periods of driving. The latest investigation shows that at least one accident in every hundred is due to the fact that the driver was asleep. People who fall asleep while driving try to conceal the fact. However, if a record is kept of the amount of sleep that a driver has had previous to the time of the accident, one can get a fairly good indication as to the need for sleep at the time of the accident. It is not always an unintelligent man that falls asleep at the wheel; it is, however, always a careless one.

"In a series of studies made on this point it was found that one accident concerned a college professor hurrying home from a long vacation, another was a salesman who wanted to be on hand in a small town the next morning for a conference, a third was a farmer who had been celebrating on a visit with his nephew in town, and a fourth was a clergyman who got up too early in the morning to keep an appointment."

LIVINGSTONE'S BIBLE

One of the recent additions to the Scottish National Memorial to David Livingstone is a Bible given to him by his wife as a wedding gift. It was discovered in Norwich by Mrs. Hugh Ramage, who has an interest in Livingstone's relics, and she has presented it to the Trust. It bears the inscription: "To David Livingstone from his affectionate Mary, January 9, 1845."

Car Yours Anyway Prices Board Warns

Ottawa.—W. Spence, Prices Board enforcement administrator, has offered some good advice to buyers of used automobiles, who, it seems, have been getting the worst of black market deals in more ways than one. The advice: don't buy a used car above the ceiling price — you can get the car anyway.

"If the buyer will go to the nearest office of the Board when an illegal price is demanded," Mr. Spence said, "we will force the vendor to sell him the car at the ceiling figure."

So far there have been 784 convictions for black market dealings in used cars. Of these, 497 were buyers and 287 vendors.

"Lost Weekend" Due

Defence of Crete Said Not in Vain

London (Reuters) — The defense of Crete against the German invasion of 1941—"among the finest achievements of the forces of the British Empire" — was not in vain since it "saved in all probability Cyprus, Syria, Iraq and perhaps Tobruk," Field-Marshal Sir Archibald Wavell, former British commander-in-chief in the Middle East, said in a dispatch on the campaign.

The dispatch covered operations in the Middle East during the first half of 1941 when Sir Archibald had six important campaigns on his hands—in Greece, Cyrenaica, Crete, Iraq, Syria and Italian East Africa.

Failure to hold Crete was due mainly to "overwhelming superiority of Axis aircraft and the way in which they were handled in conjunction with ground troops," he said.

Oil was used in Bavaria for medicinal purposes as early as 1456.

London (Reuters)— There are now 438 459 more Roman Catholics in the United States than last year, making in total of over 34,452,459, the Vatican radio stated, recently.

The Archdiocese of Chicago, Boston and New York count more than 1,000,000 Roman Catholics, each, the broadcast said.

During the year 784,430 conversions to Roman Catholicism took place and 529 new priests were consecrated, bringing the total number of priests in the United States to nearly 39,000.

Death Penalty, France For Black Marketeers

Paris, (B.U.P.) — Food Minister Yves Farge announced that the Government had approved his proposal to impose the death penalty against big black market operators and that a death penalty decree would be made effective as soon as the Minister of Justice could approve it.

Special food ministry police will operate "pitilessly" against the black marketers, Farge said.

Farge promised a rapid development of a free market and said that by October only two ration cards would be necessary, one for bread, the other for assorted commodities not considered part of an essential diet.

A new material made from wood shavings and scrapings is being used by a Munich firm in the construction of small one-family houses, the British News Service in Germany reports. The material, covered with thin coatings of cement, is made into plates two-inches thick.

WEDDING BELLS

SCHLIEVERT - STORMES

The marriage was solemnized at the home of the bride's mother, 99 Aylmer Street, Peterborough, on Saturday, June 29th, of Wilma Ilene, the daughter bf Mrs. L. M. Stormes and the late P. H. Stormes, Odessa, and Carl Lorne Schlievert, son of Mr. Clayton Schlievert and the late Mrs. Schlievert, of Arnprior. Rev. B. C. Dawson, of Toronto, performed the ceremony, with the wedding music being provided by Miss Edna Schlievert, sister of the groom, on a piano accordion. The house was decorated with pink and white peonies.

The bride wore for her marriage a street-length dress of royal blue crepe with white accessories and a corsage of red roses. Her sister, Miss Irene Stormes, was the only attendant and wore a dress of pink silk jersey with white accessories and a corsage of pink carnations and blue corn flowers.

For the wedding trip the bride chose a peacock blue two-piece suit with white accessories. On their return the couple will reside in Arnprior.

HUBER - WAY

The Church of the Assumption, at Erinsville, was the scene of a very pretty wedding of widespread interest on Monday, July 15th, at nineteen thirty, when Rev. J. A. Powell united in marriage Mary Margaret Rose, only daughter of Mrs. Way and the late Mr. John Way, and Joseph Michael, second son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Huber, of Bamberg, Ontario. The Wedding March was played by Miss Mary Neville, cousin of the bride. During the mass a choir composed of young cousins of the bride, sang appropriate hymns with Mrs. Ambrose Kidd at the organ. Mr. Ambrose Way and Mr. Jack Neville acted as acolytes.

The altar and sanctuary were adorned with ferns and flowers. White and pink and white and yellow streamers to which were attached large white bells, formed an arch over the bridal party.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Francis Way, looked lovely in a gown of French organza, embroidered with a floral pattern of lily-of-the-valley. The long fitted sleeved came to a point. Her fingertip veil of white embroidered net fell from a Mary Queen of Scots headdress. She carried a white prayer book from which fell a cascade of narrow white ribbons tied with flowers. Her only ornament was a gold cross and chain.

The bride was attended by two sisters of the broom, Miss Anna Huber, as maid of honour, wore a floor length dress of yellow net over taffeta, while Miss Rita Huber, as the bridesmaid, wore a model floor-length dress of pink chiffon. They both were similar headdresses of matching net arranged in a halo and caught with tiny flowers. They carried white prayer books with streamers of satin ribbons matching their dresses. John Way, tiny nephew of the bride, made a charming ring-bearers, carrying a white satin pillow.

The groom was attended by Mr. Austin Way and Mr. Justin Way, twin brothers of the bride. Mr. Neville Way and Mr. Donald Way were the ushers.

After the marriage ceremony dinner was served at the Superior Restaurant, Napanee, to about forty guests. The bride's mother received, wearing a figured silk dress and large white hat, and white corsage. She was assisted by Mrs. Huber, dressed in navy crepe with navy and white hat and a white corsage.

Capt. Rev. E. J. Way, cousin of the bride, acted as toastmaster. The groom responded to the toast to the bride.

Later in the evening a large number of relatives and friends gathered at Beaver Lake pavilion and spent an enjoyable time. The newly married couple were the recipients of many valuable and useful gifts. Afterwards the couple left on a trip to Iroquois Falls and other northern points.

The bride travelled in a yellow silk jersey dress, brown gabardine coat and straw hat with white accessories. On their return they will reside at Bamberg, Ontario.

Agricultural Body Offers Scholarships

Ottawa. — The Agricultural Institute of Canada will award twenty scholarships of $800 each for post-graduate training at Canadian Universities of recognised standing, C. G. O'Brien, Institute secretary, announced recently.

The scholarships, open to both men and women, were subscribed by business firms interested in the advancement of agriculture. The competition closes August 30th.

Final Action on Flag To Be Delayed

Ottawa. — Final action on a design for a Canadian flag likely will be delayed until next session because of the opposition Quebec members to the design recommended by the Parliamentary flag committee, it has been learned.

The committee recommended that the Red Ensign with a golden Maple Leaf on a white background replacing the coat cf arms in the fly, be adopted as Canada's flag. There has been no debate on the committee's report, presented recently.

It was learned Quebec members who planned an extensive fight against adoption of the report have found out that under House rules the report actually is not in order. They found the committee had not carried out its terms cf reference because the report did not specify what size the Union Jack in the canton should be or what size the maple leaf in the fly should be.

Under House rules this was sufficient to disqualify the committee's report.

Postponement of the issue until next session would be satisfactory to many Quebec members who have been hoping that in time they will be able to swing sufficient support their way to have a "distinctive" design chosen for the Canadian flag.

Aerial Transport Helps In Food Distribution

Aerial transport developed to a high degree of efficiency during the war years can also be utilized to save agricultural crops which might otherwise be spoiled, it was demonstrated in the Bay of Quinte district over the last weekend when nearly 100 tons of freshly threshed field peas were transported 350 miles from Trenton to Windsor, Ont., for canning.

The peas were sent to Windsor by the Stokely - Van Camp Canning Company whose Trenton factory proved incapable of handling the volume of locally grown peas coming into the factory. Windsor factories were able to handle the peas because of the flood conditions occuring there earlier in the season which partially ruined the pea crop in that district.

Early Saturday morning a Douglas C-4 transport, owned by the American Airlines flew in from Kansas, U.S. and started immediately taking on loads of peas for Windsor. One and one half-hours after loading was completed the pea plane landed at a Windsor airport from where the peas were rushed to the canning factory for canning.

Making the necessary number of trips with ten tons to the load, the big four-motored transport by Sunday night had flown close to 100 tons of peas to the Windsor area and the emergency at the Trenton factory was remedied.

Shipping Board To Be Dissolved

Ottawa. — There is a strong possibility that the world shipping situation will have improved sufficiently by October to permit abolition of the Canadian Shipping Board. During the war this body collaborated with the United Kingdom and the United States.

The Board was to have gone out of existence some time ago but by agreement it was continued to enable countries of the United Nations to rehabilitate their shipping berfore routes were thrown open to competition from neutral countries which suffered few sinkings.

AN EPIC OF VICTORY VIVIDLY DESCRIBED

BY E. HAROLD BANKS

Perhaps no campaign in modern times has been less publicized than the successful re-conquest of Burma, last three years after Field Marshal Sir Harold Alexander's masterly and hard fought retreat from the country in 1942, a retreat which, taking five months, saved India by giving her time to prepare. Once more India was threatened in March, 1944, but General Slim was equal to the occasion, and the 80,000 picked enemy troops were finally practically wiped out with 50,000 of them dead.

Under Lord Mountbatten's command for the re-conquest in 1944-45, there were 1,070,000 troops from Great Britain and the British Empire, plus 600,000 Chinese and approximately 30,000 U.S.A. including railway and road engineering troops and the famous U.S.A. Air Force which predominated in strategic bombing. In the air alone, while the R.A.F. specialized in tactical units, but both working under closely integrated Anglo - American combined command.

In the minds of the Imperial Headquarters Command at Tokyo, Burma was of vital importance, for, even after their dream of joining up with the Germans in the Persian Gulf had melted into thin air, the Japanese did not despair of conquering India, and their 1944 offensive was launched with the object in view. Although far from their homeland, Burma was to them, naturally, the ideal jumping off spot for the conquest of India and Slim's mauling with their very best troops. In spite of the fact their 80,000 force was practically wiped out at the hands of the Imphal Plains and in the Pakh-Tamu-Ukhrul area, the enemy defended the country with the greatest tenacity for over a year under ceaseless attack from west to east and north to south.

The 1944-1945 campaigns could not have developed as they did in Burma without the experience and training of 1942 and 1943. The Japanese had overrun South Eastern Asia, by surprise, by superior numbers in the air and on the ground, by his jungle-wise infantry, by infiltration, the road block and then capture or annihilation. The Allies, therefore, had to beat them at their own game, and due to the rigorous training during the lean years of 1942 and 1943, they did beat them, and the ordinary Tommy from the back streets of London and Glasgow overwhelmed the Japs at jungle tactics.

The enemy did not realize how the jungle and the appalling difficulties of the terrain in Burma could be defeated except by surface troops, but the late General Wingate found the answer in the air. And it was the answer that made possible the re-conquest of Burma. He started by supplying by plane munitions, rations, medical supplies, even by raiding columns which marched on foot. Then came the maintenance of positions far behind the enemy's lines of troops, which had been driven in and could be maintained indefinitely. Finally, the combination of the two, when whole divisions were flown in or out, and were maintained by air not only when acting as obstructive units of limited mobility deep in enemy occupied but even during the course of all out fighting when guns, tanks, mules and bulky equipment generally were delivered like clockwork. Thus did Wingate conquer the country, the jungle and finally the Japs.

General Wingate's loss in a plane crash was a terrible tragedy, but Wingate's theory of air supply developed in conjunction with Vice-Cochran's U.S. Air Commando. In the battles of 1944 and 1945, the vital factor was the air superiority of the Allies, and this made possible the carrying out of Wingate's plans with the precision of a quartermaster issuing stores. By August, 1944, the Japs did not have a single plane left in the Burma sky, with 800 of their planes destroyed in combat or on the ground since the previous December. Daily the Allied air force kept the sky clear of Jap fighters, while giving our transports and bombers the all-clear signal.

Unhampered, therefore, by enemy air action, the Allied army and seaborne airmen supported the ground troops in the advance and relief, bombed and strafed enemy position, blasted military and economic targets with salvos of rockets and provided what was the most accurate air support seen in any theatre. They supplied the forward troops whether on the ground or by parachuting in force from permanent bases two or three hundred miles from the nearest front, with everything they needed, and on the return journeys they would fly out with the wounded. Over the whole area of Imphal they flew in daily, unhindered 200 tons of ammunition and supplies.

Our air force strangled the Japanese lines, bombed his air communications, and his docks at Rangoon, shot up his river craft, smashed his bridges and roads, cut and recut the vital Bangkok-Rangoon railroad, built with the sweat and blood of 60,000 British prisoners of war which carried the main bulk of the enemy's supplies into Burma. They caused the Japs, in very truth, to realize the game was up and they made possible the all out advance of General Slim's 14th Army of 500,000 Empire troops which ended with the capture of Rangoon on May 3rd, 1945 and the re-conquest of Burma, except for mopping-up operations.

It was decided at the Quebec Conference that Lord Mountbatten would proceed to recapture Burma, first by a series of amphibious operations down the Burma coast to Rangoon, but when the hundreds and thousands of landing craft, earmarked for this, had to be diverted first to the south, and then to Normandy. The land campaign of 1944-1945, therefore, had to be fought to a very different pattern, than the whole armies advancing, in spite of certain difficulties, west to east, and join up with the northern Chinese army, supported by Merrill's American Marauders. General Pick's bulldozers and Colonel Hirschfield's U.S. Army Engineers at Myitkyina and Mogaung. Major General Festing's British 36th Division was flown in entire with all its equipment.

They kept the retreating garrisons of Myitkyina and Mogaung on the run, captured Hopin and Pinbaw, and fanned out down the valley in a concerted effort with the 14th Army from the northwest, and the Chinese "Salween Force" moving in from Tenkchung in the east. The Allies were on the road to Mandalay while fell on March 20, 1945. Converging on Mandalay, at the end of February, were General Sir Oliver Lesse's Northern Combat Area Command, including General Daniel I. Sulton's U. S. Army, whose ground troops were four Stilwell - trained Chinese divisions, Festing's British 36th Division, and the American MARS force of two brigades. General Sultan had succeeded General Stilwell. In the centre, General Slim's 14th Army, now twelve divisions strong, all British and Indian troops of Empire, was the largest component, and in the southwest, General Christison's 15th Corps, now independent of the 14th Army, with three divisions composed of Indian and African troops.

Under the inexorable pressure of those converging forces, and despite determined rearguard actions and desperate counter-attacks, the Japanese were steadily driven back, with the result that the United States Air Force, from the operations developing eastwards from Arakan, where the campaign had originated. The Japanese had never expected the British to hold in the Arakan campaign, but they had only held but elements of the whole area. But before this, General Slim and his 14th Army stood triumphant on the great battlefield of the Imphal plains, which really decided the destiny of the country. Victory was then inevitable, even if it was a year removed, but the Battle of Imphal Plains was only made possible by the holding of the Arakan front which meant that General Slim could entice the Japanese to come out and fight in the open plain. They walked into the trap and were wiped out and the future was assured.

When Mandalay fell on March 20, it left General Slim only 55 days to capture the 330 mile distant Rangoon, the capital before the monsoon struck on May 15th. He captured it on May 3rd, in 43 days in spite of the fact that the Japanese troops contesting his advance were numerous and skilful dug-in and desperate. South of Meiktila, in a single day, on April 16th, over eleven hundred Japanese were counted killed, and in the open country of Central and Southern Burma, the tanks and armoured cars of Lt.-Gen. Stilwell's force did their own. Pyaubwe fell on April 11th and Yenaungyaung shortly after. Around Meiktila, its three important airfields, the Japanese had built some of the strongest defences yet encountered by the Allies, but the speed of Slim's onset was so impetuous that light tanks in the lead actually ran down Japanese gunners directing traffic at the crossroads.

As Japanese resistance became gradually disorganized under Allied body-blows, sniping parties fleeing southwards to Siam, frequently changed clothes with Burmese peasantry. By the end of April, the 14th Army's front was 150 miles, Pegu was taken on May 1st, and, as the converging columns drove on Rangoon from the northeast and southwest, Lord Mountbatten sprang his famous estuary to come miles south of the town. As the landing parties advanced northward, the 14th Air British Army under General Slim's command in the last leg of its 1,000-mile drive from the Indian frontier, found that the Japanese had had enough and had pulled out of Rangoon in flight to the northeast and the Japs last hold on the country had collapsed.

Slim had beaten the enemy and the monsoon.

Formerly called Belize it is a colony on the Caribbean coast of Central America, bounded on its landward sides by Guatemala and Honduras. The country is mostly forest, swampy near the coast, hilly inland. Its climate is tropical with much rain, and the highest temperature is 96 degrees F.

The population is 81,347. The capital, Belize, is a seaport of 16,687 people.

The first British settlers who were buccaneers, went there in 1638 to cut and sell the rich timber. To-day the people are descendants of the white settlers, Negroes, and Indians.

GOOD ENGLISH OAK

Britons throughout the Commonfelt a thrill of satisfaction on learning that the timber for the rebuilding of the Houses of Commons is to be Stratford-on-Avon. Three and a quarter centuries roughly take us back to Shakespeare's day, so it is highly probable that among the trees felled were some that he saw or rested beneath.

We are reminded of the huge oaks felled at Windsor in Sussex for the vast new roof of Westminster Hall. Those were trunks that, even after the sawing away of their outer wood in shaping, still showed from 500 to 600 rings. Each ring represented one year's growth; so those trees were was growing when Chaucer lived and wrote his Canterbury Tales.

POWERS TO ATTEND U.S. CONFERENCE ON TARIFF REDUCTION

Washington — Tariff cutting is the order of the day on the United States program for expanding global trade.

As a quick follow-up to the $3,750,000,000 loan to Britain, some thirty or more inter-departmental committees are at work within the Government drafting lists of th usands of commodities on which lower import duties will be considered.

Under authority of the 1934 Trade Agreements Act renewed last year the Administration can slash present tariffs as much as fifty per cent. World American industries are not jeopardized by the cuts.

These reductions, however, will be made applicable only to countries willing to offer comparable concessions.

But whereas earlier trade agreements were negotiated separately with individual countries, the present plans call for a 16-power conference to begin in Geneva next April which will write a single compact covering not only tariff duties but other trade barriers in the form of quotas, preferences and subsidies.

Preparations for this conference are regarded as important as the beginning of the second stage in longrange United States plans to raise international living standards by freeing and expanding commerce.

The first step was the British loan. Officials are counting on the trade conference early next year, to bring early relaxation and ultimate abolishment of United Kingdom trade preferences. This system has made it more economical for members of the Empire to trade among themselves rather than with outsiders.

Many Canadian industries have been built up during the war because of empire preferences, particularly the automobile industry. United States companies with subsidiaries in Canada have supplied Commonwealth markets - from Canadian plants. Preferences hold true on copper, lead and other base metals.

Recent revaluation of the Canadian dollar on parity with United States funds is seen in some circles as a tendency for Canada to get somewhat away from empire preference.

Only Russia, among the major powers other than the conquered nations has not replied to the invitations sent out seven months ago.

"And what did you learn in the Scripture lesson, dear?" asked mother. "Oh, all about the Ten Commandos," replied Tommy.

Canada's forests have one major enemy—bugs. There are insect bugs and fire bugs. The latter destroy millions of dollars of Canada's wealth.

SUGAR IS THE FOUNDATION OF ALL LIFE

BY DR. WILLIAM J. ROBBINS

The director of an institution concerned with the preservation, dissemination and advancement of knowledge about plants always welcomes an opportunity to point out their fundamental importance and essential character. This willingness is based on the belief that if enough people understood the importance of plants, an institution like The New York Botanical Garden would be placed in the enviable position of having more funds than it could use instead of less than necessary for its major functions.

Few of us, occupied as we are with the daily routine of living, realise the true significance of plants and the reasons for it; few of us realize that we are able to live and keep on living only because of the current existence of plants; that if plants were eliminated we and all animal life would disappear in short order.

Our dependence on plants is because the food we eat, whether it be fish, vegetables, fowl or meat, comes in the last analysis from plants and, in addition, the oxygen we breathe as well as the vitamins and indispensable amino acids, so essential for our nutrition, are derived from plants. In other words, without plants we would starve to death, die of suffocation and expire from a combination of deficiency diseases.

Why are we so dependent upon plants? The answer is simple, though an explanation and elaboration of the answer is more complex. We are so completely dependent upon plants (primarily those which contain the green pigment, chlorophyll) because they alone of all living organisms have the power to make sugar from the simple materials, carbon dioxide and water. We and other creatures are not able to duplicate this feat which is essential for the economy of nature.

The process by which this is accomplished is called photosynthesis. It occurs in the light in the presence of the green pigment, chlorophyll, so obvious in the leaves of grass or a maple tree. As the result of photosynthesis, water and gaseous carbon dioxide are combined to form sugar and oxygen. The process may be simply stated as follows: gaseous carbon dioxide in the presence of light and chlorophyll in the living plant combines with water to form gaseous oxygen and sugar.

We and other animals have no chlorophyll and cannot form sugar nor produce oxygen no matter how long we may bathe in the sun. In our bodies sugar is destroyed—split up into carbon dioxide and water—not made.

There is another important feature of photosynthesis which needs emphasis and that is this. It occurs only in the light, and part of the energy of the sunlight which falls on a green leaf is stored in the sugar which is made there. The best estimates state that the amount of energy fixed annually in this fashion is equivalent to 300,000,000,000 tons of coal. And note this: No other practical process has been discovered or devised which fixes the sun's energy in chemical compounds.

Yes, you may say, but animals use other things than sugar for food—for example, we eat oils, fats, starch and proteins and some animals can even digest wood, and while we can burn sugar and thus release the energy stored in it, we can also burn wood or coal, petroleum, palm oil or whale oil.

This is correct. However, all of these substances are made directly or indidectly from the sugar produced in photosynthesis. In fact, all constituents of the plant body (except those which are purely mineral) are made from this basic compound. The starch in a potato is constructed from the sugar synthesized in the leaf of a potato plant; the cellulose and lignin of wood are built from sugar made in the leaves of the tree of which the wood is part; the oil in a peanut or soybean and the protein in wheat grains, the quinine in the bark of a cinchona tree, the digitalis of the foxglove, the opium of the poppy, the perfume given off by a rose and the pigment which colors its petals are all developed from sugar by the alchemy of the plant. Every organic compound in the plant, no matter what, is derived from sugar. So even if the diet of an animal were limited to vegetable foods containing starch, oil or proteins and no sugar, it would still be living at the expense of substances constructed from sugar, and we could not escape our dependence upon this fundamental substance by substituting meat, fish or eggs.

If you eat a beefsteak or a lobster or drink a glass of wine, you are consuming food which was at one time sugar. If you dig your garden, play golf, drive a horse or an automobile, you are using some of the sun's energy originally fixed in sugar made by plants in the process of photosynthesis. This energy transferred from the original sugar to the substances derived from it is released from the food you or the rose ate or from the gasoline burned in the automobile.

It is justifiable, therefore, to refer to sugar as the foundation of life, the substance upon which in the last analysis your existence and the development of modern civilization rests. This situation seems likely to continue until some way is found of duplicating in a test tube in a chemical laboratory the photosynthesis activity of the green plant—until some other primary source of energy is available other than that which comes from the sun.

FRANCE AND THE GERMAN NAVY

BY WAVERLEY ROOT

To the many causes which have long been provoking friction between France and the Big Three Powers, another has been added. The naval authorities of these three countries at Hamburg have decided, after dividing among themselves what they want of the German fleet, to destroy the rest.

The French have naturally protested. The justification for imposing reparations on a beaten enemy is to make that enemy pay for the loss he has caused. On this basis, France has the best case of any of the nations for acquiring some of the German ships. Her naval situation was destroyed as a result of the attack on her by Germany more completely than that of any of the other Allies. She is in greater need of warships today than any of the Big Three countries who are taking them.

The United States comes out of the war with a navy greater than all the other combined navies of the world. After this colossus comes Great Britain. Russia, never a great naval power, as befits her status as the greatest land empire in the world, fought her war mostly on land and has suffered relatively little change in her naval situation. Moreover, her need of warships is slight (unless, eventually, she obtains such positions as one of the Italian colonies for which she has filed claim) since she does not hold outlying possessions which can be reached only by sea.

But France, who went into the war as one of the six "principal naval powers" of the world, has come out of it virtually without a navy. Of the six, three, Germany, Italy and Japan, were defeated after having forced aggressive war on their neighbors and are being justifiably deprived of their navies. The other two, Great Britain and the United States, as victors, continue to be great naval powers. Of the Allies, only France has been knocked out of the war and it would therefore seem that she should have first claim to captured enemy ships in reparation for the loss of her naval position. Yet, she was left out in the cold, on the Italian Navy (against which she had an extra claim, since Italy lost virtually France's entire Mediterranean merchant fleet by using it in her convoys to North Africa) and now she is being deprived of any share of the German fleet as well.

Yet France's requests were modest. She did not ask for any of the major units of the German fleet, in spite of the fact that her own big ships were lost in the war. She asked for a total of 32,000 tons of shipping — less than the tonnage of a single one of her own battleships — six small and six large destroyers; six 1,600-ton submarines; three freighters; two submarine supply vessels; and several non-combatant craft to be used for technical research.

French resentment at the refusal of this claim while the major powers which already have strong navies are helping themselves to a little bit more, will not be lessened by the reflection that some of her losses were incurred at the hands of her own allies. Her chief loss through German action occurred when she scuttled her fleet at Toulon when the Germans tried to seize it. This action probably shortened the war considerably. It would seem only just that reparations settlements should take account of this fact.

France's other principal losses occurred because of Allied action. It was before the pronouncedly pro-German character of the Vichy government developed that the British shelled the French ships at Mers-el-Kebir. This still rankles with many Frenchmen who are by no means of the vichyite category. The merits of the case are highly arguable, and if the British want to find a counterweight for an action which was possibly too tough, they might point to the attitude they adopted towards the French warships at Alexandria, which was too gentle. But from the British point of view, it might seem to be an astute move to assuage ruffled French feelings about Mers-el-Kebir by supporting French claims to naval reparations.

Another loss which the French deplored was that of their proudest undersea craft, the "submersible cruiser," as the Surcouf, the world's largest submarine, was called. The fact that the Surcouf had been lost while serving in the Free French Navy was revealed during the war. The manner in which she was lost was not. She was sunk by mistake by an American ship.

Finally, the last considerable losses suffered by the French Navy were also at Allied hands—those incurred in the invasion of North Africa. Frenchmen do not hold this against the Allies. On the contrary they put the blame for it on the Vichy commanders who resisted the Allied landings.

Out of all this France, once an important naval power, has emerged virtually without a navy. She thought herself justified in asking in reparations a few minor German craft which her allies do not want and actually propose to destroy. She finds herself refused even these ships, which are candidates for the scrap heap. That is not likely to increase her readiness to co-operate with her allies.

SAFETY THEATRES ON RAILS

Designed to give more than 20,000 men of the Canadian Pacific Railway on eastern lines "visual" education in general train, interlocking rules and safe practices, a theatre on rails has begun its tour of lines from the Head of the Great Lakes to the Atlantic seaboard. When schools re-open children at divisional points will be invited to visit the car, in which have been incorporated all the features of a modern theatre, and see films which will teach them to avoid trespassing on railways and to prevent crossing accidents. Here J. C. McClung, general safety agent for eastern lines, is lecturing to a class of railroaders on the operation of block signals with the aid of light panels which give an exact replica of the signals operation on the line. The rule in question is shown on the screen. Inset, N. R. Crump, general manager for eastern lines, who conceived the idea of such a car, is speaking over the car's public address system in describing the operation of the lighted panels to C.P.R. officials when the car was put on display in Montreal when it was turned out of Angus Shops, after conversion from a World War II hospital car.

LOOT FROM ALL EUROPE

North American Newspaper Alliance

BY JUDY BARDEN

Ali Baba and his Forty Thieves had nothing on Adolf Hitler and his band of robbers and murderers. In the vaults of the Reichsbank I feasted my eyes on hundreds of bars of gold, thousands of bags of gold coins and dozens of boxes and cases containing exquisite jewels looted from all over Europe.

Major Edward H. Jesser of Hackensack, N.J., who is in charge of foreign exchange, showed me around the vaults in company with Capt. Ben Shilling, of Baltimore, Md. One officer is not allowed to show the treasure—they must be in twos.

Lieut. Col. Henry D. Cragon, of Nashville, Tenn., also has his share of the responsibility. In fact, he is more responsible than anybody, as he signed receipts for the stuff and it's his biggest headache.

"If I dare go home and buy a house or a car or anything else, for that matter, people will think I slipped a bar of gold into my pocket," he said.

In all he has signed for 72 shipments since April 16. "Some of it came in Gen. Patton's armored cars with fighter escorts," he said "and some was just handed in from G.I.'s pockets. Most of it was discovered by the United States Third Army.

There is $30,000,000 worth of gold which originally came from the National Bank of Hungary. When the Russians were approaching Budapest the Hungarians got scared and hid the money in an Austrian church, where the men of the Third Army discovered it. There are three rows of gold bricks which are called "Rothschtroys gold." This had been hastily buried in a huge hole in Austria, but again the cagle-eyed Third Army found it.

"What's in the next room?" I asked Major Jesser as we turned to walk back.

"Oh just more gold," he said, utterly bored by the sight of gold bricks bars and nuggets.

One room contained cases full of personal effects of displaced persons. These cases hold such things as diaries, artificial teeth, letters and a few bank notes. These things will eventually be turned over to various governments in the hope that they may, some day, reach their rightful owners.

This is SS loot," the major said. "When a displaced person was going to be killed, the SS guards stripped him of everything. That little bag in the corner contains wedding rings which they didn't have time to melt down.

In another corner of the room were eight gold and silver bricks. I was told that these bricks were made from gold and silver watch cases, bracelets, wedding rings and tiny pieces of jewellery which had been stolen from displaced persons and melted.

It may have been my imagination but this room somehow smelled of tragedy, and I was glad those pathetic pieces of personal property could not tell the story of their owners' death.

The colonel, major and captain are completely in the dark as to what is going to happen to this treasure trove.

"All I hope," Jesser said, "is that they don't bring me back ten years from now to start work on it."

Heated Suits

London — Long distance lorry drivers, busmen, cold storage workers and private motorists will soon be able to buy English electrically heated suits. These suits were made in the United Kingdom during the war for both British and United States airmen and tank crews.

The factories are now turning to production for home and export. Orders from Australia, Canada, New Zealand, America, Sweden, Norway, and Holland are pouring in, reports the London Daily Express. The manufacturers of this heated clothing, will be opening a big new factory in the North of England in order to step up production. The output will be on a very large scale— it is estimated that 1,400 workers can turn out one thousand suits a day — but it will be some time before the supply meets the demand.

THE USEFUL ZEBU

The Indian Ox, known to us as the Zebu, differs from the Common Ox in many ways but chiefly because of a large hump on its shoulders, which may, if the animal is well fed, weigh as much as 50 pounds.

It is a gentle creature, easily managed and does much useful work.

The many different breeds vary greatly in size, some being bigger than the European oxen, while the smallest are not much larger than a big dog.

LOANS for Building and Repairs

LOANS for Farm Electrification

ONE OF OUR BRANCHES recently broke all records by making more loans under the Farm Improvement Loans Act than any other branch of any bank in Canada.

In ten months this single branch of the Royal Bank made 140 such loans to farmers scattered over an area of 3,200 square miles of country.

Over 55% were made to borrowers with total assets of less than $5,000.

These loans were made for a wide variety of purposes—to brush, clear and break land—to purchase farm implements, to build dams and dugouts, to construct, add to and remodel buildings.

Would a Loan Help You?

If you could use a loan profitably to improve or expand your farming operations, or to make living more attractive on the farm, ask for a copy of our booklet "Farm Improvement Loans" at your nearest branch. It explains in detail the many attractive features of the Farm Improvement Loans Act, the many purposes for which such loans can be used and the easy methods of repayment. In addition, ordinary farm loans are, of course, still available at any branch.

A MESSAGE FOR THOSE WHO NEED TRAINED WORKERS

Canadians will not soon forget the news that more than a thousand Canadian airmen were in the skies over Cologne the night Bomber Command in Britain launched its first thousand bomber raid.

But for every Canadian in the skies there were ten on the ground. There were the aero-engine mechanics, the air-frame mechanics, draughtsmen, clerks, engineers, and all the others whose duties made thousand bomber raids a possibility. They were skilled men, each doing a key job and each demonstrating initiative and the ability to accept responsibility—qualities Canadian industries need today.

UNRRA IN POLAND

UNRRA SHIPPING PROGRAMME HAS FIRST ANNIVERSARY

Washington. — The Unrra live-stock shipping programme is now one year old. F. H. LaGuardia, Director General of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, has announced.

"Since the start of UNRRA operations the urgent cry of starving people has been for food, but there has also been a persistent call to restore the basic means of food production in countries now dependent on outside help," Mr. LaGuardia declared. "In response to the pleas for agricultural rehabilitation the first vessel of farm animals was dispatched from Baltimore, Md., during the last week in June, 1945."

In the past twelve months, according to Mr. LaGuardia, UNRRA has sent more than 100,000 head of live-stock to Poland, Yugoslavia, Greece, Czechoslovakia, Italy and China. Eighty-two thousand of the animals sent are work animals and twenty thousand are dairy cattle. They have gone for ward in 150 boatloads from five countries to help cultivate fields and provide milk for hungry children.

"To-date, 40,000 work animals and 12,000 dairy cattle have been shipped to Poland.

Mr. LaGuardia emphasized that no meat animals were being sent, and that dairy cattle in Europe were roughage consumers, grazing and not being fed grain.

"Livestock shipments are well under way," said Mr. LaGuardia. "Between now and the end of December we expect to ship another 200,000 head . Nearly all countries from which UNRRA draws supplies have offered farm stock to us, among them being Mexico, Denmark, Canada, Brazil, Ireland, Iceland and South Africa. An expanded livestock fleet and rehabilitation the first vessel of farm animals was dispatched from Baltimore, Md., during the last week in June, 1946."

"With the co-operation of the Department of Agriculture, we have made arrangements for buying and shipping 150,000 more from the United States between now and December. These animals are surplus on our farms and ranges. Many of them do no work here. UNRRA is sending them to Europe to replace men and women in front of the plough."

Mr. LaGuardia stated that 85 per cent. of the animals landed could provide draft power and that the future purchase program in the U.S. would concentrate on horses. "However," he added, "we will continue to ship dairy cattle given by individuals and organizations to relieve suffering and aid in rehabilitation." Mr. LaGuardia said that in the past refitting war built Victory vessels for animal transport. "I can not praise too highly the fine work of Captain Granvill Conway, the administrator of the War Shipping Administration," said Mr. LaGuardia. "Without his co-operation I do not know what we would have done. In March we had less than 20 ships for transporting animals; today we have 60 and before next month is over the War Shipping Administration has promised to have 76 at our disposal."

"However," he added, "we will continue to ship dairy cattle given by individuals and organizations to relieve suffering and aid in rehabilitation." Mr. LaGuardia said that in the past year UNRRA had shipped more than 2,000 head of animals donated by Greek Orthodox Church of the Brethren, Falls City Cooperative Milk Producers Association and other farm and church groups and individuals in the United States.

The state of Mississippi is now collecting 2500 head of dairy cat't and work stock to contribute to UNRRA," said Mr. LaGuardia. "Governor Thomas L. Bailey had been badly frightened people in Europe need livestock and has appointed a committee to handle donations of livestock from Mississippi farmers, and to accept cash donations to buy animals from others interested in contributing to his project."

Losses of draft and dairy animals in the war countries supplied by UNRRA run around 50 per cent. Some areas were hit harder than others. UNRRA observers report that thousands of acres in fertile western Poland were turned over by the Germans to the Polish Government without a single farm animal on them.

"The receiving countries have asked for mares that have been bred," Mr. LaGuardia added. "A mare can have a colt. That's more than either a truck or a tractor can do."

According to Mr. LaGuardia, the UNRRA livestock program when completed will replace between two and three per cent. of the war losses in draft animals. However, he stated that with the help of the UNRRA farm stock the devastated countries should be able to make up their total losses over a ten to twelve year period.

"Grain and canned milk are relief," said Mr. LaGuardia, "but a farm animal with a future spells rehabilitation to these people." Mr. LaGuardia referred to a message from one of the Greek Orthodox Archbishop Makolajevyk, Vice - Premier of Poland, told us that the most part UNRRA food and clothing is distributed to people in the cities, but that UNRRA livestock goes to the country districts gives the farm people hope for the recovery of their farms. "Without it there is small possible proof of international organization."

All animals are "hair branded" with the letters UNRRA. People know exactly where they come from and can see who has them and where they are being used. Animals purchased for UNRRA are after UNRRA supplies, are turned over to the recipient governments for distribution.

About a third of the dairy cows are retained for the use of agricultural farms, orphanages and hospitals. A good many are sold to families who have lost their cows. Usually that gets a cow doesn't get a horse or a mule. Long term loans are arranged. Often payment may be in grain which the animals help raise, and which is used by the recipient government for relief feeding. Because there are not enough to go around, animals are frequently assigned for the co-operative use of a village or community.

Hello Homemakers!

Everybody's talking about Freezing Fruits and Vegetables this year. No wonder! Everytime I plan a week-end in Woodstock my sister has the regulation boxes, the blanching kettle and everything ready to prepare some garden produce for the locker.

What about the new electric Home Freezers? They are just what the homemaker requires. This preservation unit does an A1 job. The method of preparing food for the table is economical time-saving and simple and the results are good. The manufacturers have sent us their instruction books and these include splendid suggestions for satisfaction. By the way, the Home Freezer consists of a freeze compartment and storage compartments. Foods to be frozen are first placed in the freeze section and when frozen are moved to the storage space. The freezing division can also be used to store food and to freeze cooker foods, including pies, roasted fowl, unbaked pastry and baked pies (all these are thoroughly cooled first). Eggs as well as other perishables may be preserved by freezing. These electric units are valuable devices for those who are long-sighted in the business of homemaking, and we, in our Canadian homes, have every right to be.

Take A Tip

Watch closely the maturity of such vegetables as beans and peas and harvest them for freezing at peak maturity. Test them when they are ripe for eating. In order to retain the fresh flavour freeze them as soon as possible after picking.

The variety of vegetable has a good deal to do with the colour of the frozen product. Be sure to select those vegetables having intense colour.

Quick blanching (dipping in boiling water for a few seconds) and proper packaging are two important factors affecting the keeping qualities.

Unless you use the brine pack, fill the package full, tamping the box to pack the vegeables in the package.

The containers should be liquid-tight or sealed in cellophane with a hot iron.

Storage should be at zero or even lower.

The Question Box

Mrs. T. W. asks whether it is necessary to pack fruit in sugar or syrup for freezing storage?

Answer — Packing in sugar helps maintain good colour, texture and flavour during freezing but it is not necessary.

Mrs. T. P. asks: Do you suggest dry sugar or syrup for packing fruit for freezing?

Answer — Dry sugar draws some moisture from fruit and may shrink it.—but this is seldom important, especially if fruit is to be cooked. Fruits keep their size and shape better in syrup than in dry sugar but they are more difficult to pack and freeze.

Mrs. R.M. asks: What happens if you pack fruit without sugar?

Answer — Fruit may darken. To prevent this, fruits coloured fruits may be blanched or dipped in sodium bisulphite or the commercial preservative tablet. Fruit treated with bisulphite is not suitable for eating uncooked but may be cooked as stewed fruits, sauces and in pies.

Mrs. T.T B. says: Crushed fruit is more attractive for shortcakes if a few whole pieces are put in. Crushed fruit stores well in freezing lockers.

Now To Answer Some Requests:

How may strawberries be canned to prevent floating and to retain their original color?

By pre-cooking for five minutes in a syrup, then allowing the berries to stand in the syrup for a few hours before packing in jars and processing. After canning, store jars in a dark place to retain color of berries.

How long should jars be boiled to sterilize them?

We recommend washing jars in hot suds. Rinse jars thoroughly, place in pan of clear water, with folded cloth in bottom of pan, set on electric element and boil for at least fifteen minutes.

May fruit be canned successfully without sugar?

Yes, by using water in place of syrup.

In the hot water bath method of processing is it all right to allow jars to cool in the water?

No. The product will be overcooked and certain food spoilage may develop due to slow cooling.

If a jar does not seal and must be reprocessed does it have to be processed the full length of time?

Just what should be done with the unsealed jar will depend upon the cause. If the cap or lid is at fault and the product is a fruit, simply replace cap or lid with new one and process in water bath until product reaches boiling point. If it is a non-acid food it should be reprocessed approximately one - fourth to one-third the regular processing period. If the jar is defective the product should be repacked. It is doubtful if this will be profitable since the reprocessing would need to be of approximately the same length as a normal period for that particular product. Few fords will stand up under such treatment.

How do you sterilize lids with metal band and the attached rings?

Long standing in brine gives salty taste and strong brine saturates the fruit. Use one teaspoon of salt to one quart of cold water for a bath to prevent discoloration while peaches are being prepared.

How do you preheat for canning an electric oven with automatic control which registers preheat, broil and bake?

Set control at Bake and preheat to 275 degrees.

Red Cross Sends European Children Clothing and Supplies

Toronto. — British and European Infants and children up to the age of 14 years, as well as adults, benefited by large shipments of Relief Clothing, Quilts and Hospital Supplies that went forward steadily during the winter months and up until July 1st, the result of the activities of the Canadian Red Cross Women's Work Committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Cara F. McEachren, according to information released by the National Office of the Canadian Red Cross.

During June an initial shipment of about 1,000 cases of these supplies was sent direct to Normandie where the Canadian Red Cross Society, in close co-operation with the French Red Cross, has established a warehouse and distributing centre at Bayeux. These were supplemented by shipments from Canadian Red Cross stocks in Great Britain, and in this way Canada will have a share in re-establishing normal life in areas laid waste by the advance of our men on their entry into Europe. The Bayeux centre is in charge of three members of the Canadian Red Cross Corps.

To further this work as well as to meet continuing needs in Great Britain, other European countries and China, the programme of the National Women's Work Committee for the winter of 1946-47 provides for 29,000 outfits for infants, boys and girls up to fourteen years of age. In addition, to this, a sum of $25,000 has been assigned to purchase certain clothing articles that cannot be made and household utensils which are in great demand.

Mrs. McEachren, speaking of the Committees proposed programme of work, stated: "In view of the urgency of the need for such clothing in Britain and on the Continent, we believe that the women of Canada will rally in the Autumn to meet this crucial demand. I am confident that the fine war record of our women will be continued in this urgent postwar endeavour."

A Correction

In the entrance examination list given to us by the Inspector, the name of Miss Betty Dennison, R.R. 1, Roblin, should have had the word "honours" following it.

"This year there's beauty in our budget"

"Look at the difference in Gladys already," said the mother proudly. "She's just brimming with health."

"Yes, this year there's beauty in our budget," said Hugh. "Another weeks of this will do wonders for you and the youngsters . . . and week-ends here for me . . . it's swell!"

"But it's not really in the budget, Hugh."

"No. It's over and above the budget, certainly; but that's the kind of that enables us to take this cottage without worrying. Once we've set aside our year-round expenses and our life insurance premiums, there is surplus. We can be extravagant with it. Until I had enough money to take care of the future I always felt a little guilty about spending it in the present. But now my mind is at ease. You and Tom and Gladys deserve it. You proected. So long as we don't go crazy once what's needed for the future we don't need to worry any more."

• • • • •

When life insurance is properly taken care of in the family budget, the expenditures are planned with a carefree mind. Future protection is not an imperative. Once it is insured, the greatest cause of worry is banished from every home.

Large Attendance Centreville Ch. Stone Laying

Dr. James Semple Is Special Speaker

Following a decision arrived at by the congregation of Centreville United Church, the same day as their one hundred year-old church was burned on July 10th, 1945, a new church is being built on a new site in the village and, last week, on Wednesday evening, July 24th, the corner stone of the new building was laid in the presence of a large number of the members of the congregation and residents of many parts of the county and nearby districts.

Assisting in the laying of the corner stone were Rev. James E. Beckel, of Bath, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference; Rev. Kenneth J. Crawford, the Minister of the Church; Rev. W. R. Merrick, Past Chairman of the Belleville Presbytery; Rev. H. C. Secker, Addolphustown, Rector of St. Alban's Anglican Church, who is Chairman of the Napanee and District Ministerial Association, and Rev. James Semple, Peterborough, who was the special speaker for the occasion.

The builders of the church (which is to be solid brick) are Mr. Henry Young and son of Roblin.

In a very capable manner, Rev. K. J. Crawford conducted the ceremony of the cornerstone laying, which included the singing of hymns, scripture responsive readings and prayers. Mrs. Crawford read a scroll, which, with a New Testament was placed in the cornerstone before it was laid. The scroll, which outlined the details leading up to the corner stone laying, is reproduced in another column of this paper.

Following the ceremony, a chicken supper was served by the women of the congregation, to over three hundred people, at the Fair ground and later in the evening, addresses were given by the visiting clergy, at the grandstand.

Rev. J. E. Beckel brought greetings from the Bay of Quinte Conference, Rev. W. R. Merrick performed a similar office for the Belleville Presbytery and Rev. H. C. Secker, spoke on behalf of the Napanee and District Ministerial Association.

THE GUEST SPEAKER

Rev. Dr. James E. Semple, minister of George Street United Church, Peterborough, who was the special speaker for the occasion, congratulated the people of the church, Rev. K. J. Crawford on the capable manner in which he had conducted the proceedings of the cornerstone laying ceremony and also on his leadership in the year he has been pastor of the Enterprise Charge, and in making arrangements for the rebuilding of the Centreville Church.

Dr. Semple said that in the building of a new church there were great opportunities. The church should be made as attractive and as beautiful as possible, so that people would want to attend it. There should be given to the young people every opportunity to serve and the older members of the congregation should not continue to think that young people are not capable of assuming responsibility.

Dr. Semple voiced some criticism of current attitudes to the church and of opinions held by many. There is a casual attitude on the part of many toward the church, a lack of church attendance, and an inadequate support of the ministry, and too much emphasis laid on meeting financial allocations.

There have always been many people outside the church, he said, and there always will be but the ministry is of the highest possible calibre. Finances, he said, are only one aspect of church service, all allocations will be met, he added, only when all mission fields have been supplied and all pulpits filled by the best possible men.

Dr. Semple, speaking of the Church during the recent war, said that Hitler had been able to control the state, the press and all other institutions in Germany, except the Church. He paid a tribute to the stand taken by Martin Niemoeller, the great German pastor, who had refused to bow to Hitler, no matter who or what was defeated in the war, the Church, he said, was undefeated and had not given up one of its beliefs.

BICYCLISTS BEWARE!

Chief of Police Moore is working on a definite and determined plan to eliminate riding of bicycles on the sidewalks of Napanee.

During the month of June he apprehended five young people caught in the act and impounded their bicycles for two weeks. This month he has had four bicycles locked up in his office. The alternative to having the bicycles impounded for two weeks is payment of a fine of not less than one dollar and costs of the court of $3.00, a total of at least $4.00.

YOUNG BICYCLIST STRUCK BY CAR IN NAPANEE

Early Sunday evening, July 28th, Helen Pennell, 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Pennell, R.R. 4, Napanee, narrowly escaped serious injury when the bicycle on which she was riding was struck by a car driven by Dompater Brown at the intersection of Dundas and Bridge Streets, in Napanee.

Mr. Brown was driving on Bridge Street, and was just entering Dundas Street, when the accident occurred. The car knocked the young girl off the bicycle and ran over her. She was taken to Dr. Galbraith's office where it was found she was not seriously hurt and was later taken home.

The Pennell girl and two other girls were riding bicycles and were making the turn from Dundas Street to Bridge Street, when the collision occurred. Mr. Brown's car went across the street and on the opposite boulevard before it came to a stop.

60th Anniversary Of Camp Le Nid Observed This Year

Three of Originals Now in Camp

Camp "Le Nid", the oldest camp on the Bay of Quinte, is now celebrating its diamond jubilee. In July 1886, six students, then pursuing their studies in Toronto, concluded that they would spend their month's holidays under canvas, somewhere on the shores of the Bay of Quinte. They travelled by train to Belleville and took a steamer bound for Kingston, with the intention of being put off at the most attractive spot they could spy out for pitching their tents.

When the steamer reached Thompson's Point, they landed with their camping equipment, but found to their dismay that the Belleville grocer had failed to put their provisions on board. They rowed toward the Stone Mills—now Glenora — until Hutton's Point came in view. This point, now styled Le Nid Point on the Hydrographic Survey maps issued by the Dominion Government, is due north of Glen Island, then known as Davies' Island.

On Ruttan's Point they landed, and the owner, Mr. Elisha Ruttan, graciously gave them permission to pitch their tents. The cook of the steamer and neighbouring farmers had contributed supplies until their own missing provisions turned up two days later, but for that first season cooking facilities were very primitive.

In spite of the lack of such amenities as cots or mattresses, the first year at Le Nid proved so successful that the students returned each year from the widely scattered points in which they eventually made their homes. Other friends were invited to join, with the result that the entire register for long or short periods would exceed 100, although seldom have more than twenty members been at the camp at one time.

Camp Le Nid can claim two branches or daughter organizations. Among the early members was Mr. Frank McL. Radford, once a merchant in Napanee, now president of the largest department store in Bottle and a chain of similar stores on the west coast. His fond recollections of the camp on the Bay of Quinte moved him to establish a camp on Puget Sound which he called Camp Le Nid II, and similarly, on the Lake of the Woods in Manitoba, Camp Le Nid III was established by Mr. A. T. Hawley, a prominent Winnipeg lawyer, formerly of Napanee.

For the first native year's menu the camp was entirely under canvas. Then a dining-hall with attached kitchen was built, and gradually sleeping cottages, an ice-house, and a recreation room were added. The first motor-boat on the Bay of Quinte was the Le Nid, a gift to the camp from one of the members from Baltimore.

With water on three sides, the obvious sports at Le Nid have been fishing, boating and swimming. The campers have also amused themselves with deck tennis, quoits and a unique golf course, which would hardly be recognized by St. Andrew's, with several of its holes in the woods among the trees.

Much of the success of the camp has been due to the cordial relations maintained with the owners of the land on which the camp stands, beginning old Mr. Ruttan to the present owner, Mr. George Plested, the campers have received unfailing consideration and assistance.

The camp was, at first, strictly a stag organization from which women were rigidly excluded except on the annual Ladies' Day. Later on, some of the families were allowed to spend a few weeks on the point before the regular season's camp opened, on the understanding that they must, withdraw when the men arrived. It was only during the war of 1914-18 that this exclusiveness, like many another male prerogative, was broken down.

This year, three of the original members: Mr. W. S Herrington, of Napanee; Mr. Charendon O. T. Gould of Baltimore, and Mr Fred T. Bryers of Toronto, have returned to celebrate the Camp's diamond jubilee with their children and grandchildren. The aggregate age of the three is 260. A special fete in their honour is being held this week.

Council Members Hear Complaints At Special Session

Member Charges Committees Lax In Duties

At a special meeting of the Napanee Town Council, called on the requisition of five members of the Council, Councillor Harold Webster charged that the Town Planning and the Police Committees of the Council were not fulfilling their duties. He stated that the individual members of the Council were not accepting their responsibilities and some committees act autocratically without reference of important matters to the Council as a whole. In some instances matters of importance which should be the responsibility of committees, are not looked after.

Councillor Webster's remarks started a lengthy argument among the members, which lasted for over three hours, and very little actual business was done at the session.

A report of the Town Planning Committee was presented by Councillor Ramsay. It was recommended that the Engineer's report on the proposed sewer extensions in the Town, at a cost of $55,000, be accepted. On motion, the report was accepted and the Clerk was asked to prepare the necessary building by-law.

A report was presented on the cost of an incinerator for the town, which stated it would be about $33,000. The proposed incinerator would burn about one and a half tons per hour and would be large enough to accommodate a town of 10,000 population. No action was taken on the matter by the Council.

A motion was passed authorizing the Streets Committee to confer with the Township of North Fredericksburgh with regard to repairing William Street in South Napanee, which connects Highway No. 14 with Highway No. 2.

A letter was received from the Kingston Centenary Committee, asking that the Town of Napanee enter a float in the parade to be held in connection with the celebration. The matter was referred, with power to act, to the committee composed of Councillors Ramsay, Rogers and Moore.

Mr. Earl Loucks, who lives on Robin Hill, appeared before Council to enter a complaint regarding the conduct around the bathing houses. Mr. Loucks asked that some sort of protection be provided to eliminate the nuisance, and the question was referred to the Parks and Police Committees, for necessary action.

The question as to who should assume liability for building permits in the town was again the subject of heated discussion and the conclusion was arrived at that it was the responsibility of the whole Council rather than of the committee.

Tenders were received from Thos. Thompson for the painting of the Town Hall and the Public Library and, after discussion, the matter was referred back to the Property Committee with the suggestion that more tenders be secured.

Pidgen, in which they voiced the appreciation of the club members for the splendid service Mr. Humphrey had given the Club since its inauguration. Mr. Frank Correll, a member of the Rotary Club, who was also present, spoke of Mr. Humphrey's interest in all community matters and expressed regret at his removal from the town.

NAP. ROTARIANS VISIT PICTON CLUB

The members of the Rotary Club of Napanee were guests of the Picton Rotary Club at an inter-city meeting held Tuesday evening, July 23rd. The Napanee members travelled to Picton by boat and automobile, those going by water being transported in a speedboat belonging to D. P. Roblin and a cruiser belonging to W. R. Roy. The members were welcomed at the Prince Edward Yacht Club and the group then adjourned to the Golf Club for a social meeting. At 7.30 the Rotarians and their guests had dinner at the Royal Hotel and this was followed by a program of exceptionally fine merit.

The feature attraction of the program was Lou Shaw, of Toronto, famous veteran cartoonist and caricaturist, who held the audience entranced while he displayed the brilliance of his agile pencil in innumerable sketches of all types, including caricatures of several members of the Picton Club, complete with humorous captions. Mr. Shaw, whose cartoons have appeared in leading Canadian newspapers for years and who is generally regarded as the dean of Canadian cartoonists, did his drawing by means of an electric lantern throwing the images on a screen, giving the audience an enlarged image of the artist's hand at work.

The master-of-ceremonies for the show was 'Joe' Murphy, also of Toronto, who gave several humorous impersonations of famous persons, and the pianist was Charlie Weyburn, who is well-known in Picton. The programme was made possible through the kindness of Harvey J. McFarland, a member of the Picton Rotary Club. The programme was introduced by Hugh MacDonald and the appreciation of those present was expressed by Arnold Covert.

There were 38 members of the Napanee Rotary Club present as well as several other guests. Tributes were brought on behalf of the Napanee Rotary Club by its president, C. A. Walters, and the president of the Picton Club, A. F. Brown, was in charge of the meeting.

Progress Report Centre St. Bridge By Ct'y Engineer

Letter Gives Details of Work Done To Date

The following is a copy of the letter read at the Special Meeting of the Napanee Town Council, last Friday evening, with regard to progress being made towards the construction of the Centre Street Bridge, in Napanee:

Napanee, Ontario.
July 25th, 1946.

Mr. W. A. Grange,
Town Clerk,
Napanee, Ontario.

Dear Sir

As requested by you, following is a report on the progress being made regarding the construction of Centre Street Bridge, by the County:

Preliminary borings and surveys have been completed. Plans have been submitted to the County Roads Committee, and it has been decided that a thirty foot roadway with two five foot sidewalks be constructed, single span approximately one hundred and ten feet between abutments, which is twenty-five percent greater than the existing floodway. Grades have been established giving the minimum nine foot vertical clearance above high water as required by the Department of Public Works, Ottawa, which will provide complete visibility from either William or Dundas Street down to the bridge.

Plans are now being prepared and some have been submitted to Ottawa for approval. As soon as the complete design is prepared, which will be at an early date, the plans will be submitted to Ottawa, and an application made under the Navigable Waters Protection Act for permission to construct a fixed span.

It is the intention of the Committee to call for tenders immediately approval has been received from Ottawa, and Toronto, and have grading and foundation complete this year, scarcity of materials and labour may make this difficult, but I want you to know that every effort is being made to start work.

I will advise you immediately when the plans are submitted to Mr. Trudeau of the Department of Public Works, Ottawa, and anything you can do to expedite the necessary Order-in-Council will be appreciated.

Yours truly,
H. L. SCHERMERHORN,
County Engineer.

THE PEACE CONFERENCE

Before and during the Peace Conference, there was a note of almost buoyant optimism in the air. The League of Nations was being created, which would solve all future problems and make wars impossible. The Conference would settle political boundaries, provide mandates and set the world at work again. Perhaps that over-confidence, that spirit of optimism, was to some extent, responsible for the disillusionment and pessimism that brooded over the world as events led on to the inevitable Second World War.

Now, another Peace Conference is being held. Nobody is under any illusions now, as to the future. Indeed, the Delegates meet in a spirit of pessimism, or at least in a spirit of grave fear, lest the Conference may not be able to solve the problems with which it is faced. After all, that may not be a bad thing. It will give the delegates a more determined and realistic approach to the problems. They know before they start, that they have a tough assignment and are, therefore prepared, to some extent at least, to meet it.

It has been impossible for the Big Four to agree even on all the matters that will be discussed. They have done wisely, however, to meet and deal with a few problems. If they can settle a few, if general agreement can be arrived at over a few nations, that will prepare the way for further advances. The Conference will not deal with Japan nor with Germany. The Big Four cannot agree on what ought to be done about the major nations. They will, however, tackle the question of Italy, Finland, Bulgaria, Hungary and Roumania. The problem in connection even with these so-called satalite nations, is not an easy one. But the fact that the Conference is prepared to deal with it, is encouraging.

Perhaps quite as important as the treaties themselves, is the getting together of representatives of twenty-one nations who will all have an opportunity to express an opinion. There is nothing quite like getting together, and discussing things face to face for overcoming ill-will and bitterness, and hatred. The eyes of all the world are on Paris, these days, and men and women of goodwill everywhere, are hoping and praying that conclusions will be reached that will make for happiness and goodwill and create the atmosphere in which, at a later date, the future of Germany and Japan can be agreed upon.

HOLIDAYS

The Canadian summers are brief but magnificent. Apart from the joy of growing things and the promise of rich harvests which the gardens and fields hold out for us, there is the universal recognition of the need for a vacation. Everybody needs a vacation, and the Summer seems the time for it, when days are warm, and long, and the great outdoors beckons. A vacation, perhaps, is best, which provides a complete change from vocation. For one whose business is with books, a change to physical labor is a vacation, and for one who works at manual toil, reading and loafing is just the change to provide recuperation of mind and body.

Recently, the Liverpool (Eng.) Post carried a little homily on holidays, in which it pointed out that even though the vacation provides health and happiness, we ought not to overlook the happiness that can be found in the daily tasks. It said:

"Every man's gratitude is due for the holiday to which, only a little while since, he could not have looked forward with any certainty, but with a rather wistful and pathetic wish in his secret heart.

"But holidays pass, and workdays return, one after another, in a fashion that sometimes takes on a deadly monotony. That is, if we allow it; and the very threat of monotony indicates the vital importance of schooling ourselves into the Chestertonian belief that whatever sort of day may come, significant or otherwise, thanks as a deliberate thought or act are fitting in return for the mere fact of it. 'Here is another day during which I have eyes, ears, hands, and the great world around me.'

"Surveyed through a properly trained mind each day is a miraculous thing for each of us, so how can continual thanksgiving be neglected once the sheer wonder of living at all is recognised? To express gratitude without ceasing, redounds on the grateful one, moreover, and may make the day itself a doubly happy one.

"Nor is there a surer way of putting our vexations and troubles in their true proportion, even crowding them out altogether, than for us to cultivate a 'Thank you' in the heart far, far, oftener than on the lips."

RUSSIA SAYS "NO"

Russia has said "no" so often, in recent months, that it is becoming a habit. Apparently she intends to maintain the right to say "no," a right granted any nation on the Security Council of the U.N.O., but so far used only by Russia, alone. Decisions of the Council on which a unanimous vote is required, have been thwarted time and again, by Russia's "no."

Perhaps the most difficult of all questions for the Democracies to understand, is Russia's attitude to the control of atomic energy. The United States, which is a long way ahead of the rest of the world in developing this most terrifying of all modern inventions or discoveries, has made a generous, unselfish offer to the rest of the world. The United States has offered to turn over to an international committee all the knowledge of this bomb, and all the secrets in connection with its development, and production. There is only one condition attached to the offer, and that is that no nation on the commission controlling the atomic bomb, shall have the right of veto. Mr. Gromyko, speaking before the U. N.'s atomic control commission in New York, says that Russia will not accept the American proposal, nor will she in any way, forgo her right to say "no." The United States has said that no nation which violates her use of the atomic bomb must have the right to prevent action against herself by the other nations, through the use of the veto. To this Russia says she will not agree.

It is hard to understand this attitude. By any measurement, the United States has made a most generous offer. She is willing to hand over all the secrets of the atomic bomb, without even insisting on her right to veto the use any nation may make of it. All that the United States is asking is that every nation should trust every other nation.

We can understand Russia's fear of other nations. For a long time there was a continuous propaganda against her way of life. But we are in a new world, now, and we must all learn to trust each other, if we are to survive at all. If Russia wants to retain the friendship and goodwill of thousands of people in other nations, who are sympathetic with her experiments, she will have to change her attitude. She must not insist on her power of veto in control of the atomic bomb. Should she continue in her present mood, we can see nothing else but that the United States keep control of the bomb, and of the secrets of atomic energy.

FURTHER INTRUSIONS

Of all the modern methods by which a person's privacy is invaded, none is more effective or insistent than the telephone. We can turn the radio off and refuse to answer the door bell — but when the telephone buzzes it is all different. We may be in the midst of an important conference — the 'phone rings, and it is impossible to resist the appeal. Who has not been left cold when in the middle of an interesting conversation, when the 'phone rings. Housewives have burned the dinner; husbands have kept wives waiting; children have exasperated parents — all in answer to the 'phone bell.

It may be that it is someone who merely wants to know the time, or perchance a high-pressure salesman who wants your subscription to So-and-So's magazine; or it may be the friend who is merely anxious to hear the latest news of the street, or it may be only someone who has got the wrong number — no matter what, everything else must wait when the 'phone rings. And now this insistent intruder is here to torture us even more insistently, follow us more doggedly, and pursue us more continuously. 'Phones are being installed in cars. Indeed, they are even now in operation in St. Louis, U.S.A. and are promised for New York State in 1947, and perhaps even this Fall. Imagine going from Napanee to Toronto and along about Trenton the red light goes on. There is no resisting it. You lift the receiver, and Napanee is calling. You are reminded of something you had hoped to forget — but no chance.

There is one thing about it, though, that brings us a bit of comfort, and that is we won't have to install the 'phone unless we want to do so. And anyway, the cost is going to provide an excellent reason for keeping clear of the thing for a while, anyway. It will cost $25 to install it in the first place, and $22 a month after that for, from fifteen to twenty, three-minute calls.

Of course, we may be anticipating a bit, for we have not heard that we are to have these new contraptions in this country. But knowing the tendency here for the Canadians to keep up with the American Joneses, someone is sure to suggest that we have them, too. We know that it is considered rank heresy to make any suggestion that would stem the tides of progress. All the same, we are against any further intrusion into our personal lives.

Canada's Nat. Parks Provide Scenes of Beauty and Majesty

Mountain dwellers may sometimes boast that the pictures on the walls of their homes are superfluous because the magnificent alpine view framed within every window. Visitors to Canada's mountain parks must surely have the same feeling when they look out of their windows.

Jasper National Park, with its 4,200 square miles of alpine beauty, is a vast sea of snow-capped peaks. Its glistening glaciers, deep canyons, turbulent rivers, cascading waterfalls, exquisite lakes and peaceful flower-bedecked valleys make it one of the greatest mountain playgrounds in the world. Within its wide boundaries roam some of Canada's finest big-game animals. Through it winds the Athabaska Trail where once passed a cavalcade of explorers, fur-traders and adventurers in the early days of travel to the Pacific Coast.

Banff National Park is distinguished as one of the most superb scenic attractions but because it was the first Canadian territory set aside as a national park. From an area of 10 square miles, reserved sixty years ago around the hot mineral springs, the park has been extended until it now contains 2,585 square miles stretching from the Great Divide on the east to the continental divide on the west. It contains widely-known alpine resorts, Banff and Lake Louise besides the Upper Hot Springs, the Cave and Basin Hot Springs, and many other features of interest. It is now connected with Jasper Park to the north by one of the greatest scenic highways on the North American Continent.

Waterton Lakes National Park to the south-east and Kootenay, Yoho, Glacier and Mount Revelstoke National Parks to the south and east of Banff complete Canada's mountain playgrounds with a combined area of nearly 2,000 square miles. Each has an individuality and appeal distinctly its own and all are natural wildlife sanctuaries. They are connected with Banff and Jasper by good motor roads — except Glacier National Park, which is accessible by railway only.

Canada's mountain playgrounds may be expected to provide rest and recreation for an ever - increasing volume of tourists in the years that lie immediately ahead. Much of the territory covered by these vast mountain parks still remains largely unexplored. The extent is so immense that they could serve as playgrounds for millions, and their beauty so varied that it is forever fresh and breath-taking.

Flier Parachutes From Hurtling Jet

Chalgrove, Oxfordshire, England — Irish-born Bernard Lynch of County Meath, recently was successfully ejected from a jet-propelled Meteor aircraft—thus performing what was believed to be a history-making feat.

The plane at 2,600 feet was travelling more than 300 miles an hour and Lynch landed unhurt between two buildings.

A lever exploded a charge under the ejection device and Lynch was catapulted from the plane. He released two parachutes, one for himself and one for his seat. The test eliminated three months of experimental work.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, AUGUST 4TH, 1946

"JESUS AND THE SABBATH"

Lesson Text: Exodus 20: 8. Mark 2: 23-28. Matthew 12: 9-13

The question of Sabbath observance is a perennial one. Indeed, its origin lies in antiquity. The Hebrew law insisted on a day of rest, in seven. In Christianity, the same principle of one day's rest in seven, is universally recognized. At the time of the French Revolution, this day of rest was abolished, but later restored; and following the Bolshevik Revolution in Russia, a holiday was declared for every sixth day. That, too, we understand, has been abolished and the seven-day week restored. Of course, in Russia there is no thought of making the weekly day of rest a religious holiday. It is merely a cessation from the regular routine.

The insistence of one day's rest in seven was a wise provision. It gives time for rest, recuperation, quiet and contemplation. To be sure this institution, like any other which is obeyed in the letter rather than in the spirit, came among the Hebrews to be more of a burden than a day of rest. Every manner of subterfuge was resorted to in an endeavor to keep the letter of the law while denying its spirit. It was for that reason that Jesus had to emphasize the spiritual aspects of the Lord's Day.

In the passages set for this week's study, that aspect of Christ's teaching is illustrated by the Master. His disciples were walking through the grain, fields. As they walked they plucked some ears and rubbed it in their hands to separate the kernel from the husk. This the Pharisees complained was a violation of Sabbatismo threshing and therefore, to be avoided. Jesus told what David did when he was hungry. He took bread from the altar, which was forbidden. It was a case of necessity. Jesus added: "The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath."

Similarly, Jesus healed a man on the Sabbath. That, too, was contrary to Jewish law. Jesus did this not only to relieve suffering but to demonstrate to his accusers, His view of Sunday observance. It was an act of mercy and took precedence over a rigid observance of the Sabbath.

In our day, that must be our attitude. We are in the midst of great social and economic changes. There are those for whom everything goes. Everything wide open is their motto. Perhaps this is a reaction against a certain rigidity of morals and manners. Nevertheless, those who are concerned with the character of future generations, cannot help but look on the loose attitude many assume to the Sabbath as to other things, but as a serious matter. In Europe, there has developed what is known as the Continental Sunday. Here is nothing more or less than a holiday. In the United States, a similar trend has been in the same direction. In Ontario we have certainly loosened up on our Sunday observance, but have not adopted the features of the Continental Sunday. Nor is it wise that we should do so. Here commercialised sport and commercialized entertainment should never be permitted. Naturally selfish interests are always on the alert to make money out of sport and entertainment. So that Christian people must be on their guard, continuously.

With respect to other forms of entertainment and amusement in which people are interested, each must settle the matter for himself or herself. The main thing is that the spirit of the Sabbath be maintained throughout.

Life is lived at such a terrific speed, to-day, that people would appear to be more need of a day of rest, contemplation and worship, than ever before. Carelessness and the cultivation of an attitude of reverence for God and all God's gifts, is one of our most crying and imperative spiritual demands. Nowhere, better than at a church service, may that be achieved. After all, we are in a position, to-day, of the greatest period and danger. Men have learned the secrets of the universe. In the hands of selfish and arrogant people that power may be used for our undoing. The need is for men of high moral standards, unselfish ideals, and international goodwill, to whom this secret may be entrusted. That means all of us. It seems hard to see how that spirit in man will be developed unless men and women take time out to cultivate their spiritual lives. That involves a day of special devotions and worship. — A real Sabbath!

Keep the Sabbath Holy, in the best sense and we would not fear for the future!

30,000 War Brides Still Overseas

Ottawa, (CP.) — Surveying the housing situation, Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, Reconstruction Minister, announced in the Commons that all the war brides of Canadian servicemen abroad would have come to Canada "before the end of April, 1947." Mrs. Elburn Cole conducted the devotional exercises which were opened by singing the theme song which was followed with prayer by Rev. Duquette. The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Lewis Fox. A devotional reading was given by Mrs. Fred Armstrong. The secretary's and the treasurer's reports were read and approved. The donations were handed in by the members. A flower which was auctioned brought a tidy sum.

The social programme was in charge of Mrs. Nelson Tripp and was as follows: A reading by Mrs. W. J. Pringle; vocal duet with harp accompaniment by Mrs. Fred McParlane and Mrs. D. M. Sandford; recitation and encore by Katharine Cook; reading by Mrs. A. C. Davison and an automobile contest under the supervision of Mrs. Nelson Tripp, which was won by Mrs. Elburn Cook.

Uniting Plastics by New And Important Process

Much has been told of the wonderful methods of joining pieces of metal together by welding, which is done with the aid of such immense heat that the parts to be welded actually melt into one another and thus become one.

Whole ships have been made by welding, without the use of innumerable rivets that have been used for so many years. The oxygen and acetylene flame is one of the hottest flames for this purpose; but more recently the metal parts have been heated by passing a heavy electric current through them. Electric welding is common practice to-day. And now we hear of a new kind of welding which is done by the mere heat of friction— the heat generated by rubbing two substances together in the way our forefathers used to kindle a fire before timber and matches were discovered.

Plastic materials, which become sticky at a comparatively low heat, are now being welded by rubbing the parts together until they become hot. They then join together, and as soon as the plastic rubbing rods, it is one solid object. One of the biggest metal-welding concerns in England has perfected this new process, which is likely to prove of immense importance in view of the growing use of plastic materials by a bee.

The hay harvest is not yet fully completed. It seems to be suspended for grain cutting, as binders are humming early and late. The yield of grain is expected to be well above last year. The shower on Tuesday afternoon delayed work for a time, but did not wet any depth of soil; however, did a shower Friday evening. The latter was accompanied by a most brilliant double rainbow. Farmers are becoming quite dry, and raspberries are almost gone.

The excursion to the Thousand Islands, sponsored by the United Church Sunday School, last Thursday, was largely attended and much enjoyed. Mr. O. Benn's truck and several private cars were filled to capacity conveying the party to Gananoque, where they embarked on the steamer Island Queen for the trip down the river. Owing to the disappearance for some years of passenger boats from the Bay of Quinte it was the first opportunity many of the younger generation ever had to visit the famous islands.

Mrs. Black is the only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. R. McCabe, who resided in South Napanee for a long period of years. WEDDING BELLS

TURGEON - SEXSMITH

St. Patrick's Church, Napanee, was the scene of the pretty wedding of Rita Jeanne Sexsmith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. F. Sexsmith, Napanee, to Joseph Turgeon, Gananoque, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Turgeon, Ottawa, which was performed by the Very Rev. Dean E. M. Lefacy, at 8.00 o'clock a.m., on Wednesday, July 24.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Wedding March, played by Miss Agnes Cavanaugh. She wore a street-length dress of white silk jersey, with matching accessories and wore a corsage of red roses. Miss Jeanne Pidgeon, Napanee, Ontario, was maid of honour, attired in pale yellow silk jersey with white accessories and a corsage of white roses.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, which was prettily decorated for the occasion. The bride's mother received the guests, wearing a gown of turquoise silk jersey, large black hat. She was assisted by the groom's mother, wearing a grey silk crepe dress with black accessories.

The bride's gift to the maid of honour was a gold compact. The groom's gift to his bride was a strand of pearls and to the best man, a Ronson lighter.

Ward, Miss Peggy Shangraw, all of Kingston; Miss Frances Sexsmith, Kingston; Miss Dianne Hall, Toronto; Mr. Larry Welch, Cornwall, Ont.

The Salvation Army Home Front Appeal For $2,000,000

Montreal — Objective of The Salvation Army's 1946-7 National Home Front Appeal next month will be $2,000,000, it was announced recently by Air Marshal William A. Bishop, V.C., D.S.O., M.C., D.F.C., LL.D., chairman of The Salvation Army National Advisory Board.

"Increasing demands for Salvation Army social service and relief work have made it necessary to raise the objective over the $1,900,000 asked last year," said Air Marshal Bishop.

"In the total sought is money needed for the rehabilitation and expansion of Salvation Army social service facilities. During the past, The Salvation Army concentrated on serving the members of the armed forces, and assisting war victims. The expansion of its work in Canada was largely postponed. Even repairs were put off. Nearly one-third of The Salvation Army's total personnel was engaged wholly or principally on duties having to do with the war.

"Salvation Army efforts for the reclamation of the fallen and for the care and guidance of those in trouble constitute a fundamental work in Canada," said Air Marshal Bishop. "Its interest in the present and future humanity is worthy of far greater financial support than is asked."

The campaign opens Sunday, September 15th, with special services in Salvation Army Citadels across the Dominion. Intensive effort for funds begins Monday, September 16th. It will be held for two weeks, except those where Community Chest or Welfare organizations provide adequate funds or in the four or five cities where campaigns already have been held.

The total number of cattle and calves imported into Canada in 1945 was 1,945.

Mrs. Ralph Ham Dies Following Short Illness

The death occurred after a short illness at her home in South Napanee, on Thursday, July 26th, of Mrs. Ralph Ham, who was in her 66th year.

Mrs. Ham, formerly Louise Shaver, was born at Wheeler but had resided in the town most of her lifetime. Before her marriage, she was a dressmaker, and during the First Great War and the recent war, used her ability to great advantage in the Red Cross and other patriotic organizations. During the second war she was undoubtedly the most faithful member of the Napanee Red Cross. She was a never-failing attendant at the regular work meetings and took charge of the cutting of the thousands of garments turned out during the war years. In recognition of her faithfulness she was given a Red Cross Service award, which unfortunately arrived shortly after her death. She was also a member of the I. O. D. E. and in the recent clothing collection campaign, assisted with the arduous work of packing the garments donated.

She was a charter member and a past noble grand of the Rebekah lodge and was also a member of Trinity United Church. For many years she was an active member of the Napanee Women's Institute.

Mrs. Ham is survived by her husband and one daughter, Thelma, Mrs. Dorland Perry, Napanee. She also leaves one sister, Mrs. Roy Smith, of Bassano, Alberta, and two brothers, William Shaver, Napanee and Kenneth Shaver, Ithaca, New York.

On Friday evening the members of the Rebekah Lodge held a service at the Tierney Funeral Home, and on Saturday afternoon, Rev. Noble Hatman, minister of Trinity Church, conducted the funeral service. Interment was made at Riverside cemetery.

Mr., Mrs. W. V. Drury Move To Peterborough

Last week end Mr. and Mrs. W. V. Drury moved their household goods to Peterborough, where they will reside. Mr. Drury, who was a former member of the Napanee Collegiate and Vocational staff, is now in the insurance business in Peterborough.

Mrs. Drury, was for the past year, leader of Grace United Church choir and was a soloist of considerable ability. Her pleasant manner with the members of the choir, together with her ability as a leader, was instrumental in bringing the choir to a strength of nearly forty-five members. It was with sincere regret that the choir learned of her removal to Peterborough and the best wishes of her many friends will go with her to her new home.

CLOTHING DRIVE GREATER THAN LAST CAMPAIGN

Used clothing donated by the people of Canada for the distressed people of Europe is coming into the seven operating warehouses, where they are weighed, baled and bagged, at the rate of a quarter of a million pounds a day, according to a report made to national headquarters of the National Clothing Collection by D. Hyman, executive director of the Warehouse and Baling division.

In the first 27 days 3,304,334 pounds of clothing were baled and bagged, which was an increase of 626,300 pounds over the total for the same period after the October drive, although five less baling centres are being operated.

Up until noon July 18th the seven baling warehouses received and weighed in over 6,330,000 pounds of clothing, while several warehouses have large quantities on hand which have not been weighed in. With the steady stream of goods coming in from the local depots, the hopes of the organization of reaching a total approximating nine million pounds are fairly sure of realization.

Ships that are being loaded with clothing in Montreal include the Sunalta Park, taking 300,000 pounds to Greece and the Port Yukon, taking 950,000 pounds to Italy. Two ship at Vancouver, the Kildiara Park and the Hastings Park, are loading clothes for China.

AUSTRALIAN COAL TO BE NATIONALIZED

Canberra, (C.P.) — The Australian coal industry will be brought "as close to nationalization as is constitutionally possible" under a state-control agreed on by Premier Joseph B. Cridley and Premier William J. McKell, of New South Wales.

The plan excludes both management and labor from representation on the supreme overall Commonwealth-state authority.

Spokesmen said its purpose is to rehabilitate the industry by the opening up of new fields and the complete mechanization of mines now in operation.

Most affected will be the New South Wales coalfields which produce 80 per cent of Australia's 'black gold.' The New South Wales fields have been stymied by industrial strife since the end of the war and production is on a day-by-day basis.

Restricted profits for coal owners and a lessening of authority in the industry as a whole for individual owners is a part of the plan.

Present production of the 10,000,000 tons a year falls nearly 5,000,000 tons short of Australian needs, and these needs will double within the next few years, it is said.

CANADA TO ADMIT VETERAN POLES

Ottawa, (C.P.) — Hon. Louis St. Laurent, acting Promie Minister, has announced in the Commons that 4,000 single veterans of the Polish Army that fought in Italy will be selected for immigration to Canada shortly.

Mr. St. Laurent said that the Polish soldiers had served the Allied cause faithfully and well. Many of them did not want to return to their native land because of political considerations, he said, and to relieve their plight and partly to relieve what appeared to be a permanent shortage in agriculture labor, a mission would be sent overseas to select 4,000 single men.

They would be brought to Canada conditionally and would have to be qualified agriculture workers.

All Passport Curbs Lifted By Ottawa

Ottawa, (C.P.) — Acting Premier St. Laurent said in the Commons that the Canadian passport office has been authorized to issue passports for any country on the map, on the condition that the person obtaining the passport signs an undertaking freeing the government from any responsibility in connection with transportation.

The undertaking made it clear that the applicant would run into difficulties in the matter of transportation.

He was replying to G. K. Fraser, (PC—Peterborough West.)

OBITUARY

DAMON PERRY

The death of Damon Perry, a highly respected resident of the Hay Bay district for many years, occurred on Saturday, July 27th, at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Bernice McKittrick, Piety Hill, Napanee.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry retired from active farming in September, 1946, and had been residing in Napanee since that time. Mr. Perry had been in failing health for several months.

Mr. Perry, who was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Perry, was born nearly 84 years ago at Camden East, but at the age of eight years moved with his parents, to Hay Bay, where he had resided, with the exception of a few years spent in Napanee some years ago. He was a member of the United Church and of the Black Preceptory of the Orange Order.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Alice Maud Frink, and by five children, Herbert Moore, Napanee; Mrs. Thos. A. Graham, Kincaid, Sask.; Mrs. Bernice McKittrick, Napanee; Orval Perry, Oshawa, and Ross Perry, Chatham. He was predeceased by one son, Leland, who died in 1916, and by five brothers and three sisters.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Noble Hatton at the Wartman Funeral Home, and interment was at Fairview Cemetery.

The pallbearers were former neighbors of the Hay Bay district: Messrs. James Robertson, Jay Gould, Willie Bell, Walter Silver, Wilfrid McCabe, and Norman Pinchen.

The many floral tributes testified to the high esteem in which the deceased had been held by his friends and family.

New Jail-Farm Planned For Eastern Ontario

Ottawa, (C.P.) — Hon. George H. Dunbar, Ontario's Minister of Municipal Affairs, said recently a new model reform institution will be built in the Ottawa valley "as soon as possible" and predicted "this will usher in a new era of penal reform."

With education as its keynote it will use modern penal methods with the farm itself, a trade school, courses in public school and high school education as its corrective weapons. It will accommodate prisoners of all eastern Ontario from Kingston and Pembroke east to the Quebec border.

Just back from a tour of Britain and western Europe to study penal systems, he said "we shall replace the old-fashioned and outmoded county jails with at least half a dozen of these new farm institutions placed all over Ontario."

WEDDING BELLS

ABRAMS - GRAY

A picturesque wedding took place in St. Paul's Church, Monmora, at 12:30 p.m., on Wednesday, July 17th, when Gertrude Elsie, daughter of Major and Mrs. Percy Gray, Monmora, became the bride of James Leroy Abrams, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Abrams, of Napanee. Rev. J. M. Brownlie, rector, was the officiating clergyman. The church was prettily decorated throughout with summer flowers and white gladioli adorned the altar. Wedding music was played by Mrs. L. R. Rundle, organist and aunt of the bride, who also during the signing of the register, sang "Because" and "Through the Years."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a gown of white taffeta with shirred bodice. Her veil of white net was in coronet shape and was caught with orange blossoms. Her only ornament was a gold cross which belonged to her grandmother, the late Mrs. William Gray. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses and bouvardia. Miss Jennie Gray, her sister, was her attendant. She was attired in pinke net over taffeta with matching headdress. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations and blue cornflowers. The duties of best man were discharged by LeVern Abrams, brother of the groom.

Robert Gray, brother of the bride and Dennis Rowe, cousin of the groom acted as ushers. Following the ceremony, a reception was held at St. Paul's Parish Hall where ladies of St. Paul's Guild served an excellent repast.

The bride's mother received, wearing a gown of grey and mauve silk lerser and a bejhorn hat. Her corsage was of mauve and white sweet peas. The groom's mother, who also received wore a gown of green and white crepe with a hat of white straw and corsage of mauve and white sweet peas. The reception was attended by over seventy guests.

Later the bride and groom left for a trip to Western Ontario. For travelling the bride wore a dress of black and white taffeta with matching accessories. On their return they will live at Napanee. Before leaving Sandhurst, the bride who had been teaching there was honoured by presentation showers a tithe homes of Mrs. M. Claringbold and Mrs. M Robinson. She was also presented with a crystal fruit bowl by Sandhurst A.Y.P.A., of which she was president.

ABRAMS - HILL

A very pretty summer wedding was solemnized at the United Church in Selby, on Saturday, July 27th, at 1:00 p.m., when Ester Jane, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hill and the late Robert Irwin Hill, of Port Hope, was united in marriage to Donald Robert Henry, fourth eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Abrams, of Napanee R.R. 7. The Rev. W. R. Merrick officiated.

The pretty young bride, given in marriage by her mother, wore a beautiful gown of white sheer and wore the gift of the groom, a pair of silver ear-rings. She carried a bouquet of red roses and baby tears. She was attended by the groom's sister, Miss Doreen Abrams, who wore a gown of blue sheer and carried a nosegay of mixed flowers.

The duties of the bridesmaid was a pair of nylon stockings. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a pair of pearl earrings to the best man, a gold watch chain.

Following the ceremony a dainty buffet lunch was served at the home of the groom's parents. The guests were entertained by the bride's mother, who wore a flowered blue crepe dress with blue accessories and a corsage of baby's breath and roses. The groom's mother assisted, wearing a green and white crepe dress with white accessories and a corsage of baby's breath and roses.

The happy young couple left amid showers of confetti and best wishes to spend the week end with the groom's brother, Mr. LeVern Abrams and Mrs. Abrams, at Switzerville, before returning to their home in Port Hope, where the groom is employed on the C. N. Railway.

OBITUARIES

BESSIE LENORE HENWOOD

The sudden call of July 20th death again visited the Henwood home and called to her reward Bessie Lenore, beloved daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Henwood, Morven. Bessie had not been well since Christmas, but it was only during the past two weeks she took a serious turn owing to an extremely severe heart condition. With the exception of a few years spent in Oshawa, she had lived her life and died in the home where she was born.

She was well and favorably known being a girl with high ideals and noble character. She was naturally of a sunny disposition, a trusted worker and a loyal friend. She was a life-long member of the former Methodist Church, where she at one time belonged to the choir and was a valued member of the Young People's Society.

Rev. Mr. Haw was in charge of the service, assisted by Rev. J. N. Lovelace of Mallorytown. Mr. Ward Wartman sang a favorite solo by request. Her remains were placed in the family plot by Messrs. Harold Brandon, Carl Vandyck, Richard McCrimmon, Ross Thompson, Percy Lake and Roy Garrison.

In Loving Memory

BLAIND — In loving memory of my dear husband, Ernest A. Blaind, who died August 3rd, 1744.

I am thinking of you, to-day, Ernie
But then, that's nothing new —
I thought of you yesterday
And the day before that, too.
I'll think of you to-morrow Dear,
And of the, happy hours we spent:
For you were mine, and I'll remember
Though all the world may forget.
Ever remembered by his WIFE, LILLIAN 31inc

BEATTIE — In loving memory of our darling daughter and sister, Ann Beattie, drowned July 26th, 1945.

We cannot say and we will not say
That she is dead. She is just away.
With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand
She wandered away into an unknown land.
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be
Since she lingers there.
Think of her faring on as dear in spirit as she was
As the love of here.
Think of her still as the same, I say
She is not dead. She is just away.
Ever remembered by her
FATHER, MOTHER,
BROTHERS and SISTERS. 31ap

MARRIAGES

BALLANCE - KNAPP — At Grace United Church, Napanee, on Monday, July 29th, 1946, Mary Catherine Knapp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Knapp, was united in marriage to Mr. William LaMonte Ballance, son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Ballance, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Rev. C. D. McLellan officiated at the ceremony. Mrs. B. M. Black played the wedding music, and during the signing of the register, Mrs. Robert Smith played a violin solo, "Through the Years."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in a New York model of white marquisette with Sweetheart neckline. Knife pleating accentuated the dropped shoulder line of the shirred bodice. The sleeves were of bracelet length. Her veil of fingertip length fell gracefully from a Queen Anne headdress, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white gladolli.

The best man was Mr. Jack Ballance, cousin of the groom, and the ushers were Mr. S. Eugene Knapp and Mr. Hugh Cheesman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Hotel Pusley. The bride's mother, gowned in dusty rose crepe with black accessories, received her guests, assisted by the groom's mother, who wore an ensemble of black sheer with white accessories. William C. McLellan proposed the toast to the bride which was responded to by the groom.

The popular bride will be greatly missed in Napanee, where she was a competent member of the staff of the Bank of Montreal, and an active member of the Tennis Club, and of the Grace United Church Choir and Girls' Club.

Grace United Church was the scene of a double-ring ceremony on Monday afternoon, July 29th, 1946, when Mary Catherine Knapp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Knapp, was united in marriage to Mr. William LaMonte Ballance, son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Ballance, Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in a New York model of white marquisette with Sweetheart neckline. Knife pleating accentuated the dropped shoulder line of the shirred bodice. The sleeves were of bracelet length. Her veil of fingertip length fell gracefully from a Queen Anne headdress, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white gladolli.

The best man was Mr. Jack Ballance, cousin of the groom, and the ushers were Mr. S. Eugene Knapp and Mr. Hugh Cheesman.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Hotel Pusley. The bride's mother, gowned in dusty rose crepe with black accessories, received her guests, assisted by the groom's mother, who wore an ensemble of black sheer with white accessories. William C. McLellan proposed the toast to the bride which was responded to by the groom.

The popular bride will be greatly missed in Napanee, where she was a competent member of the staff of the Bank of Montreal, and an active member of the Tennis Club, and of the Grace United Church Choir and Girls' Club.

NERVE FATIGUE

When the muscles are exerted we may experience a sense of fatigue long before we are "worn out," but when the nerves are overstrained we may not be conscious of the fact. Yet it will cause us to lose our skill, to become irritable and unreasonable, and otherwise difficult to get along with. Each one must learn to recognize his own symptoms, and know how to remedy the trouble.

This nervous fatigue comes oftener to those who are of highly organized temperaments, and they need more frequent rests. The attempt to maintain continuous activity at top speed during all our waking hours is one chief cause of fatigue. This seems to point to the absolute need of frequent intermissions in our activity.

The speed of the southern part of the Gulf Stream is estimated to be more than four miles per hour.

GUARDIANS OF Britain's Heritage OF BEAUTY—

BY MONTAGUE SMITH

Every person comine to Britain to see its beauty spots or historic places will be under an obligation to the National Trust.

It is nearly true to say that it is impossible to travel more than twenty miles in Great Britain today without stumbling on property owned by the Trust, and preserved, for all time, as a national memorial.

The Trust is now indeed, the largest of British landlords, owning 116,000 acres, and protecting, by means of restrictive covenants, a further 40,000, comprising nearly 500 different properties and covering in all 172 square miles.

Visitors may think it an odd, and some ways a typically British institution.

For it grew out of almost nothing, an idea in the minds of three people who just fifty years ago, looked around them and decided that something should be done to save the heritage of the past from the vandalism of the day.

That was in 1895, the rich's complaisant days of the 'nineties', when the cruze for "modernity" went hand in hand with luxury, and few saw that the Twentieth Century was to reaten to rural Britain.

The mind of Britain has changed now. The war has accentuated the change, its experiences turning the minds of men and women more and more to memories of past examples, and the loveliness of a defended land. History has become fashionable and historic monuments are cherished.

That awakening of public conscience would have come too late but for the three pioneers of the National Trust.

One, Miss Octavia Hill, was a famous person in her day, a leader in the emancipation of women and in Victorian rehousing schemes for the working classes.

She was the first to coin the phrase "a green belt" now so familiar in the ouths of town-planners.

The second was Sir Robert Hunter lawyer, and then solicitor to the Post Office. The third, the one with a most drive, was a country parson, anon Rawnsley, vicar of Wray, in Westmorland.

It was he who provided the inspiration on which his two fellow enthusiasts worked.

The National Trust originated in a sit he held to a Mrs. Fanny Talbot, Barmouth, in North Wales. He suggested to her that if the proposed National Trust got under way, she should present 1½ acres to it.

He returned to his colleagues in London with her promise, and the Trust began with a small property (which it still has), known as Dinas Oleu, over looking Cardigan Bay.

The movement thus begun, grew slowly at first, but with increasing momentum at the beginning of the present century.

To-day the Trust is almost embarrassed by the number of gifts people seek to shower upon it.

A catalogue of all its properties, recently issued to celebrate the Trust's Jubilee, reads like geography of British history, and of times even more remote.

It begins with Neolithic memorials the storied sites of Avebury and Stonehenge; goes on to Saxon burial grounds and Roman camps, embraces the Thames island of Runnymede, near Windsor, where Magna Carta was signed, reminds us of Shakespeare and Tudor England, and does not omit the relics particularly the literary shrines of the Victorian era.

The Trust owns ruined castles and abbeys; cottages and whole villages, famous inns; great country houses and thousands of acres of mountain valley, moor, fen, forests, and cliffs which are the panorama of natural beauty.

Today the Trust is undoubtedly a successful landlord. It makes a profit of many thousands of pounds yearly on the administration of its properties after every possible care has been given to them.

This profit supplemented by large public subscriptions and donations, is wholly used for the acquisition of such new properties as are not themselves gifts.

Its success as a landlord is due to its unique position. It has to pay neither income tax nor death-duties on any property it has fully adopted and that explains the significant fact that, during the war the actual acreage owned by it more than doubled.

More and more of the old landed gentry of England, the former "squires" now find it impossible to maintain their old country seats and estates, owing to high taxation. They offer them to the Trust to hold and administer.

In many cases the Trust accepts and the former owners continue as tenants, subject to certain provisions as to the admission of the public, at convenient times to the grounds and interior treasures.

This is convenient on both sides, but possess a problem which is likely soon to provoke State interference.

On the one hand, the State is losing the revenue from tax and death duties, and this will become a serious deprivation as more owners quit themselves of their liabilities by handing their estates over to the Trust.

On the other hand, there is an increasing disposition to ask whether the great houses and the manor houses cannot be put to some more public use.

Are they to be turned into museums, showpieces; are they to be let to suitable institutions as competing tenants; or are they to remain in the occupation of the families who have lived in them for generations?

Open spaces cannot be put under a glass case. Those owned by the Trust are likely shortly to be transformed into great national parks on the American model, subject to Government ownership or control.

The National Trust is almost entirely independent of the Government. It has no official subsidy of any kind.

Its properties, belonging in the widest sense to the nation, shared by every citizen, are administered by elected committees. national and local.

This may strike people from overseas as an anomally, something often to be written before, could only exist in Britain. But it has worked well, and for visitors from all over the world, to future generations, enjoying freely and for ever the great beauties of nature, unspoiled by man, should remember the National Trust which first ensured their preservation.

AERIAL ARTERY OF THE FUTURE

BY ALLEN RAYMOND

The importance of Canada's, Northland to the future of international commercial transportation is now accepted as a foregone conclusion as a result of the use of the northern "Great Circle" Route by giant airliners between world transport planes enroute to the battlefronts of Europe. A glimpse into the development of that route via Labrador, Northern Quebec, Baffin Land, Greenland and Iceland, and its future possibilities, is given in the following article :

Under the protective aegis of the United States Army's Air Transport Command, a pioneering American commercial air line is now developing the northern Great Circle Route or "Snowball Route" as it is called, to Europe, which some time in the indefinite future will be flying thousands of persons of diverse nationality between the New World and a half-dozen countries in northwest Europe.

To help in the establishment of this air line and similar air lines backed by Canadian, British and Scandinavian capital, much of it government, thousands of American soldiers are serving in the desolate wastes of Labrador, the Arctic archipelago, Greenland and Iceland, and expect to be held there for many months to come.

Most of the men don't like it and only a very small minority, principally officers, concede its importance from a military as well as commercial viewpoint to maintain and develop the northern Great Circle Route across the Atlantic between the United States, Newfoundland, Iceland, the British Isles, the Scandinavian countries and northern Europe.

These men, familiar with the terrible hazards and difficulties of aviation in the north, know why it is essential that communications and weather stations be maintained in the Arctic archipelago north of Canada up to within a few hundred miles of the north pole. They know that planes cannot fly the north Atlantic safely without contact and help of men in these Arctic outposts because of weather conditions originating there. They know that the largest air force of men in the world today which has the experience, techniques and organization to keep the military and civil air lines flying the North Atlantic, and the force is the one which has put on the job to defend these wastes against use by the Nazis and to help win the war in Europe.

Recently, through co-operation of the Air Transport Command I have been able to make this trip from New York to Paris, with frequent stopovers, through Newfoundland, Labrador, northern Quebec, Greenland, Iceland and England. It is a journey through scenery of awe - inspiring grandeur. It is one that takes place in relative comfort through territories into which only the hardiest explorers ventured less than a generation ago. It is one that might well attract thousands of tourists' traffic in the years to come, and the shape of things to come.

I am just flying weather during my tour of late September and early October was about average for the season. Yet in flying from La Guardia Field for Stephensville, Newfoundland we found that the field at Stephensville was closed by fog, so we had to come down in Gander, Newfoundland, 160 miles away. Maintenance of many an alternate field in this section is essential for continuation of the service. Runways have been built at the cost of millions of dollars.

Weather held me to the ground four days at Fort Chimo, in northern Quebec, where a fine flying field had been laid down by the Army close to the Hudson Strait. Weather prevented me from flying into Baffin Land, which was considered important that I would get out, in less than a week. Yet I was flying regularly for two days in Iceland, and the growing pains of aviation administration held me there for a longer time. Flying from Iceland to Prestwick, Scotland, we found that weather had closed in behind us. We had to fly three more hours through tricky fog to come down at Boving-don, 33 miles from London, and even then to make a landing with a 200-foot ceiling, through a night as black as the inside of your pocket.

On a short flight from Fort Chimo to Goose Bay, Labrador, the ice formed two inches thick on our wings, and was forming on the propellers, so the pilot in shaking it loose tossed chunks of ice against our fuselage where it rattled like sack-ash.

Aeronautical engineering and aeronautical organization are enabling flight through these regions today, almost without accident, but the fight against weather is still a battle. There were two novel indications of this current conflict, in Greenland and in Greenland's ambassador. In Greenland, I met some officers bringing a helicopter up to the ice cap to see whether it could be employable to rescue work, as a supplement to dog sleds. The first flight over the ice cap of Greenland in a helicopter was not to be made for ten days after I left there.

In Iceland we made a blind landing by instrument by aid of a new gadget called the "automatic ground approach." By the use of radar, technicians in a truck on the flying field give out directions from minute to minute on how to land. The radar could see him. The men who saw him could give him bearings tell him when to drop his wheels and literally steer him to a complete stop on the runway as long as he followed their directions. It worked to perfection, and is bound to be of enormous aid in making blind landings safer.

The following scroll was read by the minister of the church, Rev. K. J. Crawford, and later was placed in the corner stone :

In June, 1907, Centreville Church celebrated its centenary. That was a memorable event, and for this occasion the church had been newly painted outside, and redecorated inside. Much effort was expended to make the event the success that it was. And the Ladies climaxed the occasion with a fowl supper that left nothing to be desired. And it was thought, then, that the Church was in fine shape: it was newly decorated, and there was a considerable sum of money on hand.

But exactly a month after the Anniversary Services, on July 10th, 1945, the Church was struck by lightning and destroyed. The men of the community turned out and were able to save all moveable furniture, but the building itself, with pews and pulpit, was completely destroyed. But that very night a congregational meeting was held, and it was the unanimous wish of the Congregation that the Church in Centreville be rebuilt. Plans were ready made for the new Church before the ashes of the old Church had gone out.

Various people were put in the late summer, fall, and winter. The confidence of the Congregation in the Board of Trustees was renewed, and they, Mr. William Lochlead, Mr. Wesley Wagar, Mr. James Doupe, Mr. Floyd Cowdy, Mr. Ronald Brown and Mr. Stanley McKeown, with the pastor, Rev. K. J. Crawford, acting as chairman, became the building committee for the new Church, with the treasurer of Centreville Church, Mr. H. Edward Weese, as a consulting member. The Rev. James Robinson, of Bath, Ontario, was engaged to help the committee draw up the plans for the new Church. The site was changed to a more central point within the village. Mr. Henry Young and Mr. Percy Young, of Kehlin, were hired as contractors for the brick, block, and carpenter work on the Church, and Mr. Bruce Weese of our own Congregation is to do the plaster work. The Congregation as a whole has been continually behind the efforts of the Building Committee, and the greater part of the work so far has been done by the men of the Congregation working together in bees on their Church.

The Laying of the Corner Stone is a time of great rejoicing. It is symbolic of the rebuilding of the Church, the sign and symbol that the work is being done. The arrangements for this event were made by a committee comprised of Mr. Kenneth Weese, Mr. Harold Brown, Mr. Clarence Hawley, and Mr. Harold Thompson, and the Minister. Those present and assisting in the ceremony among others, are the Rev. J. E. Becker, President of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada; the Rev. W. R. Merrick, past Chairman of Belleville Presbytery of the Bay of Quinte Conference; and the Elders of Centreville Church, Mr. Norman Thompson, Mr. J. Wesley Wagar, Mr. Stanley Wagar, and Mr. Frederick Brown. Other church officials are also present, and the Presiding Minister is the Minister of Centreville Church, the Rev. K. J. Crawford; and presiding at the piano is Mrs. Ronald Brown. The prayer asked for the great occasion is the Rev. Dr. James Semple, of Peterborough.

And as usual, the ladies have been doing their part. Their interest, help, suggestions have been fitting and greatly appreciated. And on this occasion they have prepared an excellent dinner; to be served in connection with the laying of the Corner Stone.

As we look back over the past year — for it is just one year and two weeks since the fire — we give thanks to God for His Providence and Guidance in this work of rebuilding His Church in Centreville. His presence has been felt among us as we have done this work. We make our own prayer, in the words of the Psalmist: "Let the beauty of the Lord our God be upon us: and establish Thou the work of our hands upon us: yea, the work of our hands, establish Thou it."

POWDER KEG IN THE MIDDLE EAST

BY LOUIS F. KEEMLE
B.U.P. Correspondent

The Kurdish revolt in northwestern Iran is capable of blowing the whole Middle East sky high, if it is as serious as dispatches indicate.

Russia's action in asking postponement of the United Nations Security Council meeting in New York from Monday to April 10 is a good indication that Moscow expects considerable trouble which will have a vital bearing on the tense international situation.

Perhaps the Kurdish uprising is the key to the puzzling situation. The Kurds are an ancient war-like race whose tribal history extends back almost to the dawn of civilization in the region between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. They are supposed to have originated.

The Kurdish tribesmen are found in an oval belt extending some 800 miles from the Mediterranean coast of Turkey around Alexandretta, to the Caspian Sea. It is a border region embracing part of southern Turkey, northern Syria and Iraq, northwestern Iran and a bit of Trans-Caucasian Russia.

While the Kurdish revolt, so far, seems to have been confined to the Iranian area in the general region of Lake Urmia, it is perilously close to the borders of Turkey and Iraq. Kurds in the latter two countries are sympathetic, being disposed toward creation of a Kurdish state independent of the surrounding nations.

The Kurdish tribes in their long history never have been subdued nor have they submitted passively to a conqueror. Kurdish representatives demanded independence from Persia at the Versailles Conference in 1919, but got no satisfaction. Since then there have been intermittent uprisings, including the rebellion in Turkey in 1925, which was put down and its leaders executed.

The full aspirations of Kurdish nationalism's revenge upon independent state embracing all of the Mediterranean-Caspian Sea belt where they dwell. The reports are too meager in recent dispatches, but it has long been known to exist.

Britain, the United States, Russia, France and Turkey would be directly affected if the issue came to a head, not to mention the smaller states of Syria, Iraq and Iran.

From the military considerations Britain is concerned about her oil concessions in Iran, as is the United States in the Mosul-Kirkuk section of the disputed area. Turkey sees a threat to her boundaries and guards jealously the independence of Iraq is interested in many aspects, not the least more notably outlets to the Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf. France has a stake in Syria, comprising most of the Levant, a strategic position in the Middle East.

With all these entangled interests, it seems probable that a great deal of direct negotiation will be in order before a complete case can be laid before the UNO for judicial consideration.

In the meantime, Russia has nothing to lose by a spread of the Kurdish movement from Iran to Iraq, Syria and Turkey. Its success would be a Russian triumph. There has been no evidence that Russia has directly assisted the Kurdish movement, although the usual flock of refugees has been coming over the cables. If Russian troops should invade Iranian forces from intervening. in the northwest, however, it would be Azerbaijan all over again.

What Hues Can Animals, Birds, and Fish Distinguish

Our domestic pets, the dog and cat, can't tell red from green or blue from yellow. The only mammals that have color vision are the apes and monkeys. And the reasons why they manage to distinguish between different colors is probably that their way of living makes color perception necessary, and as a result processes have furnished their retinas with color receptors.

It is the need for color vision that determines whether an animal has the receptors for color reception or not. The mammals which live on the ground, the wolf and the horse, for instance, find little use for color vision in their circumscribed needs. The sense of smell is their chief sense receptor, and vision and hearing are relatively poorly developed. The need for color vision, however, is very acute with other groups of animals. Thus we find that color perception is well developed in fish, in amphibians like alligators and turtles and in reptiles, including all varieties of snakes. These creatures depend for their food and their safety to an intricate degree upon the ability to see and distinguish between different colors.

The silent shark, stealing through southern waters, looks like a grey shadow. But fish, assisted by a keen sense of small and fairly good color perception, are aware of the marauder and speed away like a flash of light.

Snakes, too, depend a great deal for food upon their keen color perception, and sense of smell. They have to be able to distinguish between the variously colored creatures on the ground.

Close to man in keenness of color vision, come birds. The common sparrow, the robin, the lark, the swallow and a host of other birds not only distinguish between the four primary colors of yellow, blue, red and green, but have a range of color vision that takes in a thousand different hues and shades. Wrapping from limb to limb, and generally living in a forest environment in which there is a profusion of color, birds have to have good color perception if they are to survive.

Development of the sense receptors is directly related to the environment and the life and habits of animals. In man the two senses best developed are vision and hearing. These are both distance receptors and man's life is built around them. It is different with animals.

The creatures living in the water, the amphibians and some reptiles depend upon the sense of smell as their chief distance receptor. Vision is fairly good, but hearing is almost totally absent. As far as is known, the gold fish has the best hearing among fish. The acuteness of hearing in a gold fish is about one-eleventh that of man. The turtle and the common snake, including the rattler, can't hear a thing.

The birds living for the most part in the air have almost no sense of smell. Most of the higher developed birds we know can't smell at all. On the other hand, their hearing is fair, and their sight is good.

Among mammals, the dog and the guinea pig, for instance, have better hearing than man. Their sense of smell is also very highly developed, but their vision is rather poor.

Thus it seems a superiority in one sense goes with inferiority in another. Only in man are all the senses fairly well developed.

Hello Hcmemakers !

Waste not—want not! Come next winter you will be glad you stocked up on canned foods for the family! Tomatoes, rich in food value are the easiest of all vegetables to can at home. But here are some precautions to take to prevent any spoilage whatsoever.

Look over the tomatoes carefully. One bad spot can spoil a whole batch when canned. Use only the finest tomatoes. Freshly picked, soft tomatoes not firm enough to can make excellent chili sauce or chutney.

Use thoroughly clean jars— scrub with soapy water, rinse and boil for twelve minutes. Fill top with blanched tomatoes. Wipe each jar rim with a clean, damp cloth. One speck of food may let in air and spoil the tomatoes.

Process quarts of tomatoes in a pressure cooker at 10 lbs. pressure for fifteen minutes; or submerge jars in a deep kettle of boiling water for ten minutes.

Place jars, top side up and well apart, on a folded cloth to cool. Prevent a draft across the jars which may crack them.

GENERAL DON'TS

Wilted, over-ripe or partly spoiled food is dangerous to can. Food spoils if left standing overnight. Corn, peas, and greens should not be packed tightly. Fill jar within an inch of top and then pour into it the pre-cooking liquid to the brim. Follow timetables to the minute for successful canning. You may break the seal if you cool the jars by placing them on the rims. Pressure canning is recommended for processing non-acid vegetables such as peas, beans and corn.

DIRECTIONS FOR PRESSURE COOKER

1. se fresh vegetables. Clean thoroughly. Prepare for table serving. Cover vegetables with water and bring to boiling point. Put the product into jars to within half-inch of the top. Add half-teaspoon salt to each quart. Push the blade of a knife down the inside of jar to remove air bubbles. Fill to top with hot liquid. Make sure there are no particles of food on the rim and put lid on as you fill each jar. Screw band tightly, then loosen about half an inch.

2. Clean the openings on 'the pressure cooker lid (each is never immersed in water) with a toothpick or skewer.

3. Placed filled containers in the utensil, allowing an inch of space around each.

4. Pour warm water to depth of about one inch. Adjust lid of cooker and fasten securely.

5. Open petcock and keep open until steam escapes with an audible sound. This takes from five to ten minutes.

6. Close petcock and allow pressure to rise slowly until gauge registers the desired point. Keep heat constant to avoid changes of pressure. Time the cooking from the minute the gauge records the desired pressure.

7. At the end of necessary period, remove the cooker from the electric stove and allow pressure to drop gradually to zero. Sudden cooling may crack jars or cause loss of liquid.

8. After the gauge has registered zero for two or three minutes, gradually open the petcock. Close immediately if there is a hissing sound and leave for extra two minutes.

9. Tilt the lid away from your face and remove the cover to cool on a pad of newspapers.

10. With tin cans, remove cans immediately and plunge into cold water to cool quickly.

Time Table

Process quart jars 30 minutes at 10 lbs. pressure. Process No. 2 tins 25 minutes at 10 lbs. pressure.

Process quarts 30 minutes at 10 lbs. pressure. Process No. 2 tins for 25 minutes, at 10 lbs. pressure.

Corn: Cut off without precooking. Add half as much boiling water as corn by weight, heat to boiling and pack hot into containers.

Process quarts 65 minutes at 15 lbs. pressure. Process No. 2 tins 50 minutes at 15 lbs. pressure.

Peas: Use only tender green peas. Bring to boiling point in water to cover and pack hot into containers.

Process quarts 45 minutes at 10 lbs. pressure. Process No. 2 tins 40 minutes at 10 lbs. pressure.

Process quarts 70 minutes at 15 lbs. pressure. Process No. 2 tins 60 minutes at 15 lbs. pressure.

Greens: Steam or heat in a covered kettle until completely wilted, using just enough water to prevent burning. Pack hot into container and not too solidly with liquid over food.

Note: Pint jars require five minutes less processing than quarts.

RADAR'S MISSION IN PEACE - TIME

BY ROBERT LUCAS

"Radar," more than any other invention, helped to bring about the defeat of Germany. In the decisive air battle over Britain, British airmen were helped by "radar" in their conquest over the all-powerful Luftwaffe. "Radar" too, was the decisive factor in the defeat of the U-boats, it helped British pilots to find targets during their raids, and it enabled them to see Germany clearly at night, in foggy weather conditions, through smoke and clour as effectively as if they had been looking in a magician's mirror. And a "radar" navigational system devised by the Allied Forces across the Channel prior to the landings in Normandy.

At no present moment, there is a whole army of scientists at work turning "radar" to peacetime purposes. One of the greatest wonders of World War II is to become a magical instrument for peace. The results of research as well as the special techniques and apparatus which, in recent years, were considered as one of the greatest secrets of the war, may now be placed at the disposal of mankind as a whole, so that all nations can derive profit from them. To this end, three big conferences have been held in London at which representatives from America, Russia, France, Poland, Holland, Norway and many other countries have taken part.

One of the conferences, the "Radiolocation Convention" devoted its attention entirely to the purely scientific side of the problem of radio-location, and reports on the progress made during the war as well as on the fantastic possibilities of the application of this new invention were made by such prominent British pioneers in the field of 'radar' research as Sir Robert Watson-Watt, W. A. S. Butement and Sir Edward Appleton. "The fundamental principal of "radar" threw back on the screen a pulsated effect of sound-echoes. A transmitter sends out an electro-magnetic signal which rebounds off any tangible object such as an enemy aircraft, ship, submarine, or even a cliff, that it meets in its path. It then reverberates from these to the transmitting station which is sent back to the shouter. This 'echo' received on a receiving set can be made visible on a glass screen. Extreme refinements of the same principle make it possible to measure distant landscapes visible down to the smallest detail on a screen.

Sir Edward Appleton gave examples showing the progress made in improvements in the receiving sets. Both long and short waves had been received on these sets which were radiated from the Milky Way and had taken not less than 30,000 light years to reach us. In like manner, waves radiated from sunspots were identified. On the other hand, it had been possible to construct successfully 'radar' transmitters of such strength and precision that their impulses reach the moon whence they are reverberated. In this way it is possible to follow the curse of a meteor through the universe.

One of the most interesting inventions used by Britain in World War II against the U-boat, was the 'radar' buoy. Whenever a British aircraft on patrol sighted a U-boat the submarine naturally tried to escape from the threatened attack by submerging at once. Thereupon, a 'radar' buoy was dropped from the aircraft, and this buoy, on coming in contact with the water, automatically released an anchor, set up an aerial and thereby switching on the "radar" set which it carried inside it. Within few seconds, the robot-buoy was sending out automatic signals for a radius of twenty miles, warning the fleets out on patrol fitted with "radar" receiving sets that there was a submerged submarine in their vicinity. Eighteen seconds later, the 'radar' buoy exploded automatically, taking its secrets with it under the water.

In May, another conference was held in London and its general conclusions contained this one item: the use of 'radar' for merchant shipping. Delegates from twentyone nations took part in the discussions. Britain's Minister of Transport, Mr. Barnes, stated in his inaugural address that, as early as 1944, the British Government had begun to work out plans as to how 'radar' could be put into use in connection with merchant shipping; this preliminary work was naturally kept a close secret. Now that the war is won, these achievements are to become the property of the whole world, and Britain has invited all seafaring nations to reach an agreement as to the best possible way in which wave-lengths as well as standardization of 'radar' sets can be put on an international basis.

The chief cause of shipping losses are bad visibility, interfering magnetic currents and human error.' All these sources of danger can, through the help of the most modern system of 'radar' either be eliminated or, at least, reduced. As Sir Robert Watson-Watt said in his exposition: "Our aim is to give the navigator a synthetic blue sky and eternal sunshine which we cannot hope to attain through direct influence on the weather. We wish to enable him to find his way through fog and bad weather by enabling him to see through them."

It is proposed to set up a 'radar' control-station in the harbour area of Liverpool. It will thus be possible for a controller, with a television map to keep a strict check on all the shipping in and around the harbor when visibility is bad, and thereby, to control the movement of ships. The fog may be so thick that the captain of a ship making port cannot even see the bow of his own ship, but he will be receiving exact navigational directions from the man in the control-tower who is able to follow closely all movements of shipping despite the fact that he is twenty miles away.

Another conference in London dealt exclusively with the use of 'radar' in civil aviation. On board aircraft 'radar' sets can reduce considerably the dangers of flying and landing in bad weather and even to

National Unity Essential For Prosperity of Britain

BY GEORGE MURRAY
In The Transatlantic Daily Mail

There has been a sudden break in the raucous din of party politics. The emphasis in Britain has swung to the need for more production, and the need for national unity in order to attain it.

Mr. Attlee has made appeals for harder work and greater output from employers and employed. He has asked women and elderly men who had left war work or were thinking of leaving to return or to stay at bench or desk.

The "Dundirk Spirit" has been invoked. The nation is asked to turn to-in order to win the battle for production and to ensure the future prosperity of Britain.

It is as though the captain of a ship in the middle of some metaphysical storm in the cabin had awakened to the fact that there were reefs ahead, and that the vessel was rapidly drifting towards them. He has shouted: "All hands on deck." in as imperative a voice as he can command and the crew are at this moment tumbling up—though not with the same alacrity as they displayed when the old skipper's organ tones echoed round the world.

* * *

Of course, Mr. Attlee's appeals have met with an immediate response from all political parties and all sections of the Press. They back him as they back any man who speaks for Britain, and not merely one class, section, or party in Britain.

It is pointed out, nevertheless, that what Mr. Attlee has now apparently discovered has been urged upon him by the point of tedium ever since he left his Socialists into office.

He now says, among other things: "The real way to increase the national wealth and to reduce taxation is to produce more goods."

Too much austerity is bad for the nation. People need a modicum of clothing, household goods, and even semi-luxuries to give them an incentive to work;

The private builder must not be entirely shut out of the housing program. He is, in fact, essential to its success. If the people are to understand our economic situation adequate facts and figures must be given by the Government. Therefore a monthly digest of statistics will be provided.

It is a little amusing to find Mr. Attlee ingenuously announcing all these points as though he had made some new and momentous advances in political economy. They have all figured in speech after speech and editorial after editorial by those who consider that the Government have been spending too much time on their long-term program of socialization and not enough in meeting urgent short-term problems as satisfying the immediate needs of the people.

In a two-day debate on the problems of man-power, Mr. Oliver Lyttelton, a Minister in the Coalition Government, said the country could only find unity if the deep cleavages which separated the political parties were closed and not widened. He appealed for a postponement of nationalisation for two years, for a reduction of the endless restrictions, regulations, and Civil service interference which hamper industry, and for a cut in expenditure still running at nearly $16,000,000,000 a year. He also pointed out that our deficit on overseas trading account was about $2,-400,000,000 a year; a sum which would make the American loan in eighteen months.

Industry, he said, was "inert" owing to the chronic shortage of labour. By the middle of the year there would still be 2,000,000 men and women in the Armed Forces, and another 1,000,000 engaged in munitions. In addition, 1,000,000 would be employed in the central or local government services—a grand total of nearly 5,000,000 persons, or one in four of the working population, who were unproductive.

His greatest statement was that since VJ-Day output per man hour has decreased between 20 and 30 per cent. He recognized that people were tired after six years of war on a regimented diet, but he pointed out, "There is the feeling by those who have seen the New Jerusalem in Dunkirkler perspective that after election that a new era has dawned and perhaps high earnings and high wages can still be attained without a high rate of work and effort.

Mr. Lyttelton made a shrewd hit when he said that the point which is giving concern to many industrialists and economists.

For a generation the Socialists have been preaching about the wickedness of the profit motive and of the semi-Paradise which awaited the workers under Socialism. Now they are in office and they are up against the hard economic facts of everyday life, they have discovered that there is only one way to get results, and that is by honest work.

How to divide up the work among the available workers has been the conditions of visibility are unfavorable. These sets can warn airmen of the approach of another aircraft, as well as setting them on their guard against mountains and other dangerous cloud formations. Furthermore, special 'radar' beacons can be set up on land in order to bring any sudden change of weather conditions to the notice of aircrew. The value of these stations is to be built in the tropics where sudden and violent changes of weather are of frequent occurrence. It would seem, too, that 'radar' is destined to play an outstanding part in meteorology.

It is not possible to forecast all the peacetime applications and developments of shipping despite the fact that he is twenty miles away.

Another conference in London dealt exclusively with the use of 'radar' in civil aviation. On board aircraft 'radar' sets can reduce considerably the dangers of flying and landing in bad weather and even to Government's problem. In an attempt to solve it they have drawn up the first manpower Budget—which may, hereafter, become an annual affair.

The Prime Minister said that by the end of 1946 there would be 20,-000,000 workers, men and women, service and civilian, compared with 19,750,000 in 1939. In December of this year there would be 1,100,000 men and women in the Services and 500,000 on munitions, a total of 1,600,000 out of ordinary industry. This left 18,400,000 to run the country's trade, industry and services, and many vitally important projects were jostling for priority in the labor market. Housing was one. exports another; the reconversion of industry a third.

It had been decided to aim at a target of 1,400,000 for the building and civil engineering trades by the end of this year, and of 1,55,600 for the export industries — a greater number than had ever been engaged in these activities before.

The total of export trade for 1946 had been set at $3,000,000,000, compared with $1,932,000,000 in 1944 and $1,884,000,000 in 1938. That pre-war figure at present prices would amount to about $2,880,000,000, so the 1946 target does not get within sight of the 75 per cent. increase in exports which Britain must achieve, if she is to pay her way.

Mr. Attlee is aware of this. He points out that there will still be a heavy deficit in our balance of payments. "The fact is," he says, "that Britain is paying very dearly, economically as well as humanely, for our victory, particularly in the loss of our foreign investment income, of which a big share paid for our food."

Though the foreign exchange position is "grim and difficult" the Prime Minister hopes that in 1948 the supply of consumer goods will be half-way back to pre-war standards.

With that as their inducement the British people must now work harder than they have ever done before in peace-time.

JAPAN PROGRESSES UNDER ALLIED RULE

BY MILES W. VAUGHN
B. U. P. Correspondent

Tokyo. — Allied occupation of Japan has developed so successfully that a final peace treaty may be signed next spring and the original occupation estimate of from five to fifteen years radically reduced, it is believed in high Allied quarters.

The chief remaining bar to signature of a final peace treaty in the opinion of high Allied quarters was said to be the question of reparations.

Supreme Allied Headquarters here does not deal with reparations questions but it was believed that there might be differences of opinion with Russia on reparations which might delay efforts to sign an early Japanese peace treaty.

In the view of the high command it was said, the reparations issue should be taken up at an early date. Upon the return of President Truman's emissary, Edwin W. Pauley, it was thought, would provide a basis for negotiation of reparations estimates.

It was said here that if reparations can be fixed and if no inter-allied differences arise there should be no reason why a final peace treaty could not be signed possibly as early as twenty months after the July 26 anniversary of the Potsdam declaration.

That would mean a peace treaty next spring.

One stumbling block on the reparations issues was said to be the status of machinery and other materials removed by Russia from Manchuria and Korea. Russia is said to regard these supplies — valued at hundreds of millions of yen—as 'war booty' rather than reparations.

If a peace treaty is signed it was said that the matter of further occupation of Japan might be settled much more rapidly than originally supposed. In some quarters it was thought a time limit on the occupation might even be set before the end of this year.

Allied officers were said to believe confidently that the bulk of the occupation forces should be withdrawn as soon as possible. They believe that the difficulties of any military occupation increase in direct ratio with the length of the force's stay in the occupied land.

They point out that there has been no indication of any extensive effort by the Japanese ultra-Nationalists to re-establish themselves and that the Japanese have shown great willingness to accept the fact of their defeat and seem to be interested in re-establishing themselves as a nation worthy of international respect.

They note that Allied troops have had little to do in the way of maintaining peace and order since disarming the Japanese military forces that public order throughout the country is excellent.

In their opinion, the vast majority of Japanese, including Emperor Hirohito are trying to cooperate in good faith with the Allies and to abide scrupulously by the terms of the Potsdam declaration.

It was pointed out here that Japan's foreign trade is progressing amazingly under the Supreme Allied command program which may permit upwards of $400,000,000 in exports on a barter basis during the next six months. However, it can not be replaced on a normal basis until an exchange value for the Japanese yen is fixed for dollars and other foreign currency.

MILITARY SCIENCE AND DEFENCE

BY STUART UNDERHILL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London—Specialist knowledge of the "Backroom Boys" which played such a big part in winning the war, is likely to become more widely shared as tactician's find tomorrow's military problems must be met increasingly by scientific basis.

During the war Allied leaders showed their ability to use the latest scientific methods where needed but due to atomic energy developments our whole theory of military strategy is being overhauled. The officer with a keen scientific brain may find a field marshal's baton more accessible than will the traditional quick-deceased field commander.

The atom was used only twice but its impact was enough to jar designers of attack and defence from their traditional procedures. The uncertainty that still obscures their course was underlined in the House of Commons by War Secretary Lawson, in presenting the army estimates when he said future planning was made difficult by the effect new scientific progress may have upon land armies.

But British determination to make a stab in the right direction was evidenced by his announcement, that it has been decided to reorganize on the most up-to-date lines the Military College of Science where post-graduate courses will be held to qualify officers for technical posts.

Mr. Lawson said in addition that the Department of Scientific Adviser to the army council will be retained, not only to deal with weapons but "most important of all . . . extension of scientific methods to determine how best a soldier can carry out his duties as a fighter man."

The Military College of Science originally was designed to train technical officers in such branches as the engineers and artillery. It saw an enormous expansion during the war. Radar was added to its courses and the effect of atom bomb warfare inevitably will be included.

Candidates for courses are chosen after their applications and records have been weighed carefully, and generally attend for two and half years. Mr. Lawson emphasized the college would be open to all ranks with his assertion "it will one day be the normal thing to mind men who were once humble workers in industry occupying the highest positions in the army."

The full burden of modernizing military operations falls, however, on the army council—top-ranking army leaders. During the war a scientific adviser was appointed to advise them on the practicability of the lush mass of proposals for aiding the war effort which came from all quarters, and on the application of available scientific knowledge.

"The council had on its right hand a scientific brain it could consult on all points requiring special knowledge," said a war office spokesman. "That it's to be continued shows the importance attached to scientific developments."

Although the atom bomb may put an end to ground fighting in its usual form, there will be a job for Tommy Atkins, who will have to garrison and hold territory before and after the bomb falls.

THE POLAR BEAR WIDE - AWAKE ALL WINTER

The Polar is the largest of all bears, being often nine feet long and it is both strong and aggressive. It spends much time in the water, and though a heavy walker on the ice it is a swift swimmer.

It has a narrow head, a pointed snout, a long neck, small rounded ears, and hair on the soles of its feet. It feeds on fish and seals but sometimes in summer eats vegetable food.

Unlike other bears, the male Polar bear does not sleep through the winter, probably because food is so scarce but the she-bear takes herself to some sheltered corner. There she will have one to three cubs and spend the coldest time of the year looking after them.

PEARLS FROM SCOTTISH SEAS

Not many people know that extensive pearl fishing is carried on off the shores of Scotland.

Lying over the prows of small flat-bottomed boats, men are scanning shallow river beds through boxes fitted with glass bottoms, seeking freshwater mussels from which the pearls are obtained. The mussels are lifted with long cleft sticks and 300 a day is the average number collected.

Working individually, the men operate on ten rivers, and all of them hope during the year to secure a pearl like the huge one set in the Scottish crown.

Pearl-fishing is an ancient craft, handed down from father to son, generation after generation. Fishermen ready to face the perils of pearling in the hope of landing a fortune. Once a mussel is fished it is put in an undisturbed for twelve years, the time a mussel takes to form a saleable pearl.

Scottish pearl-fishing is not so profitable as it was when a 450-grain worth of "white berries" were taken from the river Tay in three years.

In those days pearls valued at £2 are more common, though one worth £300 and another valued at £480 were obtained by pearl fishers in recent years.

Sugar Ration To be Increased For Last Quarter

THREE MORE POUNDS ADDED TO QUOTA FOR EACH PERSON

The Canadian sweet tooth got a lift with the announcement of an increase of three pounds in the individual sugar ration for 1946 and corresponding boosts in the allotment for soft drink, biscuit, cereal and confectionery manufacturers, bakers, hotels and restaurants.

The increase, first announced in the Commons by Acting Minister Abbott and later detailed in a Prices Board statement, resulted from an improvements in stocks and will be effective for the last three months of this year.

The consumer increase of three pounds will boost the individual ration to 31 pounds for the year, compared with 28 pounds which the average user would get at the present rate, giving the individual the same amount as he received in 1945.

The Board said the increase will be made by increasing the rate at which sugar ration coupons, each good for one pound, become valid. Under the new plan, two extra coupons will become valid in September and the third on or about December 6th.

On this basis, five sugar coupons in the new ration book No. 6 will be declared valid September 19, two others in October, three in November and three in December. In addition to the 31-pound ration for the year, each consumer also is entitled to 10 pounds of sugar for canning purposes.

Industrial users will receive a similar increase through supplementary authorizations in the third and fourth quarters which will amount to approximately 5 per cent for each quarter.

The increase amounts will be in the following proportion to their 1941 sugar usages: Third quarter, soft drink and confectionery manufacturers, 65 per cent; Biscuit and Cereal manufacturers, 70 per cent, and Bakers, 75 per cent; fourth quarter, 70, 75, and 80 per cent respectively.

For quota users, which includes hotel, restaurants, lumber camps and similar users, the increase will be made in the fourth quarter and will be equivalent to the total increase allowed industrial users in that quarter. The increase varies according to the number of meals served by the user in each quarter.

COAL SHORTAGE RUMOR BRANDED FALSE

Rumors to the effect that there will be a lack of coal on the Canadian market and that the United States is not shipping to Canada were declared false in a statement issued on behalf of the Quebec Fuel Dealers Inc., by A. P. Riendeau, the president, on Saturday.

"It is only with there not be a shortage of that type of fuel," said Mr. Riendeau, "but we are, in fact convinced that the supply of high-grade anthracite will be larger than last year."

The statement explained that the government restrictions have been aimed simply at the preventing of hoarding of stocks by some to the detriment of others. It was pointed out that the embargo on shipment from America effected two months ago was lifted a few days after, it had been in force.

Referring to the governemnt order in which the Canadian consumer is allowed to buy 60 per cent of his fuel needs, now, Mr. Riendeau stressed that this does not mean that the householder will get only that amount but that he is entitled to get 100 per cent of his requirements on the basis of 60 per cent before November and the balance after that date.

The statement concluded with "we wish to advise the public that the shortage of coal predicted by the government may affect industry, but it will certainly not affect residential consumers."

Elderly Woman Wandered Away From Belleville

Constable took her in charge and was unable to find any trace in the town of a sister the woman was seeking.

In her purse was found a railway pass from Belleville to North Bay, so the police contacted Belleville City Police who came to Napanee and took her back to her home in Belleville, from which she had wandered away.

Trenton 7, Napanee 4 Baseball Score Tuesday Game

A good game of Intermediate Hard Ball was played at the Lions' oval-ed Gibbard Park in Napanee Tuesday evening between Trenton Flyers and Napanee Intermediates. The score was 7 to 4 in favor of the visitors.

Until nearly the end of the game the score was 4 to 3, but two wild pitches and a couple of errors paved the way for the airmen to score three counters in the 6th. In the last half of the seventh innings, VanVlack for Napanee poled a long fly to right for three bases and stretched the hit into a circuit when the throw to third was high.

Attendance at the game was good. Socks Steinger hurled for the locals with Murphy receiving.

REGISTRATION MAY END SOON

Introduced in 1941 the registration was designed as a stocktaking of the country's manpower resources and it provided the basis for compulsory military call-up.

The registration has continued in effect and it costs about $325,000 a year to keep the records up-to-date noting changes of address, deaths and the registration of Canadians as they reach the age of 16.

This year's estimates include an item to cover this expense and expectation is that unless the scheme is eliminated before those estimates come before the house they will evoke considerable discussion. Expectations are that a decision will be reached by the government before that time is reached.

The registration scheme has found favor in some circles as a means of identification and has been widely used by the provinces in liquor rationing plans. On the other hand there have been objections taken to it as a form of fingerimentation not appropriate to peacetime.

Canada Supplies Third U.K. Bacon

Canada has undertaken to supply the British market with 350 million pounds of bacon in 1947 and 400 million in 1948.

The normal annual bacon consumption in the U.K. is approximately 1,200 million pounds, which means that Canada in 1948 intends to supply one-third of this total.

W. B. Gornall, Canadian Trade Commissioner at London, has sent a special report on the U.K. bacon situation to the Department Trade and Commerce at Otawa.

To maintain the post-war demand for Canadian bacon on a profitable basis and at a level approaching war-time supply, Mr. Gornall contends that producers in this country must exercise every effort to increase the number and grade of carcasses yielding Wiltshire sides or sizeable weight.

RECORD TRADE

Canadian exports to Latin America, for the first five months of this year, had a total value of $36,385,000 The total for the year 1946, if this rate of foreign trade is maintained, will be in the neighborhood of $88,000,000. This will represent more than four times the value of goods shipped to Latin Republics in an average pre-war year.

Greek Farmers Stage Comeback

Greek agriculture, with anything like average luck, will be close to prewar production next year, according to the European Section, Foreign Trade Service, Department of Trade and Commerce.

Canadian Trade officials explained that agriculture was the one aspect of Greek economic life which had survived comparatively rapidly thanks to the industry of the peasant and the intelligent application by the Greek Government for agricultural rehabilitation.

The importance of this step forward for Greece can be seen in its true perspective when it is recalled that pre-war cash Greek national income before the war was derived from agriculture.

Good Business In Napanee Last Thursday

Last Thursday was an unusually busy day in Napanee. The rain early in the day had made it possible for farmers to leave their work and come into town. The stores were all very busy and traffic on the streets was exceptionally heavy. Merchants are finding Thursdays generally good busy days partly due no doubt to the fact that ration coupons are valid these days.

Governor General Attends Celebration Kingston Centenary

CITY PROVIDES GOOD PROGRAMME OF ENTERTAINMENT

The City of Kingston has this week been celebrating the 100th Anniversary of its incorporation as a city. During the celebration days which included Sunday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, thousands of former residents and visitors from nearby and distant localities attended the celebrations.

The celebration started on Sunday night when a Band Concert was given in Macdonald Park. On Monday, Civic Holiday, 60 aircraft took part in an air meet at the Kingston Flying Club. In the afternoon there were horse races at the Fair Grounds and also a hard ball game. In the evening a block dance, fire works and a band concert made up the programme.

Tuesday, veterans of Two World Wars took part in the military activities on the occasion of the official visit of Viscount Alexander, Governor General of Canada, who held an investiture and took part in the Dedication of the Book of Remembrance in memory of Kingston and District men and women who served in the armed forces. On Tuesday evening a Civic Dinner was held at Queen's Barracks in honour of Viscount Alexander.

The Governor General laid the corner stone of the new Factory wing of the Kingston General Hospital and received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws at a special Convocation at Queen's University held at the Richardson Stadium.

The Centenery marks the 100th Anniversary of Kingston's incorporation as a city, although officially Kingston has been a city since May 1846, when the act of incorporation was passed. Early in June 1846, notices of incorporation were published, candidates nominated and the first city council elected.

5-Year Income Plan Is Rejected

Acting Finance Minister Abbott told the Commons last Friday he had reconsidered requests that farmers and fishermen be allowed to average their income over a five-year period but that a three-year period for income tax purposes, but had reached the conclusion that the requests could not be met.

He spoke before the Commons passed a budget resolution which would allow farmers and fishermen to average their income over three-year periods for income tax purposes.

If a five-year period was used farmers and fishermen would not receive any benefit from the legislation until the end of five years. The plan outlined in the budget called fer a moving three-year average, and it was felt that this plan would prove most practical and provide income tax relief.

Heavy Tourist Traffic Through Napanee

Tourist traffic through Napanee during this summer has been very heavy. A large proportion of the cars passing over the main street of the town which is part of Highway No. 2 are from the United States. The merchants of the town are also securing a good deal of extra business from the visitors.

ITALY FALLING APART AT SEAMS

Unless Premier Alcide de Gasperi can return to Rome with substantial modifications of the proposed Italian peace treaty it appeared today that the new-born Italian Republic may head immediately into a grave and possibly explosive crisis.

The Italian Republic is less than two months old but already it has accumulated a store of troubles which would give pause to a statesmany times older and more stable than the Italian republic.

On the surface, at least, Italy already is suffering from the ills that plagued her pre-Mussolini days coupled with the same kind of complaints that led eventually to the downfall of Germany's Weimar republic and the rise of Adolf Hitler.

The Italian lira daily falling apart at the seams and the danger of a new Hitler and Mussolini rising to pick up the pieces, will be presented to the peace conference by de Gasperi and the Italian Socialists.

De Gasperi has many hard facts to back his thesis. Italy is beset with deep economic chaos, by national and international and domestic wrangling.

The crux of Italy's troubles is her foreign relations which appear to be at their lowest ebb since the "sanctions" days of the Ethiopian war. When France took Briga and Tenda a hydro-electric nugget, and the big Four internationalized Trieste and gave 80 per cent of Venezia Giulia to Yugoslavia, cutting Italy's power production by 34 per cent the bottom dropped out of Italian foreign policy.

Italy felt that her efforts to conciliate France, her two years of co-belligerency and a year of strengthening her foreign policy toward Britain and America had failed.

The lid blew off the steam boiler of economic unrest, unemployment, hunger. The anti-Allied demonstrations turned into strikes and violence aimed at putting pressure on the new government to give more jobs, more wages, more food. The basis for the nation-wide agitation was over 2,000,000 unemployed, many thousands on the dole, and inflation which pushed circulation of lire from 30 billion in 1938 to 389 billion now.

As the Socialists did in 1930 prior to Mussolini, the workers in Turin staged a general strike, seized the factories and paraded in the streets. Petroleum workers struck for twenty-four hours, leaving the nation without newspapers. Later the agitation spread to Milan, Genoa and Florence.

Communist and Socialist demonstrators literally came to blows in the assembly. Guglielmo Giannini's common men and Communists came to each other in battles for control of labor unions near Bari. Monarchists in Naples staged a gigantic demonstration calling for the return of the Savoys. Allied intelligence reports reviving separation in Sicily. Trieste remained a hotbed of agitation and nationwide demonstrations of solidarity with Trieste and Istria continued.

From this atmosphere De Gasperi has come to Paris.

A moderate Rightist Christian Democrat Premier, De Gasperi hoped to come back from Paris with something he could ask the Assembly to sign. Also new interior minister, he was wondering if the nationwide disturbances might have stemmed partially from the fact that a Socialist no longer held this public order portfolio.

There were no key men on the sidelines. Communist Secretary and the cleverest politician in Italy, Palmiro Togliatti, who personally remained outside the government which however contained four Communist ministers, and Giannini, common man leader accused of being Italy's new "man on the horse."

Togliatti and Giannini, the General Confederation of Labor, embracing all unions, with his man, CGL Secretary Communist Bruno de Vittorio Ghannini spoke for amnestied Fascists, returning prisoners of war and refugees and the dissatisfied Monarchists and the oppressed peasants of the south.

If De Gasperi fails at Paris to get the Trieste and Venezia Giulia decisions revised, the reparations claim modified, and a better deal on the fleet and colonies, he may have to resign. And if he weathers this storm, he will quickly have to face a foreign loan to revive his creaking domestic economy.

Otherwise many fear a drastic change in Italy — the Weimar Republic and post-world war I Italy point one way — will be inevitable.

SOME BUTTER AND MEAT COUPONS INVALID END OF MONTH

Meat coupons M-40 to M-50, and butter coupons R-10 to R-17 in consumer ration books will become invalid for the purchase of these commodities after August 31st, the Ration Administration of the Prices Board announced last week.

"Beaver and Buffalo" coupons, issued to members of the armed forces and other temporary ration card holders, will not be affected by the change and all sugar coupons will remain valid until further notice.

The Elizabeth To Speed Up

GREAT LINER MAY SEEK ATLANTIC RECORD

Shipping men said recently the Queen Elizabeth is being refitted with new turbines expected to produce a speed of 40 knots and predicted that the world's largest liner would seek a North Atlantic speed record.

The 85-000 ton Elizabeth, now receiving final touches from 3,400 workmen in preparation for her maiden voyage as a peace-time luxury liner, is expected to be eight knots faster than her sister-ship, the Queen Mary when the latter vessel wrested the record from the French liner the Normandy in 1938.

Servicemen — including thousands of Canadians who sailed on the former troopship will scarcely recognize her now.

Never before in shipping history has so thorough and complete a reconditioning been undertaken," one shipping official said. Blackout paint had to be removed from 2,000 portholes and doors and windows had to give the Queen her peace-time dress. Furniture stored in the States and Australia during war-time is now being installed.

This picture of Italy falling apart at the seams and the danger of a new Hitler and Mussolini rising to pick up the pieces, will be presented to the peace conference by de Gasperi and the Italian Socialists.

De Gasperi has many hard facts to back his thesis. Italy is beset with deep economic chaos, by national and international and domestic wrangling.

The crux of Italy's troubles is her foreign relations which appear to be at their lowest ebb since the "sanctions" days of the Ethiopian war. When France took Briga and Tenda a hydro-electric nugget, and the big Four internationalized Trieste and gave 80 per cent of Venezia Giulia to Yugoslavia, cutting Italy's power production by 34 per cent the bottom dropped out of Italian foreign policy.

Italy felt that her efforts to conciliate France, her two years of co-belligerency and a year of strengthening her foreign policy toward Britain and America had failed.

The lid blew off the steam boiler of economic unrest, unemployment, hunger. The anti-Allied demonstrations turned into strikes and violence aimed at putting pressure on the new government to give more jobs, more wages, more food. The basis for the nation-wide agitation was over 2,000,000 unemployed, many thousands on the dole, and inflation which pushed circulation of lire from 30 billion in 1938 to 389 billion now.

As the Socialists did in 1930 prior to Mussolini, the workers in Turin staged a general strike, seized the factories and paraded in the streets. Petroleum workers struck for twenty-four hours, leaving the nation without newspapers. Later the agitation spread to Milan, Genoa and Florence.

Communist and Socialist demonstrators literally came to blows in the assembly. Guglielmo Giannini's common men and Communists came to each other in battles for control of labor unions near Bari. Monarchists in Naples staged a gigantic demonstration calling for the return of the Savoys. Allied intelligence reports reviving separation in Sicily. Trieste remained a hotbed of agitation and nationwide demonstrations of solidarity with Trieste and Istria continued.

From this atmosphere De Gasperi has come to Paris.

A moderate Rightist Christian Democrat Premier, De Gasperi hoped to come back from Paris with something he could ask the Assembly to sign. Also new interior minister, he was wondering if the nationwide disturbances might have stemmed partially from the fact that a Socialist no longer held this public order portfolio.

FIRE DESTROYS CHOWN HARDWARE, KINGSTON

About 3.30 a.m., last Thursday fire was discovered in the wholesale department of the Chown Hardware on Bagot Street, Kingston and before the blaze could be controlled had destroyed both the wholesale department and the retail store which was located on Princess Street.

The loss in stock and building was estimated at nearly a million dollars.

The fire was believed to have been started from a short circuit in one of the delivery trucks parked in the laneway in the centre of the wholesale department on Bagot St.

Every available fireman and all the fire-fighting equipment in the city were called out to fight the fire which took over five hours to control. Damage by smoke and water was also done to nearby buildings.

FORMER RESIDENT OF THIS DISTRICT DIES IN MANITOBA

The death of William Armitage, a well-known and highly esteemed former resident of the Elva district, Manitoba occurred at his home a short distance from the village on Sunday morning, May 26th. Mr. Armitage was in his 87th year.

He was born in Hastings County, seven miles from Napanee, Ont., on September 8th, 1859, and was the eldest son of the late Francis Armitage and Maria Toner. He farmed in the east for about fifty years before coming to Manitoba in 1892 where he engaged in agricultural activities for another period of 54 years in this province. His marriage to Isabella Urquhart was solemnized on February 1 1899, at Napanee. She survives to mourn his passing, together with two sons, Donald of Elva district, and Charles at home, and one daughter, Mrs. Geo. Hogman, of Estevan, Sask. Mr. Armitage was predeceased by his eldest daughter, Mrs. McGraw, of Gainsborough, in 1918, while another son, George A. passed away in June 1943. A sister, Miss Mary Armitage is living in Napanee, Ont. His death is mourned also by four grandchildren.

In spite of his advanced age, Mr. Armitage was fortunate in the privilege of having passed away in his own home during the time of his death. On Saturday morning he was up and around at the usual time, but later in the morning was afflicted with the first stage of the illness that culminated in his death.

The funeral service was held at the family residence at 2.30 p.m., on Tuesday, with Rev. N. B. McEnaghen, minister of Pierson United Church, officiating. Interment was made in the family plot at Melita cemetery, with Messrs. Gordon McRae, James Cillander, Wm. Shannon Jos. Maas, and Jack Gibson and Richard Skelton acting as pallbearers.

The last rites were largely attended and many beautiful floral tributes marked the last respects to the memory of a good citizen and neighbor.

KINGSTON CELEBRATES

The Limestone City has been observing its 100th Anniversary. An interesting and attractive series of events has been held during the past few days, events worthy of a city with so long and creditable a history. While one of the oldest cities in the Province, Kingston for many years did not share the growth and prosperity of other cities. In this it shared the general development or lack of development, in the whole of Eastern Ontario. There was growth of course, but not steady, but cities like to grow bigger and better. They are eager for a place in the sun. Kingston had that place in the sun but it was not due at least, not to any great extent, to a growth in population or a rapid expansion of business or manufacturing.

The place in the sun which Kingston has held is not less because it did not expand rapidly. Indeed that lack of concentration on business and manufacturing was probably one of the reasons why so much emphasis was on education as reflected in Queens' University and in the Royal Military College. Certainly there have gone out from these institutions men and women who have made a distinct contribution to the life of the nation. The list of those who during the war were directing leaders of public policy is an imposing one. While in church, education and engineering the number of men and women sent out from Kingston is quite out of proportion to the numerical size of the city.

Of course being a military and University city has some disadvantages for the stranger. Soldiers stationed in Kingston spoke of the "coldness" of the people. That was understandable, a city which through all its history has been accustomed to have soldiers in her midst, takes them for granted while other cities unaccustomed to housing soldiers, regard them as a novelty and treat them as such.

Now however since Kingston has grown due to the establishment there of some large scale industries and the population has become more diversified and cosmopolitan, this criticism will become invalid. When the St. Lawrence waterway scheme is completed, Kingston, as the largest city in East. Ontario, will undoubtedly undergo an expansion which will equal that which has taken place in other centres, contiguous to great supplies of electricity while it will become a deep sea port. Kingston and all Eastern Ontario can look forward to great days ahead.

CIVIC HOLIDAY

There is no real reason for a Civic Holiday. Or rather there is no very outstanding event which the holiday commemorates. The reason after all, is rather a sound one. August is a good month for a holiday and if there is no battle to be celebrated that month, no outstanding victory, the birthday of no celebrity, then being practical people the thing to do is exactly what has been done, create a holiday.

And why not? Why wait for a holiday until some one has a birthday or until some national event has to be remembered. Birthdays are uncontrollable ,though sometimes even Kings change the official date of a birthday to suit popular taste, and national events cannot be made to order. But a holiday can be proclaimed when needed. That is exactly what happened in connection with Civic holiday. It started some years ago in Toronto, and has spread until it is general in most towns and municipalities in the Province.

We have glorious summer days in August. They are all too few, as a matter of fact our Canadian summers are short enough and seem to hurry by at incredible speed especially in August. Even the town clock seems to have caught the mood for it has been running five minutes ahead of time since the first of the month. If the clock has to be off centre a bit we would prefer it to be retarded, then we would not be so constantly reminded of summer's hasty passing. However Monday was a glorious day, and by the deserted appearance of the streets "a good time was had by all."

PALESTINE AND THE JEWS

No group of people suffered more at the hands of the Nazis than the Jews. From the very beginning of the Nazi movement Hitler and his henchmen deliberately fanned up a flame of hatred against them and when the spirit of hate was sufficiently general in the nation they set on foot a campaign for exterminating the Jew completely. Camps for scientific destruction of the Jews were set up and with diabolical efficiency the slaughter of the innocents proceeded. It all but succeeded, only a comparatively few Jews escaped, and those who did escape suffered mental, spiritual and physical torture unequalled in modern time.

The anger of the democratic people throughout the world against the perpetrators of these atrocities was aroused and along with this went a deep and heart felt sympathy for these hard pressed and broken people.

It is nothing short of a tragedy that the Jews themselves should have taken a course of action which has caused a shift in public opinion and has lost for them a good deal of sympathy in their cause.

There is no doubt but that the British people have made mistakes in connection with the Jewish people and yet no nation in the world has a finer record of tolerance and broadmindedness than Britain. They are part and parcel of the British citizenship. Some of Great Britain's greatest leaders in politics and in business have been Jews. Less prejudice has been held against them in Great Britain than anywhere else.

In view of this traditional policy it seems incredible that the Jews should now show bitterness against the British people and such organized armed opposition to them. Admittedly the Palestine question is a difficult one. But the solution is made infinitely more difficult by recent terrorism and acts of destruction.

Had the Government in Great Britain been any other than a labor Government, the Jews in Palestine might have been able to stir up some opposition in certain quarters against so called Imperialists. But the labor Government is an Imperial one, it is doing its best to meet the desires of all under its flag for freedom and independence.

In the long run a nation needs the support of public opinion. The Jews in Palestine are doing their best to alienate it. They have lost many friends during the past few weeks.

THE STEEL STRIKE

The steel strike continues to hold the focus of attention on the industrial front in this country. It may be that a solution will have been reached by the time this is in our readers' hands. The Conciliator, Mr. Leonard W. Brockington, is meeting with both parties, seeking a compromise adjustment of wages. It is to be hoped he is successful.

There are many lessons to be learned from the present situation. The most obvious, however is that the lines against inflation are to be held, the Government will have to stamp down hard on prices. For if prices are increased, wages are bound to follow. An increase of $5.00 a ton was permitted the steel industry. So the workers feel justified in demanding more wages. This is something in the argument. The increase in prices is won without a ripple of public interest, but when workers demand a share of that in wages, the world is made suddenly and graphically aware of it.

The steel workers demand that with every increase of one point in the cost of living wages should be increased one cent is a reasonable one. It will serve as a curb on the demand for increased prices. With that principle established, there should be less labor disputes.

LET 'EM IN !

Prime Minister E. DeValera has applied on behalf of Eire for Membership in the United Nations Organization. He acted under a unanimous vote of the Parliament of Southern Ireland. The Irish love a good fight, and the atmosphere of the UNO seems congenial for differences of opinion, vigorously expressed. So long as Russia is a member, there will lack no occasion for disputes. With power of veto at her command, Russia can always be counted on to stir up something. That is the sort of atmosphere in which the Celtish temperament will flourish. There has been lots of excitement in the UN meetings so far and while the members have not resorted to matching guns or boxing gloves, to settle their differences, they may well welcome the Shillalah which made Donnybrook famous. By all means the Irish should be admitted.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, AUGUST 11th, 1946

"JESUS AND HOME RELATIONSHIPS

Lesson Text: Exodus 20:12; Luke 2: 51, 52; Mark 7: 9-13

This fifth commandment begins a new relationship. The first four have to do with our duty to God; the others with our duty to each other.

This fifth commandment, dealing with our duty to our neighbors, has to do naturally with parents and children, for on the home rests the stability, or otherwise, of the whole national life. Destroy the family and every other institution goes. The family is in bad shape today. So this commandment is all the more worthy of study. R. H. Charles, famous Old Testament scholar, has this to say on the fifth commandment: "There is no penalty appended, moreover it is not a negative, but a positive command. It is couched in words dignified and tender. 'Honour thy father and thy mother.' " It is manifest that the most scholars that this promise is made, not to the individual but to the nation. As regards the nation it is, of course, an indisputable fact that where the family life is maintained in purity and uprightness and successive generations are linked together by such spiritual bonds as love and respect of children for their parents, the nation has therein the best guarantee for its well being and permanence."

In our day this respect has declined. The decline set in following the first world war. In Germany, respect for parents was challenged by the Nazis. Children were taught to spy on their parents, to betray them, to disregard them. In other countries, the effect of the war was disastrous, perhaps not to the same degree as in Germany, yet sufficiently so that the children paid all too little respect for their elders.

Now we have come through another war. A war in which homes have been broken, parents taken away, and children left much to themselves. So the problem of the home has been increased.

There are those who argue that many parents have not won the respect of children and are not worthy of it. And we can understand that. And a week ago the writer had to push his car and pull up traffic at a crossing while a young lad of four or five, or thereabouts, got his drinken father away from in front of the car. That man had not done much to deserve the respect of his boy. Parents must be worthy of the respect of children.

In connection with this it is interesting and informative to read what Charles has to say: "Some young people say their parents are not wise, but that, therefore, they cannot respect them; that their lives are selfish, mean, capricious, or even stained by vices of the grosser kind, and, therefore, they cannot honor them; that they possess no attractive qualities, and, therefore, they cannot love them.

"But the answer to all such defaimers of the duty of parents is, shortly, this: 'The faults of parents cannot absolve children from their duty or, in any circumstances, justify their disrespect, any more than the faults of children can absolve parents from their children's claims upon them.

"The obligation of children to honor their parents is not cancelled by misconduct on their part. We are not released from a debt because our creditor has become a drunkard or a profligate. We owe the debt just the same and must discharge it. No more are children released from the obligation of this commandment whatever their parents' character may be.

"If the home is to be saved, and the purity and stability of the nations maintained, parents must be worthy of their children and children must show due honor and respect to those who give them birth.

The New Testament passage set for this week's study amplifies and underlines the christian importance of this commandment.

Question and Answer Column

Readers may direct their questions, giving their name and address and mentioning the name of this information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, 490 Sussex St., Ottawa, Ontario.

Q. A short while ago my husband lost all five ration books for the family. Trouble working on the farm. When he went to our nearest Ration Board to apply for new books they told him that when he got new books they would not contain the last of the five extra sugar coupons for canning. So this summer, however, the regulations would not permit him to receive these extra canning sugar coupons.

A. As you did not mention the exact date your husband lost the books it would be impossible for us to give a correct answer. However, if the ration books were lost prior to July 4, (the date which the last five canning sugar coupons became valid), he would be entitled to receive these extra coupons again. If the books were lost after July 4, however, the regulations would not permit him to receive these extra canning sugar coupons.

Q. My landlord has given me notice to vacate the first of September. The house has not been sold which is the reason he gives is the fact that he wants to do some repair work and redecorate and will not do this while a tenant is in the house. Can he force us to vacate?

A. No, he cannot give you notice to vacate! If your rent is paid regularly and you are a good tenant, you are protected by the "freezing" order, and while this order remains in effect you cannot be given notice on these grounds. If you have further trouble we suggest you call at the office of the Rentals Administration and give them all the details of the situation.

Q. Are dairies allowed to charge 7 cents for a pint of milk? I read that only quarts were increased in price.

A. When the subsidy of two cents a quart on all fluid milk was suspended dairies were allowed to increase their prices for all milk. If you are buying ordinary milk the ceiling price is 7 cents a pint, and, if it is special milk, 8 cents a pint.

Q. Our church group is planning a summer festival. Would we be allowed to raffle a ham, butter and home-made preserves? The members will donate these.

A. Churches and charitable institutions are allowed to sell or raffle small quantities of rationed foods. However, before making your definite arrangements you must submit particulars and obtain permission from your Local Ration Board.

Q. I have always paid 8 cents per loaf for bread. However, on July 1 the bakery near us, who delivers the bread, raised their price to 9 cents. Are they allowed to do this?

A. The proper price this bakery is allowed to charge is the price they charged during the basic period, Sept. 11 to Oct. 15, 1941. By your letter it appears the bakery charged 8 cents in the basic period and have raised their price illegally. On the other hand, they might have received permission to increase their price. As this is doubtful, I have passed your letter along to our Investigation Branch for checking.

ERNESTTOWN W. I.

The June meeting of the Ernesttown Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Harold Kilgannon.

The President, Mrs. George Miller, was in the chair. In the absence of the Secretary, Mrs. W. Kellar, Mrs. Edgar Thompson recorded the meeting.

Deep regret was expressed at the death of a past dear member, Mrs. Winslow Thompson.

Mrs. James Haggerty, the District President, is to have address on "Publicity", and proved that far from being dry it was a very interesting subject. She pointed out that the Institute can be publicised every day among members of friends, also that members can learn very much from each other and from other branches, nationally and internationally. Mrs. Haggerty mentioned that Trinidad and Malta hoped to start the Women's Institute in their countries. The $1000th branch in England has just been inaugurated. Mrs. Haggerty spoke of the benefits of exchanging programs with other branches, and that programs should be circulated at every opportunity, also of exchanging correspondence with the Department.

Mrs. Everton Thompson spoke on the roll call, "Little Things that make Life Beautiful", emphasizing the pleasure derived from intercourse with friends; how even a friendly telephone call can dispel a gloomy mood.

Miss H. Vanalstine, of Napanee, won the prize in a contest, with which the program closed.

Warm thanks were given to Mrs. H. Kilgannon for a pleasant afternoon.

WEDDING BELLS

KNIGHT—TOPPINGS

A wedding of widespread interest to Deseronto citizens took place in a double ring ceremony at St. Mark's Anglican Church, Deseronto, on Saturday, July 27th, at 12:00 o'clock noon, when Ruth Iona, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Franklin Toppings, was united in marriage to George William Knight, second eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles John Knight. The officiating clergyman was Canon W. E. G. Reid, rector.

The bride entered the church to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, on the arm of her father, and looked very charming in a floor - length gown of white flowered marquisette, over satin underskirt, with a fitted bodice, shirred waist, sweetheart neckline, long puff sleeves and a full flowing skirt. She wore elbow gloves trimmed with white lace. Her floor-length veil of white tulle was caught by a coronet of white flowers and fell entrain. Her only ornament was a single strand of pearls, a gift of the groom. She carried a bouquet of red roses tied with a large white satin bow.

She was attended by Miss Lawrence Cole, as maid of honour, who wore a lovely gown of pale blue net over satin, with short sleeves and long blue gloves to match her gown. Her matching finger-tip veil was held in place by a small half-crown of white hat and flowers. She carried a nosegay of mixed flowers with pink streamers.

Miss Florence Knight, sister of the groom, was attired in a becoming gown of deep blue net over satin, with puff sleeves and long blue gloves. Her finger-tip veil was of matching blue net and was held by a halo of blue flowers. Her nosegay was also of mixed flowers with pink streamers.

The tiny flower girl, Miss Lois Toppings, cousin of the bride, looked sweet in a gown of pink taffeta and a matching poke bonnet. Her nosegay was the same as the attendants, with blue streamers.

The groom was attended by Glenn Toppings, brother of the bride. The ushers were Jack Knight and Charles Knight, brother and brother - in - law of the groom.

Mr. Charles Knight was organist. During the signing of the register, Miss Elsie Knight sang "I Promise Me".

The groom's gifts to the best man and to the ushers were leather wallets; to the bridesmaid and maid-of-honour, ear-rings, and to the flower girl a cape.

A reception followed at the home of the bride. Receiving the guests were the bride's mother, wearing a navy blue dress with blue and white accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses, and Mrs. Knight mother of the groom, in a navy blue and white black dress with black accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses. The room was decorated with pink and white streamers and summer flowers. The bride's table was covered with a white linen table cloth and was centred with a three-tier wedding cake surrounded on each side by tall pink tapers in silver holders. The toast to the bride was proposed by Canon C. E. S. Ratcliffe, rector of St. Mark's Anglican Church, with the groom responding. Assisting in serving were Mrs. Bessie Young, the Misses Lois Cole and Jaqueline Beatty.

The Late Mrs. James McMurrin

Mrs. James McMurrin, one of the oldest residents of Napanee, passed away at her home on Thomas Street on Friday morning in her 89th year. Mrs. McMurrin had been a semi-invalid for the past five years, following a fall down stairs, but had been confined to her bed for only a few days prior to her death.

Mrs McMurrin, who was formerly Mary Jane Lapointe, was born at Adolphustown. As a young girl she went with her parents to Petrolia, where she lived until her marriage, after which she returned with her husband to Cooper, in Adolphustown. About 35 years ago Mr. and Mrs. McMurrin retired from active farming and came to Napanee to live.

Mrs. McMurrin for many years was one of the most faithful members of St. Andrew's Church, where she took an active part in the Women's organizations and a valued member of the choir. During her late years she attended Trinity United Church.

She was predeceased over fifteen years ago by her husband, and was also the last survivor of her own family.

Her funeral was conducted at her late residence on Friday evening by her former pastor, Rev. Dr. A. J. Wilson, of Toronto and by Rev. N. Hatton, minister of Trinity United Church. Her body was taken to Petrolia for interment on Saturday.

MECHANICAL PERFECTION OF THE HYPODERMIC NEEDLE

Since the widespread use of blood transfusion many more people have become familiar with hypodermic needles.

John Landgon-Davies described in "Science Notebook" the development of these needles during the war. "The hypodermic needle," he said, "is a little tube, absolutely uniform in bore and without any roughness on its inner surface. Just before the war a British tube firm decided that the perfect hypodermic needle ing could never be made if heat had to be used in its manufacture. Up till then all the needle tubing had been heat-worked with the result that there was always a danger of scale, of the tube being too brittle or too easily bent. This meant that the surgeon could not all-speak trust his tools and, in a delicate matter like an injection, that was bound to be bad for the patient.

"A special steel alloy was evolved and this steel was drawn into delicate tubes of perfect accuracy without heat. The hollow needle began as a piece of a solid rod and after this has been pierced it is drawn through a die and drawn into a perfectly accurate tiny tube.

"During the war great advances in micro-tube making have come about. I have seen a tube of the same diameter as a match that is if a match were round. perfectly even throughout its length and side this tube are six other tubes all of them accurate to one minute tolerance and without the slightest roughness or unevenness visible through a powerful magnifying glass. Such a compound tube, needed for breathing up gases in certain delicate operations requires the same sort of skill as a fine watch or a microscope objective. One British firm alone produces more than four thousand shapes and sizes of tubes, seamless and perfectly even, for various technical purposes."

SPACE TRAVEL PREDICTED WITHIN 30 YEARS

Army Air Force guided missile experts said they expect to be able to shoot a rocket to the moon within 18 months.

Inter-planetary travel they said, is probable within 30 years.

Maj. P. C. Calhoun, head of the A.A.F. guided missile branch, said he expected to travel to the moon and back "within my lifetime."

He said the Army did not plan to send a rocket to the moon until it could be equipped with automatic devices to send radar signals back to earth giving information about conditions there.

Calhoun said the AAF was concentrating on the development of guided missiles to protect the United States from attack. But he reasoned that the air forces would be better equipped than any other agency to prepare for travel in inter-planetary space.

IMAGINATION ONLY LIMIT

"Science will admit now that man has no limit except his imagination," Calhoun said. "This means that it may take some time but if man can think of it, he can achieve it."

Calhoun said it was hard to convince the public that it was on the verge of inter-planetary exploration for the same reason that men scoffed at Fulton's steamboat and "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Sea," Jules Verne's prediction of the submarine.

"Man is approaching a new frontier of exploration and knowledge," Calhoun said. "He is about to explore the universe. He will see things and perhaps peoples beyond powers of imagination."

He said the immediate problem was to produce the best guided missiles possible in order to protect the nation. This requires explorations above the earth to test materials and discover conditions in this region.

"We may harness cosmic rays for propulsion of space ships," Calhoun said. "Inter-planetary travel is not as immense a problem as it may appear to the uninitiated.

FANTASTIC SPEED POSSIBLE

"There is little resistance to a moving body outside the earth's atmosphere and speeds of thousands of miles per hour with small amounts of power are possible in the partial vacuum of outer space."

He said the only limits to travel outside the earth's atmosphere were the amount of fuel need to propel the space ship. Within five years the AAF expects to have a rocket that will carry men outside the earth's atmosphere and return safely.

Calhoun said the plan is to guide these rockets by remote control to their objectives. They would carry Instruments, including television to send back information. Human exploration would follow.

He said a great many questions — including mysteries about the origin of life itself — may be answered by this inter-planetary exploration.

Radar to Aid Search For Oil on Sea Bottom

Petroleum scientists, equipped with a diving chamber and using radar to plot their positions, soon will launch a search for oil in the rock and sand beneath the surface of 2,000 square miles of water in the northwestern Bahamas.

The exploration will be conducted by the Standard Oil Company (Bahamas) Limited, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil company (New Jersey) in the Shallow water north of Grand Bahama Island, East of West Palm Beach, Florida, and separated from the mainland by the relatively deep water of the Florid straits, the site is in a section of the Atlantic Ocean where the water in most places is less than 20 feet deep.

The engineers will sink the diving chamber at various points in the area to map the ocean floor. The diving chamber will house an operator, and a gyro meter, an instrument that measures the pull of gravity, furnishes indications of the type of rock beneath the ocean bed and indirectly provides information as to the presence of oil. If geophysical reports are favorable, over-water rigs will be erected for drilling tests.

On the surface the use of radar will permit the geophysicists to plot the site of all tests with improved accuracy. Radar targets 50 feet high will be set up at strategic points in the exploration area. These targets, picked up on the radar screen aboard the equipment boat, will enable the navigator to determine his position.

The diving chamber to be used is cylindrical in shape, six feet high and weighs about two tons. It is equipped with various safety devices, including a safety hatch and a compressed air blower which can be used to free the chamber if it becomes mired in the mud. The operator in the chamber is in constant telephone communication with the associates aboard ship.

The Stanba recently arrived at Nassau with its cargo of instruments and soon will shove off for the first six weeks of mapping.

During the tests, the ship's party of 20 men will remain on the water for six weeks and then return to the nearby camp at West End Island in the Bahamas for rest.

FOTO-NITE OFFER ACCEPTED

The audience at the Radar Theatre, Deseronto, last Thursday (Foto-Nite) became very excited when the manager announced that the person to would offer $135.00, for their photograph, was present. The person called was Mr. James Brant, of Deseronto (Rural). Mr. Brant had accepted an offer of $115.00 last week. This last week's offer will give him a total of $250.00 received from the theatre. He will receive $135.00 this week when he presents his photograph to the theatre. The offer this week is $100.00. 32a

JAPS FINANCED CHINA RULE WITH DRUGS

Japanese militarists depended upon revenue from narcotic traffic which they sponsored and protected from office their puppet government in China, according to testimony before the International War Tribunal.

Dr. Miner S. Bates, Ohio-born professor of history at the University of Nanking, said this situation was explored by a spokesman for the foreign Office when he visited Tokyo in 1939.

The spokesman said he was "terribly distressed by the extent of the use of drugs in China," Bates testified. Japanese generals said there was no hope for improvement in the situation, the spokesman continued, "because no other source of revenue for the temporary government had been found."

Peter J. Lawless, a police official in the British service at Tientsin and Peiping, also told the court that the Japanese fostered the use of drugs, supplied opium, and depended upon the revenue from the sales of drugs to finance their puppet regimes.

OBJECTION OVERRULED

When the defence for the 27 wartime Japanese leaders being tried on war crimes charges objected, the tribunal president, Sir William Webb overruled their objection.

Dr. Bates testified that his investigations in November, 1939, showed that 6,000 ounces of opium were being sold daily in Nanking, compared with a negligible traffic before the entry of the Japanese. Sales of heroin, he added, totalled $3,000,000 monthly.

"The Japanese special service and the Japanese gendarmerie shared the profits," continued Dr. Bates. "There was no real effort at suppression, only attempts to force irregular buyers into channels which would produce revenue."

SLEEK AND ASSURED

The shabby scowling men who filed into court less than two months ago as Japan's major war criminal defendants have become sleek and assured while the bloody evidence mounts against them.

From former Premier Hideki Tojo, whose egg-shaped bald head dominates the prisoner's dock, to Marquis Koichi Kido, so small he barely can see over the rail before him, the prisoners have donned fresh manners and fresh clothes.

They began their fight for life on June 3 with hand faces twisted into scowls, long practised by the Japanese as a mask of defiance. They wore patched, makeshift, clothing which hung from gaunt frames.

Today they have added weight and assurance, civilian suits mingling with plain uniforms, are clean and pressed. Beards and flowing mustaches have been trimmed.

JOIN IN LAUGHTER

Their scowls and stubborn silence have faded. They chat with counsel scribble notes and join in the laughter that sometimes ripples through the courtroom.

It seems almost as if they were spectators at an increasingly interesting drama instead of prisoners facing possible death. Newcomers often confuse the prisoners with the Japanese lawyers who sit in front of them and look more worried.

The source of the prisoners' new assurance is hard to pin down. Food could be a primary cause. There may be a feeling that some will escape severe punishment. Or they may have resigned themselves into accepting any fate.

But with all their change, these men show no signs that they will duplicate the thunderings of Hermann Goering. They may fight but it will be slyly — as they tried to wage their wars.

COLD COMFORT

After two years' intensive research, doctors in America have announced the following remarkable discoveries about the common cold:

Women catch them more easily than men.

Between the ages of 20 and 29 is the most vulnerable period.

Over 50 is the safest period.

More colds start on Monday than any other day. One thing about colds the doctors failed to discover — how to cure them!

What is a budget?
Well, it is a method of worrying before you spend, instead of afterward.

OBITUARY

EDMUND WILLIAM WALLACE LOCHHEAD

On Saturday, July 20th, one of the best known and highly respected residents of Lennox and Addington, E. W. Lochhead, eldest son of the late Robert Lochhead and his wife Hannah Hartin passed peacefully away at his late residence In Newburgh, following months of indisposition which was born with Christian fortitude.

The deceased who had been a lifelong resident of the County was deeply interested in public affairs, having been road overseer of Camden Township for a number of years and also served most acceptably as a Director of the Addington Agricultural Society, a member of the Newburgh School Board and an esteemed Elder of Newburgh United Church. He was also a Member of the Masonic Fraternity and the Orange Order.

With an unusual capacity for friendship he was known far and wide as a staunch friend and neighbor ,ever willing to extend a helping hand and generous hospitality. In the home circle he was a most devoted husband and father.

While still a young man he was bereft of his first wife, Susannah Doupe and a few years later married Letitia McGill, only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wesley McGill, of Centreville, whose unceasing devotion was a great source of comfort during his declining years.

During the World Conflict his deepest interest centred in the activities of the Overseas Troops and sons Cpl. Glenn Lochhead and Flying Officer Howard Lochhead and stepson, Gnr. Bert McGill, also seven grandsons served their King and Country, all of whom returned to the family circle, except W.O. Jack McGill, son of Mrs. R. A. McGill and the late Major McGill of Newburgh.

In Loving Memory

In Loving Memory of my only sister, Pearle Hartwick, who passed away one year ago, August 10, 1945.
In my heart your memory lingers,
Sweetly, tender, fond and true,
There is not a day dear sister
That I do not think of you.
And every day dear Pearlie
Looking at your picture on the wall,
I go and play in silence
Because you're not here any more.
Ever remembered and sadly missed
by sister Margaret and cousins
Bobby, Billie, Lois and Barby.
32 ap

In Loving Memory of my dear niece Agatha Pearl Hartwick, who passed away one year ago August 10, 1945.
I watched you suffer day by day
And could not help in any way,
But just stood by and saw you pass
Into the Saviour's arms at last.
Sleep on dear Niece for it is true,
You suffered much and told but few
The one who saw you needed rest.
Was God alone, He knew best.
Ever remembered by Uncle Henry.
32 ap

In Loving Memory of our darling daughter, Pearlie Hartwick, who passed away one year ago, August 10, 1945, at the age of 13 years.
Although we're sad and lonely
Without our beautiful flower,
I know the Lord our Master
Will say in some past hour
Come to my beautiful garden
And see Pearl in beautiful bloom.
The daughter you loved so truly
And thought I'd taken so soon.
Then we shall know his reason
Though we know it not today,
While in the prime of life
He took our daughter away.
Ever remembered and sadly missed
by Mother and Dad.

In Loving Memory of Agatha Pearl Hartwick, who passed away on August 10, 1945.

Just one year ago you left us,
And we miss your sunny smile,
But you are with God in Heaven,
Up where the angels are.
Ever remembered by Grandmother, Mrs. M. E. Hartwick. 32a

In Loving Memory of my darling granddaughter, Pearl Hartwick, who passed away August 10, 1945.

With tears I watched you sinking,
I watched you pass away,
I tended you with loving care
But could not make you stay.
I knew that you were suffering,
That the hills were hard to climb,
So He used your weary eyelids
And whispered "Pearlie peace be thine
Ever remembered by grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Storms. 32ap

In Loving Memory of my niece, Pearl Hartwick, who passed away Aug. 10, 1945.

At night the silent stars look down
On a grave not so far away from you
Where sleeps the one we can't forget,
The one we love so dear.
Thy dearest niece this world could hold.
The cheerlest smile and a heart of gold;
For those who knew her, all will know
How much we lost one year ago.
Ever remembered by her Aunt Edith. 32ap

In Loving Memory of our dear niece, Pearl Hartwick, who passed away August 10, 1945, age 13 years.

We will never forget her, we loved her too dearly,
For her memory to face from our lives like a dream sincerely,
Our lips need not speak when our hearts mourn sincerely.
Ever remembered and missed by Aunt Lillian And Uncle Stewart, cousins Barbara, Lois and Billy Storms. 32ap

In Loving Memory of a dear mother and grandmother, Mrs. Andrew Clare Snider, who passed away on August 4th, 1944.

The depths of sorrow we cannot tell,
Of the loss of one we loved so well,
And while she sleeps the peaceful sleep,
Her memory we shall always keep.
Ever remembered by James, Florence and Family. 32ap

The funeral service which was held from his late residence Monday afternoon to the United Church was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Merrick of Selby, in the absence of his pastor, Rev. Mr. Herrington, who chose as his text, the 7th verse of the 4th Chapter of II. OBITUARY

EDMUND WILLIAM WALLACE LOCHHEAD

On Saturday, July 20th, one of the best known and highly respected residents of Lennox and Addington, E. W. Lochhead, eldest son of the late Robert Lochhead and his wife Hannah Hartin passed peacefully away at his late residence in Newburgh, following months of indisposition which was born with Christian fortitude.

The deceased who had been a lifelong resident of the County was deeply interested in public affairs, having been road overseer of Camden Township for a number of years and also served most acceptably as a Director of the Addington Agricultural Society, a member of the Newburgh School Board and an esteemed Elder of Newburgh United Church. He was also a Member of the Masonic Fraternity and the Orange Order.

With an unusual capacity for friendship he was known far and wide as a staunch friend and neighbor ever willing to extend a helping hand and generous hospitality. In the home circle he was a most devoted husband and father.

While still a young man he was bereft of his first wife, Susannah Doupe and a few years later married Letitia McGill, only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wesley McGill, of Centreville, whose unceasing devotion was a great source of comfort during his declining years.

During the World Conflict his deepest interest centred in the activities of the Overseas Troops and sons, Cpl. Glenn Lochhead and Flying Officer Howard Lochhead and stepson, Gnr. Bert McGill, also seven grandsons served their King and Country, all of whom returned to the family circle, except W.O. Jack McGill, son of Mrs. R. A. McGill and the late Major McGill of Newburgh.

In Loving Memory

In Loving Memory of my only sister, Pearlie Hartwick, who passed away one year ago, August 10, 1945.

In my heart your memory lingers,
Sweetly, tender, fond and true,
There is not a day dear sister
That I do not think of you.
And every day dear Pearlie
Looking at your picture on the wall,
I go and play in silence
Because you're not here any more.
Ever remembered and sadly missed
by sister Margaret and cousins
Bobby, Billie, Lois and Barby.

In Loving Memory of my dear niece Agatha Pearl Hartwick, who passed away one year ago August 10, 1945.

I watched you suffer day by day
And could not help in any way,
But just stood by and saw you pass
Into the Saviour's arms at last.
Sleep on dear Niece for it is true,
You suffered much and told but few
But one who saw you needed rest.
Was God alone, He knew best.
Ever remembered by Uncle Henry.

Although we're sad and lonely
Without our beautiful flower,
I know the Lord our Master
Will say to us some sad, new hour
Come to my beautiful garden
And see Pearl in beautiful bloom.
The daughter you loved so truly
And thought I'd taken so soon.
Then we shall know his reason
Though we know it not today.
While in the prime of life
He took our daughter away.
Ever remembered and sadly missed
by Mother and Dad.

CATARMAN

London.—A new type power canoe light alley construction is in production by a United Kingdom firm. The canoe was originally designed for use by the army in tropical conditions and can be used in all types of heavy weather.

Built on the catarmaran style, it has a hull of three watertight compartments. The stern houses the power unit which is an air cooled twin-cylinder gas engine. Speed of the canoe is nine m.p.h. with a range of approximately 22 miles to the gallon.

Inventive Genius To Whom Survivors Of Sea Owe Their Escape

Three of the major life-saving devices invented during the nineteenth century were the work of Cornishmen, reports Claude Berry in The Listener. The miner's safety lamp was one of the products of the genius of Sir Humphrey Davy, of Ludgvan, near Penzance. The safety fuse, which put an end to the heavy loss of life during blasting, was the invention of William Bickford. The third Cornish contribution to life-saving was the rocket life - saving apparatus, which is used when ships are driven ashore and it is impossible to rescue their crews and passengers by lifeboat. Between 1870 and 1920, some ten thousand lives were saved by its means. Its inventor, Henry Trengrouse, of Helston, was born in 1772, a member of a family who had long been pioneers in the ancient borough of Helston.

In 1807, when he was thirty-five and had a family growing up around him, he was one of a big crowd who gathered one stormy day at Lee Bar. The crowd were active but impotent spectators of the wreck on the "long sands" of H.M. frigate "Anson." You will remember that England was at war with Napoleon; and the "Anson" had been driven by a tremendous gale from her station off the French coast. At last she found herself inside The Lizard, and on a lee shore. The weather was thick, and the commander decided to drop anchor and ride out the storm. But before long the cable parted. Soon afterwards a second anchor was lost and the commander made up his mind to run the ship ashore at the least dangerous spot he could find. He chose the Lee Bar. Unhappily, instead of deciding to wait for the tide to go back, scores of the "Anson's" crew jumped for it. "Many of them were immediately swallowed up," Trengrouse wrote later. "Others were carried with violence round the ship, disappeared, and were no doubt presently dashed to pieces." On Lee Bar that day over a hundred lives were lost.

The horror of that scene never wholly left Trengrouse. Thenceforward his life was dominated by one great desire: to find the means of rescuing the crews of ships driven ashore as the "Anson" has been. To achieve this end he sacrificed much of his little fortune of three or four thousand pounds; and what little money he gave freely his time, health, and comfort. He began his experiments not with a lifeline but with a lifeboat—but was dissatisfied with the results. So he turned his attention to another way of effecting rescue. Two other people had been in the field before him. In 1791 Lieutenant John Bell had devised an apparatus of a kind for throwing lines to ships. More recently and notably, a certain George William Manby had produced a mortar life-saving apparatus. Put Trengrouse seems to have worked away at the problem in complete independence of the work of Bell and Manby. His experiments had begun with a life-line attached to a piece of lead about half-a-pound in weight. The lead and line had to be hand-thrown, which meant that the range was too limited. So Trengrouse began trying out a life-line borne along by a kite. Then he thought of the musket as a means of projecting the line, and it was while experimenting with the musket that he got the idea of the rocket.

There is a story that the idea came to him while he was watching a fireworks display; and it may well be true. Anyhow, by the end of the year following the loss of the "Anson" Trengrouse had designed his apparatus. A section of a cylinder was fitted to the muzzle of a musket by the bayonet socket; and a rocket with a line attached to its stick was so placed in it that its priming received a fire immediately from the barrel. At Porthleven, in 1816, he demonstrated how two hundred yards of line could be thrown by rocket. From 1808 onwards Trengrouse made several journeys to London to persuade the authorities to adopt his apparatus, and in driving-rain 1818 the inventor demonstrated it in Hyde Park before an Admiralty Committee of which Admiral Sir Charles Rowley was chairman. The Committee suggested that the apparatus should be placed in seven dockyards. But the naval officers might become familiar with its working.

In the same year, a Committee of Elder Brethren of Trinity House reported in favour of the apparatus—but that no vessel should be without it. But even at the time of his death in 1854, Trengrouse's apparatus was not in general use. But he never wavered, and never lost faith. It has been said that on his deathbed he assured his son that during his lifetime the rocket life-saving apparatus would be found at selected spots all round our coasts. And so, most mercifully, it has been.

CHANGES IN PHOTOGRAPHY

Now that the war is over, we shall see some wonderful changes in photography.

Not the least of these will be the new films, so fast and sensitive that it will be possible to take Daily-exposed snapshots with the cheapest cameras even in dull weather. Films and plates can be made today a thousand times faster than they were in the days before the two great wars. This has been done by using expressively small quantities of newly-discovered "sensitizers" which are added to the material with which films are coated.

Improved Images

Another invention for speeding-up the camera is the coating of the lens with a transparent medium which prevents reflection. When light falls upon a glass surface, not all of it passes through the glass, but a great deal is deflected back and lost. This loss is overcome by the coated lenses, which are not only made twice as fast but give immensely improved images.

A novelty which will probably be common is that found in modern cameras is an electric shutter which operates by itself. A photo-cell, or electric eye, fitted in the camera measures the strength of the light, opens or closes the iris of the lens and times the exposure. All the figures are automatically correctly exposed.

All modern lenses are made of combinations of two kinds of glass —crown and flint; but to-day plastic materials can be made of synthetic resin which have the same refractive power as the glasses. Lenses which bend rays of all colors so as to come to the same focus—known as achromatic — have thus been made by combining two kinds of plastic lens and this possibility may make it possible for inexpensive cameras to give finer performance.

A strange discovery is that of speeding-up photography three or four times by placing the film after it has been exposed in the camera between two plates of glass under an excessively feeble light for about an hour. The effect of this does not apparently hurt the film image, but it enables the speed of the film in its original exposure to be increased by as much as four times.

Thus, with more transparent lenses faster films, and the new discovery of light treatment after exposure, the photography of the future will be incredibly fast, and all kinds of new work will become possible. Photographs can be taken in foggy weather with infra-red films, and with the added enormous speed pictures can be taken at very high altitudes from aeroplanes with telescopic lenses.

CANADA'S GREEDIEST ANIMAL NEVER DRINKS

Of all the creatures detested by the Canadian farmer, the worst-by far is a tiny creature—the gopher — who looks like a squirrel of Bambi's tail. What is more, he is a spunky little chap who is not afraid to attack man or beast if necessary.

My first acquaintance with this creature was unpleasant. I was riding a high-bay mare who was feeling far too fresh; she fought me for a while, then turned her into a trot, which so annoyed her that she did not heed where she was going. She put her foot into a big hole and I went flying over her head. She had trodden into a hidden gopher hole.

Gophers are destructive pests. They make burrows just under the surface, some of them stretching in Manitoba design for distances up to a mile, and if they burrow under garden, grain orchard or root crop, they do great damage. In one case to my knowledge they ruined thirty apple trees by eating the roots of the trees, and all this within two weeks.

The gopher loosens the soil with his nose and forepaws on which he has very highly developed claws. The soil is passed under his body and sent flying backward by swift movement of the hind legs. Every now and again, the excavator turns round, collects a load in his forepaws and pushes it, wheelbarrow fashion, along his tunnel. If he thinks the journey is too long, he tunnels to the surface and piles the soil outside. Should he meet a root in the tunnel, face, he will dine on it. And he makes as many as 200 bites in one minute.

Here and there in his tunnels are store-chambers to which he brings treasure-trove. He has external cheek pouches of hair - lined skin into which he pops food for conveyance. He can store enough grass to provide him with a good meal in those two pouches. He is fond of bulbs, especially tiger lily bulbs, and shows common sense when storing them. Instead of leaving them on the floor of the store-room, he covers them with soil to keep them in good condition. Fortunately, the gopher is a strict vegetarian.

I have studied hundreds of gophers but I have never seen one drinking and I am told by those who have kept them in captivity that they never drink. They get all the water they require out of their food.

It has been stated that the animal is nocturnal, that is nonexpert. They are likely to pop their heads above ground at any hour of the day. Nor is it true to say they hibernate; they seem to smell fine weather and will come out on the one day, then only that, but they will remove soil from the burrow and packit it on the surface under the snow.

As one would expect in a burrowing animal the gopher has very limited vision, and his best developed senses are those of touch, smell and taste; but they are unerring, and I know no animal one-half as greedy: his hunger seems to be without end or depth.

Jap Battleship Nagato A-Bomb Victim

THIRD CAPITAL SHIP SINKS IN BIKINN LAGOON

The Japanese battleship Nagato, one of the heaviest armoured ships in the world, went to the bottom of Bikini Lagoon last week, the third capital ship victim of the Baker Day atomic bomb.

A 22,000-ton ship with 15-inch thick laminated steel plates, the Nagato slid to the bottom before dawn today nearly five days after receiving mortal wounds from the most terrible weapon ever conceived.

She was once the pride of the Imperial Japanese Navy. Though 27 years old she had been the fleet flag ship. Minutes after the bomb exploded on July 25 she developed a list and it was apparent she had been dealt a mortal blow.

Although radioactivity was too hot to permit inspection parties aboard, it is believed the incredible force of the shock waves sent out from the burst of 4,000 feet per second pulled her seams and under water hull.

TARGET PROBLEM SOLVED

The complicated problem of holding naval vessels in position in the open sea for the deep-water atom bomb test early in 1947 has been solved, the British United Press learned from an informed naval source.

The target vessels, including battleships, cruisers and lighter craft, will be attached tandem to long cables, it was explained. There will be three of these cables, all parallel with each with one end firmly anchored to one of the small islands at the southwest corner of Bikini Atoll. Probably four target ships will be strung out along each cable under present general thought is to reduce the number used in the first two tests to a total of seven, due to the difficulties of anchorage.

The trade winds unfailingly blow from east to west in these latitudes, and may be depended upon to keep the target vessels strung out away from the inlet reef to which the holding cables will be anchored on the windward coast.

WATER THREE MILES DEEP

The open ocean drops off sharply to great depths in the target area which has been decided upon. The seabottom at this point goes down to three thousand fathoms, over three miles as compared to the depths inside the lagoon where the first and second tests took place and which never exceeded 180 feet.

Depth at which the third and final atomic bomb will be detonated has not been decided upon, but unofficial estimates are that the blast will be set for 4,000 to 5,000 feet below the surface.

"The problem of fusing and detonating the bomb in really deep water is more complex than the target problem of holding the big target vessels in position," the United Press informant said. "It has not yet been solved."

The deep water explosion is expected to deliver the heaviest blow of the entire series of tests, since the water transmits about 75 per cent. experts here call it 'water hammer' with four times the velocity of air.

Natural Rubber Output Near Surplus Point

Natural rubber, lack of which at one time threatened the Allied war effort, is coming back. Plantation growers of Malaya and the Dutch East Indies already are beginning to wonder what they are going to do with the increasing tonnage flowing from their war-rested trees. In a swelling tide of Canadian and American automobiles rattling for millions of tires and other rubber-consuming accessories, they see hope the supply can be used.

British Malaya again is beginning to turn out the once precious latex in an imposing stream. Sumatra, Java and Borneo, once leaders among world rubber producers, presently are thrutlled by political paralysis but so they are managing to contribute appreciably to the supplies flowing from Southeast Asia, Ceylon, a high priced area, is pouring out still more and increasingly worrying about the future prices.

SURPLUS LIKELY

Unless United States consumption which used about 800,000 tons in 1941 out of a world supply of about 1,000,000 tons, gets going again soon a world rubber surplus is assured.

Which brings up the question of what the United States is going to do with its synthetic rubber industry so practically acquired during the war and capable of producing better than 1,000,000 tons yearly.

With trees and synthetic plants working at full pace, the world will have available about 3,000,000 tons of rubber a year and more for about half of it, assuming United States consumption to be at pre-war levels. At present American demand is down, natural production is going up and American synthetic plants are being held in leash, partly by alcohol shortage and partly to avoid flooding the world with unwanted synthetics.

MATTER FOR CONGRESS

Longtime American rubber policy in relation to its synthetic production capacity long has been worrying government chiefs in Washington. Preliminary surveys indicated a desire to retain enough of the synthetic plants to ensure the country against being caught in another rubber crisis such as came out of the last war. It is likely that renewed attention will be given the problem shortly and that Congress will be called upon to write the rubber program for the future.

Nothing would please the rubber men of Malaya more than to see the American rubber users return wholly to natural rubber. Their worries about the future markets would for the great part, disappear.

But such a thing likely to happen The United States is piling heavily for its synthetic plants. They will continue a major factor in rubber markets of the future. Some would place them in a decidedly minor role, while the extreme opposite view is to make the rubber market of the world free of all governmental regulation, let both natural and synthetic sources produce as they will with survival going to the one most able to stand competition. Synthetics enthusiasts claim that under such conditions they would drive the natural product from general use.

WAR ON IT DUST PERIL

London — Scientific devices in the coal mines of South Wales will put a stop to silicosis and pneumoconiosis—that is the belief of Dr. Cecil Fletcher, leader of the Medical Research Council investigating dust diseases among miners. After eight months, medical and social research allied to engineering experiments has convinced him that the danger of the dreaded disease will be eliminated from the next generation. The plan is to be set aside at Llandough hospital for the first experimental treatment of victims of dust diseases.

Dr. Fletcher hopes that his doctors will succeed in finding a cure in the next advance yet—a method of accurate diagnosis of the disability before it is sufficiently advanced to show independently on an X-ray plate, at present the only certain way of proving the complaint. Dr. Fletcher told the News Chronicle: "Engineering experiments now being tried are showing definite progress. Three systems of dust suppression are proving successful. A new experiment nearing completion to attempt not only to cut down the dust on the pit roads but to prevent dust explosion as well. So far it has reduced dust density by ninety per-cent."

HISTORY OF THE ROSE

The rose is probably the oldest flower in cultivation, says R. W. Oliver, Division of Horticulture, Dominion Department of Agriculture, in an introduction to "Outdoor Roses in Canada".

No one can tell when the rose was first introduced into gardens, but in the Bible, in Greek mythology, and in the writings of the early Romans, frequent mention is made of its cultivation.

There is neither description nor pedigree of these old rules, but about 46 B.C. Herodotus wrote of a rose with fifty petals, a fact even by that date the rose had developed considerably from the five-petalled species native to Asia, Europe and America.

In pulp and paper Canada is a great power. Every forest fire caused by carelessness is a crime against Canada and her working men.

Hello Homemakers! Meals should be a challenge to your versatility. Use simple concoctions — cool, fresh, colourful as fiesta, full-flavored from the garden. One look at your attractive arrangements and the temperature drops by degrees. Sparkling glassware and colourful dishes will make every meal tasty and inspiring.

LUNCHEON IDEAS

1. Refreshing Consommé — Soften 1 tbsp. gelatine in quarter cup of cold water and add to 2 cups hot strained soup stock. Pour into a wet square pan. Chill in electric refrigerator. Cut in inch squares. Toss in minced peppercress and serve in chilled bowls.
   Complete the main course with creamed chicken and peas on tea biscuits.
2. A ring of tomato aspic filled with a mixture of crisp vegetables: — scraped raw carrot, thin sliced celery, radishes and plenty of shredded lettuce with salad dressing on the side.
3. Garden Mayonnaise — To half cup of mayonnaise add half cup finely minced parsley or watercress or finely chopped diced cucumber.
4. Consider chilled raw cauliflower pieces and fingers of raw beets dipped in French dressing salad accompaniments.
5. Modest Poached Eggs — Put a sealer ring for each serving in a greased baking dish. Drop an egg in each circle. Pour on a tablespoon of cheese sauce and sprinkle with crumbs. Bake in electric oven of 300 degrees for 10 minutes.
6. Hot Vegetable Plate — Parsley potatoes, harvard beets and wedges of boiled cabbage.
7. Moulded Spaghetti — Use one envelope of gelatine soaked in quarter cup cold water then dissolved in two and one half cups spiced (celery seed) tomato juice and pour into a wet mould. When partially set, stir in 1 cup of left-over tomato-spaghetti.
8. Corn-on-the-Cob — Use a little French dressing on corn boiled exactly 10 minutes. It will be tasty and tender — saves butter.

Baked Whole Tomatoes— Scoop out the centres and fill with seasoned fine crumbs, grated cheese and pieces of tomato. Bake 20 minutes at 350 degrees.

10. Quick Frozen Applesauce — Add a little mint to applesauce. Serve it half frozen and you'll have a natural apple sherbet.
11. Party Busque — Dissolve 1 pkg. lemon flavored gelatine in one and a quarter cups of hot water; add third cup of honey, one eighth tsp. salt, 3 tbsps. lemon juice and 1 tsp. lemon rind. Mix and chill until partially set. Beat fluffy. Whip 1 cup of cold cream and fold into jelly. Spread 1 cup graham wafer crumbs in bottom of a freezing tray; fill with gelatine mix, sprinkle with 1 cup of crumbs. Freeze firm in electric refrigerator.

* * *

1. Put leftovers in the smallest container they will fit. The food will not mould or sour as quickly as in a spacious jar.
2. If you require only two or three ice cubes run water over one end of the freezing tray — lift or shake out these cubes; fill the end with water and re-freeze.
3. When you open a can of syrup or any jar with a screw top from which you will use the contents at intervals, rub a little cooking fat around the screw thread. The lid will open easily again.
4. Rub grass stains with a bit of cooking fat, then scrub in hot soap suds. If traces remain, bleach with peroxide or lemon juice.
5. After each 'eggy' meal — and don't we seem to have a lot of them in these days of meat shortages, drop the silverware into an aluminum pan filled with boiling water into which you have stirred a spoonful of salt and baking soda.
6. Never bend to any job if you can stand up straight to do it. You use so much energy — 43 per cent. in fact. And by the same token, never take it standing if you can sit.

Effort Being Made To Rebuild Suspension Bridge

South Napanee People Collecting Funds To Defray Expenses

Plans are being made by a group of citizens of South Napanee to rebuild the suspension bridge over the Napanee River near the falls. The bridge has been in a bad state of repair for the past several years and practically no effort has been made to keep it in a safe condition for the use of pedestrians.

A committee headed by Elias Marcin, Archie Thompson and Mart. Switzer, has been making a canvass for funds from people who live on both sides of the river, and are meeting with some success. It is planned at present to go ahead with the work of repairing the bridge in the hope that sufficient money will be raised to defray the expense.

Examination has revealed that the cables and iron parts are in good condition, but the wood work will need to be entirely replaced. The old planks used in the bridge are to be taken up and will be used to replace the walk and steps on the North Fredericksburgh side of the river, which have almost entirely disappeared. The brush and trees on the banks have been trimmed to make way for the new steps and walk.

The suspension bridge has been used for over sixty years. Previous to that time a floating bridge was in existence at the same locality. The suspension bridge was built by Sir Richard Cartwright who owned the land on both sides of the river which at once been sold to various people. Present ownership is rather vague, neither the Town of Napanee or the Township of North Fredericksburgh will assume responsibility for it, but have in the past few years the town has closed the bridge on the north side and placed signs at its entrance warning pedestrians against using it.

A few years ago the late Mr. Jack MacPherson appealed to the Town Council to take over the bridge and repair it, but because of the lack of any definite proof of ownership the town would not assume the responsibility. The bridge was used extensively by employees of the Gzard Furniture Shops, many of whom lived on the south side of the river.

If it is properly repaired it will be a great convenience to people on both sides of the river, and merchants in the town should benefit as a result.

The above named committee, Elias Martin, Archie Thompson and Mart. Switzer, will be pleased to receive any cash contributions which the citizens of the town wish to make towards the project.

Early Morning Call For Firemen

About 4:00 a.m., on Tuesday of this week the firemen were called to the residence of David Roffey, Piety Hill and extinguished a fire which was burning a fence post. The blaze was noticed by Gerald Plumley who was passing in his truck. The previous day some grass was being burned and apparently the fire had continued to smoulder in the dry grass and extended to the post. The application of a few pails of water put out the blaze.

Man Lassoes Husky Muskie

August, 1946. Civic Holiday, will long be remembered by John Maybee, son of Dr. J. C. Maybee, of Kingston, for it was then that he caught a 51-inch, 35-lb. muskinenge with a slip-knot loop on a rope.

While rigging his dinghy at the Kingston Yacht Club for a sail to Mosquito Bay, he noticed a large muskie basking near the boat. He struck it with a paddle and it disappeared. It made two appearances later and on its last appearance seemingly gave the doctor and his son John the "raspberry." John then used a rope and lassoed the fish.

BALL PARK PROVES BUSY PLACE FOR YOUNGSTERS

The Lions Club operated Gibbard Park is one of the busiest spots in the town, both in the afternoons and evenings throughout the week.

Approximately sixty lads, nineteen and under, have just completed the Junior schedule and the final round of this series is under way between Rotary and Lions. Splendid ball is being played and although the attendance of fans is not what it should be, the youngsters are kept busy.

In the afternoons a flock of Bantams utilize the grounds and the equipment, with the caretaker assisting them in their effort to better their game. Exhibition tilts have been played with outside teams and the locals more than hold their own. In the Girls' League, which consists of, four teams, most of the league game were played on the High School grounds, but the play-offs are being played at the Park.

The Intermediates, another group under the direction of Joe Killorin, Ken. Murphy and Ozzi Curry, have a team entered in the Belleville and District loop and play six of their league games here. This team is also entered in the Intermediate O.B.A. play-offs.

Another entry in the O.B.A. is the Lions Club Juvenile team. This team is the pick c' the lads in the district and town and their first game is with Gananoque on Saturday of this week, with a 'return' game here the following week.

The local men's softball also have an entry in the O.A.S.A. and their first game is with Tweed here, on Friday, August 16th, with the return game at Tweed on the 20th.

The newest product of Britain's aircraft construction, the Cierva W-9 Helicopter was recently given its first public dmonstration at an air-pageant in Southampton. This helicopter which is driven by a single rotor, takes off and lands vertically, and moves sideways and backwards as easily as it moves forwards. The crowd admired the new aircraft's performance while experts saw clearly that this aircraft opened up entirely new possibilities.

New Ration Books Will Be Issued Early in September

Sams System For Distribution To Be Employed

CONSUMERS! Don't forget to get your next ration book. It will be given out through various distribution centres across Canada in the week, September 9th to 16th.

Residents of Ottawa and district are reminded to watch their local papers as to the date and hours the distribution centres will be open in their locality. This is important because persons not picking up book No. 6 while distribution centres are open will be without the valid coupons for butter, meat, sugar in the new book until after September 29, when distribution will start again. During distribution of Ration Book No. 5 in October, 1944, over 16,000 consumers in the Ottawa-Brockville area failed to pick up their books on time.

Process of getting No. 6 Book is simple. The application card in the back of book 5 must be completed and with the present book handed in to the distribution centre when application is made.

Distribution centres have been incorporated in the new book. It will have a yellow cover and is slightly smaller. Coupon identification is made easier by the letters S for sugar and M for meat and B for butter, printed on the respective coupons. As a guard against possible counterfeiting, special markings have been added to coupons and the coupon design has been made smaller.

Napanee's Entry In Kingston Parade Much Admired

Float Depicts Name Origin of the Town

At the request of the Committee in charge of the parade held in the City of Kingston last Wednesday evening in connection with the Centenary Celebration of the Incorporation of the city, the Town of Napanee entered a float which won for the town the commendation of the City authorities and the thousands of people who witnessed the parade.

The Committee of the Town Council, W. J. Ramsay, Arnold Rogers and Harold Moore, who were delegated to make arrangements for the float enlisted the services of Mr. Goldwin Smith, who conceived the idea of incorporating the origin of the name of the town in the construction of the float.

It was recalled that Napanee takes its name from Appanee, the Indian word for the falls before the white man took up any land in the vicinity. The name has also been said to have been derived from the Indian word for flour mill, and it was around the latter idea that the structure on the float was built.

The first log flour mill was built at Napanee on the South side of the river in 1786 at the foot of the falls. To it settlers of the district from many miles around came on horseback with a bag of grain to be ground into flour. Indians were also patrons of the mill.

On the float, entered in the parade, a miniature mill was built by Mr. Harry Frelick, the work of which was kept turning during the parade by Fred Babcock. Others who assisted in making the float and decorating it were Leo. Bedore, Lorne Wartman, Reg. Staples and Ward Wartiman.

The truck was loaned by the Kimmerly Lumber Co., and an extension was built on it by Douglas, Bruce and Wesley Allcock.

In addition to the mill, evergreen trees were used to decorate it and artificial grass made the entire surface of the platform. At the rear of the truck was an old birch bark canoe in which were seated and around which were grouped Indian Maidens, and Brenda Mae Pigeon, Sylvia Dale, Mary Margaret Douglas, Sally Howitt, Bruce Caldwell and Judy Hart.

Harry Vine was dressed to represent an Indian presenting a sheaf of grain to the miller, Mayor George Chalk, to be ground into flour.

Mrs. Mark Bowerman made valuable assistance by helping to supply Indian costumes, and Miss Barbara Caldwell arranged for the girls. There are members of the Guides, to act as Indian Maidens.

Mr. Maurice Tierney used his car to drive the girls to Kingston.

J. Vankoughnet Narrowly Escapes Serious Injury

Mr. James Vankoughnet, Napanee, fortunately escaped serious injury on Monday evening of this week when a car on which he was putting a new spring slipped off a jack and fell on his chest. Mr. Vankoughnet's son, Jack, and another young man, who were assisting him were able to lift the car and release him.

He was taken to Dr. Hart's office, where it was found that he had not suffered serious injury.

A forest fire not only destroys valuable timber, it may also force mills to close down and put people out of work. Playing safe with matches and fire in the woods helps prevent forest fires. Fires are started by thoughtless people.

NAPANEE TAKES KIWANIS JRS. FOR FIRST WIN

The luckless, breakless, Napanee squad which has refused to be daunted by a long successive string of defeats, finally broke into the Belleville Baseball Association win column at the Fair Grounds when they defeated the Kiwanis Juniors, two to one for the kids second straight setback.

Switzer cn the mound for Napanee hooked up with Bobby Bunton, Coach Speech St. Louis' choice for the chucking duties, in a neat burling duel, both boys allowing but four hits with Napanee clustering two in the fourth for what proved to be the winning run.

Switzer stifled the Kiwanis bats for two hits and no runs for the first five innings he struck out six and walked four. In the sixth Kiwanis got their only run of the game when Wright struck out, B. Green drew a walk and then was retired on a fielder's choice which put St. Louis on first, Semark smashed out a single and Speedy scored when Lockyer drove out the second hit of the inning.

Switzer practically won his own game in the fourth when his rousing triple sent Vick across the plate with the winning run. Napanee had scored previously in the third on Van Vack's double and an error.

Bunton struck out eight Napanee batsmen and was deserving of a better fate, but his mates failed to get their batting eyes and they could do little with the teasing slants of Switzer.

Switzer and Van Vlack led Napanee at bat with a triple and a double apiece. Semark, Kelleher and Lockyer were the only Juniorss to connect safely. Reeves was injured in the third when a fast ball struck him on the hand and he was forced to retire in favor of Coach St. Louis.

Fanatic Confesses Duce's Body Theft

Milan's Chief of Police last week announced that another 20-year-old fanatic had confessed that he and four others snatched the body of Benito Mussolini from its unmarked grave on April 22.

The youth Antonio Parozzi, allegedly told the police he fainted when he lifted the corpse from the grave.

The police chief did not disclose whether he had learned the location of the corpse, but he said on the basis of new clues he had arrested Parozzi's uncle and an alleged accomplice, Edward Mari, who was believed to have directed the secret transfers of the corpse.

Later, the police said, another youth, Mario Rana di Pietro admitted participating in the grave robbery.

Kingston Servicemen Praised by Viscount Alexander

The military city of Eastern Ontario on August 6th paid tribute to Field Marshal Viscount Alexander, Governor General of Canada, making his first visit to the city during its centenary.

From early morning until late afternoon, the Governor General was greeted by cheering crowds. Everybody knew this professional soldier who had led the British and Canadian Armies in the Mediterranean theatre of operations.

In return, Viscount Alexander paid tribute to this city during the Investiture ceremonies held in front of the City Hall. "Among all the famous cities of Canada, none bears a name more familiar to me than your own," said His Excellency. "I am well acquainted with the important role you have played in military history for close on 300 years, and that high reputation which has been earned by your citizens has been enhanced by your splendid record in the last war."

When the word Kingston is mentioned, one's thoughts turn instinctively to military affairs," he said. "Here was established with the important role you have played in military history for close on 300 years, and that high reputation which has been earned by your citizens has been enhanced by your splendid record in the last war."

"When the word Kingston is mentioned, one's thoughts turn instinctively to military affairs," he said. While Reeves, Semark, Kelleher and Lockyer were the only Juniorss to connect safely. Reeves was injured in the third when a fast ball struck him on the hand and he was forced to retire in favor of Coach St. Louis.

He declared that the fighting soldiers are not unmindful of the task performed by those at home, in the factories and on the farm, who kept supplies flowing overseas.

"The young men who died on the battlefields of Europe have not laid down their lives in vain," said Viscount Alexander. "They did their duty to their King and Country, and they have saved their country, and made possible the future development of this great land. No man can do more than that."

During the investiture, the Governor General decorated the members of the Canadian armed forces from Military District 3. Following the investiture, three school children were awarded prizes by the Governor General for their essays written in connection with the Centenary celebrations. The winners were Lorraine Sedgwick, Charlotte Funder and John Douglas Stewart.

Mayor Garnet Crawford greeted the Governor General as he arrived at the City Hall and accompanied him during the inspection. Viscount Alexander signed the International Hockey Hall of Fame Honour Roll and later signed the Book of Remembrance.

Viscount Alexander surprised the officials when he picked up the Book of Remembrance and read the dedication message in the large gathering before he signed it. The closing ceremony afternoon schedule was set back a few minutes while it was read.

The book is dedicated to the memory of the men from Kingston and district who gave their lives "in fulfilling that love sons who died gloriously should have first place in the thoughts of the loyal citizens of Kingston," the message stated. "It is a great thing to give one's life for one's country, but it is also a volume of the living. It is a permanent record of service of the men and women of the Kingston community who played their part in the war."

Following the investiture, Viscount Alexander drove to the Fair Grounds where he unveiled a bronze tablet during the dedication of a health and recreational memorial centre to veterans of the Second Great War. The centre is to be erected in the near future.

During the visit to the DVA hospital on Princess Street, the Governor General spoke to some of the patients, enquiring of their illness and their military record. During these short talks, Viscount Alexander indicated that he is becoming very familiar with Canada. He knew the location of many of the home towns of the patients. At a special convocation ceremony, in Queen's University Stadium, Viscount Alexander received the degree of Doctor of Laws from Principal R. C. Wallace in a ceremony attended by the students including 900 veterans.

Speaking at the convocation, Viscount Alexander declared that he was pleased to know that veterans are taking advantage of educational facilities now offered. "I am sure that this arrangement is both wise and far-seeing because I believe that no matter what a man's career may be, 'varsity life gives to students an outlook on men and affairs which no other form of education can give," he declared.

"GIVE US THE TOOLS ?"

Canadian farmers are reaping bountiful crops this year. Barring accidents, the West will reap a better than average crop of wheat and oats. In Ontario, there is a good crop of hay, grain, fruits and vegetables. This means prosperity not only for the farmers, but for the country as a whole.

The weather during the growing season has been good. In spite of a long dry spell, the crops have come through well. We talk so much about the weather that we are apt to overlook the part which tools play in the production of a crop. Where would the farmer have been this year, without his ploughs, his harrows, loaders, sprayers, spreaders, and the binders ? Where would he have been without his horses and tractors ? No matter how propitious the weather had been, without these there would have been calamity in Canada.

That is the situation in which half the farmers of the world find themselves, this year. Nature has done her part and is doing it, but the good earth is producing little because the farmers lack tools. Occupying armies destroyed all the tools they could lay their hands on. Farm machinery was either carted off or melted down to be made into guns and bullets. Not only so, but the animals were killed, and the seed eaten by the people, to ward off starvation.

Mr. John Diamant, Napanee, is in receipt of a letter from relatives in Greece, which describes the conditions there after four years under German occupation. The farmers have practically nothing left but the land. UNRRA is supplying seed, but seed cannot be sown on land that has been unused for years and has overgrown with weeds. The greatest need of these farmers at the moment, is draft animals with which to work the land. Mules are the best, under the present circumstances, for this purpose. UNRRA has a few mules in Greece but is not giving them to the people. They have to be bought. But the people have no money, or very little. Several farmers will pool what money they can get, buy a mule and then share it among them—each farmer getting a little bit of land worked, only enough to insure enough food to keep the family from starving. The mules cost $125 each — not a great deal of money as values go in this country, but a fabulous sum to poverty - stricken people: to people who, for no fault of their own, have been deprived of all they possess.

Mr. Diamant who, because of his knowledge of Greece and his contacts, has created much interest in our community for this unhappy country, is appealing to friends here for gifts to enable him to purchase two or three mules for war - stricken relatives and acquaintances, in Greece. This is a worthy project and one in which many people in this richly blessed community will want to have a share.

CENTRALIZATION

Premier Drew has been pointing to the long hours spent by the Members of the Dominion Legislative Assembly in the pursuit of their duties, as evidence for a distribution of responsibility as between the Provinces and the Federal Government. There should be no need for undue worry over the long hours spent on overtime by our federal members. The fact is that all of the members do not work all of the time. There are times when there is not much more than a quorum of members in the House. Of course, some are out on committee work, but by no means all the absentees are so occupied. It is doubtful if very many of our members suffer from overwork. The Cabinet Members and their Assistants have certainly had a busy time of late, and it may be it was they, Premier Drew had in mind.

Apart, altogether, from the question as to whether the Members of the Federal House are overworked or not, the main contention of Premier Drew is absolutely sound. There is a grave danger in our country of overcentralization. When Confederation took place, what was envisioned for Canada was a deferation of provinces. Certain well defined duties were allocated to the Federal Government and others to the Provinces. Of course, at that time, nobody could have foreseen the development that has taken place. Then, there were no automobiles ,no trucks, no aeroplanes, and no mechanized farms. There was little large-scale industry as we know it, and no highway system. The nation was not taxing the people to any thing like the degree it is doing to-day. The whole situation was different.

Naturally, in a changing society, the Government must adjust its plans and activities, interests and responsibilities to the altered conditions. We are in the midst of that adjustment process, now. And there is a conflict of opinion as to where the federal responsibilities end and those of the Provinces, begin. The Rowell - Sirois Commission made a survey and recommendations to meet the situation. The recommendations, however, were never adopted. Then the war came, and with it the necessity of placing power, temporarily, in the hands of the central government. This power, the central government is loath to relinquish.

In a country such as ours, with a large English-speaking group and a large French-speaking group, and lesser national groups stretched all across the north half of the American Continent, there must be some uniformity in laws and in taxation. A strong central government, with a strong co-operative provincial legislature, are essential to national well-being. Nevertheless, the danger of overcentralization is a real one. If the central government is to be all-powerful and the provinces merely dependent on the will or the wishes of the Federal Government, the whole idea of confederation will be viloated. The present unhappy stalemate should be ended, and an agreement reached which will maintain and perpetuate the fundamental principles on which our nation was founded.

THEN AND NOW !

Every once in a while, some writer or speaker in this country, will point to the tranquility of labor-management relations in Great Britain, as an example for Canada. There are no labor troubles in Great Britain, we are told. There, everybody is working hard and co-operatively for national recovery. Well, of course, there have been labor disputes in Great Britain since the war ended, and just now, six million people in London are without gas to cook their meals with, because of labor troubles.

This, however, is by the way. The point that is so often overlooked by those who picture the present tranquil labor-management situation in Great Britain, is the past history of labor relations, there. It must not be forgotten that, following the First World War, Great Britain, with respect to Labor, was where Canada is to-day. It must not be forgotten that there was a general strike which tied up everything in Great Britain, in 1926, and that Ernest Bevin was the leader of that movement. Of course, the strike was broken — no government can permit a strike of that proportion to disrupt its whole organized life. But the strike demonstrated the power of the worker, and many of the conditions for which he then contended, have been attained.

The conditions following the Second Great War are similar to those following the First World War, except that there has been a world-wide depression in between. We cannot help but feel that it is the fear of depression that, to a large extent, is determining the demands of Labor for higher wages and shorter hours. With a world shortage of consumer goods, Management is ready to go full out in production. With the technical skills learned during the war applied to peace production, it would not take long for production to overtake consumption. Then what ? The inevitable lay-off and unemployment. With work rationed and a living wage granted the laborer, this situation may be avoided. So the Laborer argues.

Whether that will solve the problem of recurring "booms and busts" or not, we cannot tell. But the workmen who, along with their families suffer most in the periods of depression, think so !

A MATTER OF PROPORTION

We have a vague memory of a brass coal scuttle, the purchase of which by an Ontario Government Department, some years ago, had a lot to do with the defeat of that government. A brass coal scuttle was just one of those extravagances which should not be tolerated by those who serve the people. We wonder what those who denounced the coal scuttle would have to say about the Federal Government's recently reported request for $300,000 with which to purchase furniture. We fail to see where that amount of money could be spent on furniture. To a novice, it would seem that three hundred thousand would buy all the furniture in the country, except of course, antique furniture. We can imagine that three hundred thousand might not last too long in an antique shop.

But, after all, when we come to think it over, it may not be so far-fetched as it would seem on first glance, that governments be interested in old-fashioned furniture. The new kind, with swivel-back chairs, desks with disappearing typewriting machines, might be too modern, too efficient for the leisurely movements of office holders. It may be that ! Otherwise it is hard to see what on earth a department would do with $300,000 worth of furniture.

Anyway, the item passed and the Department of Public Works will buy $300,000 worth of new furniture. This puts the brass coal scuttle in the shade.

UNNRA IN GREECE
A News Round Up

Approximately 2,73,624 gross long tons of relief and rehabilitation supplies have been shipped to Greece by UNRRA by July 1, 1946, UNRRA headquarters has announced. Estimated June shipments were 92,300 gross long tons.

By commodity groups, UNRRA shipments to Greece cumulative through May 31, 1946, in gross long tons, are as follows: Food, 1,240,-371; Clothing, Textile and Footwear, 33,962; Medical, 9,643; Agriculture, rehabilitation, 147,856; industrial rehabilitation, 189,846; supplies furnished by Combined Military Authorities, 715,841.

Greek Reforestation Program Expedited by UNRRA

Athens, M. B. Dickerman, one of three members of an UNRRA agricultural party who arrived in Greece toward the end of June to carry out a survey has taken over the direction of the UNRRA Greece Ministry's Forestry Section. Accompanied by representatives of the Ministry of Agricultural Ministery Forestry Department, he visited the Ministry's plantation at Daphni and Gedi to acquaint himself with the destruction brought on the Greek forests and the urgent need of the reforestation program. The American arboriculturist reported himself as satisfied with the work already done and promised to expedite UNRRA's delivery of machinery and tools and wire needed for the protection of the reforestation areas.

The object of the survey of the three-man party is to further an agricultural rehabilitation plan which will specifically , cover, irrigation drainage, soil conservation, forestry and so forth. UNRRA Greece Mission officials state.

Beds For Tuberculars Now 77 Above Pre-War Figure

Athens — The reopening of the Mount Parnes Safiatorium near Athens brought the number of beds available in Greece for tuberculars to 77 above the pre-war figure, it was revealed by the Minister of Health in the ceremony marking the event. UNRRA aid rehabilitated the war-damaged institution, under the direction of Dr. Donald R. Thomson, of UNRRA, a Swiss-trained Scotsman, whose efforts were warmly lauded by the Minister.

Despite the increase in beds above the pre-war level, tuberculosis remains the first urban health problem in Greece. UNRRA-imported X-ray units have defined the problem, showing that the incidence of the disease is now from 10 to 14 times as great as in Great Britain and the United States. The number of cases waiting treatment is no less than 100,000 throughout the country as a whole, according to Dr. J. B. McDougall, head of the Tuberculosis Section of UNRRA Health Division, who states that 20,000 beds are required for treatment. Since there are still only 4,699 beds available in TB institutions, Greece is 15,000 short of minimum requirements.

However, with UNRRA equipment, drugs and advice the total number of beds has been raised 599 over the figure of a year ago. Twelve X-ray machines and three mass X-ray units have been imported by UNRRA for examination purposes, and UNRRA has also installed two mass X-ray units paid for by Greek War Relief Societies of Canada. UNRRA food are given sufferers, while UNRRA food imports in general have struck at the root of the disease, malnutrition.

"Without the help of UNRRA," said the Minister of Health, "it would have been hard to achieve what we have. The allied nations can rest assured that in assisting Greece they help a people poor in resources but rich in gratitude."

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, AUGUST 18TH, 1946

"JESUS AND THE SACREDNESS OF HUMAN LIFE"

Lesson Text: Exodus 20: 12, Matthew 5: 21-24; 16: 29-31; 18: 10-14.

All people who have made an attempt to organize themselves into an organized society have had to draw up protective legislation for the protection of life and property. In this respect, the Hebrews were no different from others. "Thou shalt not kill." Of course, the Jews made a distinction: not all those who killed were murderers. There were those who were guilty of manslaughter, just as there are in our land. Nobody in his right senses would challenge this law and its prohibition against killing. It is basic to ordered society. However, there is a sense in which killing is just as deadly as if done with knife or gun, but is not so regarded by modern society. Bad housing, slums, undernourishment: these cause death, premature death. Indeed they are the conditions which breed crime, juvenile delinquency and lawlessness of all sorts. These should be removed. The Sixth Commandment applies here as well as to personal crimes of violence.

Then, too, war is organized killing. We have not yet, in our development of grace, reached the point where we can settle our disputes in a peaceful manner. As individuals, we go to law, and between differences between nations become extreme, resort is made to arms — to organized killing. The prohibition in Holy Writ, against killing, applies here, too. But it will be a long time before the nations will be willing to trust their differences to an 'independent tribunal for settlement. An attempt was made, under the League of Nations, another attempt is being made under UNO. The encouraging thing about it is that in spite of failures, new efforts are being made. Some day they will succeed.

The second section of to-day's lesson has to do with Jesus' interpretation of this commandment. The command not to kill, has to do only with external acts, but Christ finds the guilt not in the outward act but in the heart of the offender. "Many a man, might be, in spirit a murderer and yet be perfectly blameless in the eyes of the law. There could be no murder without an outward act. It is the motive that determines the character of the action, and since the motives to murder may be various—envy, malice, hatred, contemptthese constitute the very spirit of murder."

Elaborating this, Jesus deals with two spiritual violations of this law—anger, and contempt. "Whosoever is angry with his brother," and "Whosoever shall say thou fool." (Raca is a word meaning fool). Anger, of course, may be of two kinds. There is a righteous anger, as when a person is angry with unholy or lawlovely conditions. It is the unrighteous anger that is to be condemned: that arising out of hate, malice ,envy. So far as a person yields to the wicked passion, he is a murderer before God though he may have committed no outward crime, and be blameless in the eyes of men.

In the third passage, Jesus again emphasizes the worth of human life. He tells of the man who had a hundred sheep: one strayed away. The man left the ninety-and-nine and went after the straying animal. God Jesus says ! perfect: "Is like that God cares for every individual. Two things are worth noting. The only way the man knew the sheep had strayed, was by counting. He had a survey. Then, having found one sheep missing, he went and sought out after it. That is still the way for Christians: hold a survey, then seek to remedy conditions. Every human life is of value and must be regarded as precious by God's eyes. That means the life of the man in the mine as well as the man in the office; the man in the mill as well as the man at the desk; the man in the pulpit links as well as the indistinct shadowder: the black man, the red man, the yellow man, as well as the white man.

ARMY REFORMS UNDER STUDY

CANADA MAY FOLLOW BRITISH PATTERN

National Defense Headquarters is making a study of the question of personal liberties of the peace-time Canadian soldier and it is believed to be somewhat similar to one proceeding in Britain's war office.

The British probe was disclosed in London by Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery who, at the same time, gave a press conference his own views.

"In general," said the chief of the Imperial General Staff. "I believe that the trained soldier, when not required for duty, should be free to go where he pleases and return to his quarters when he pleases."

He said the War Office study would cover such subjects as 'lights out,' tattoo roll calls, short passes and similar rules tied to the traditional military way of life.

An A.C.N.P. spokesman confined himself to the statement that "the question of increasing the personal liberties of the soldier is being studied at the present time." But it was considered highly probable that such subjects as Lord Montgomery mentioned would come within the ambit of the study.

Financial and other inducements have already been offered in an effort to swell the lagging pool of peace-time recruits for the permanent army. These include an end to the double decker beds and numerous chances for in-service training that would fit a man for civil pursuits.

At the same time it was announced that "no peace-time regulations that infringe on domestic personal liberties" were being eased or abolished. Nor will those of married veterans a better chance for decent home life with their families.

THE SAILOR'S HAMMOCK

A hammock is pleasant for a summer afternoon's snooze in the garden but for a sailor it is often his bed all the year round. It swings free between decks and can be easily stowed away.

Sailors first obtained the idea from the Indians of America 450 years ago. The sailors of Christopher Columbus found that the natives of the West Indies used a suspended net made of fibre for sleeping in and called it a hamaca. Hmacas soon became popular.

THE OLD HOME PAPER

It's like a smiling face,
It's like a voice you long have known
You see it in some distant place
And rush to claim it for your own.

The paper from your old home town
Has bridged the long and dreary miles
And with it you can settle down
Among familiar tears and smiles.

It speaks for every friend you know,
It tells of scenes you yearn to see,
It brings back joys of long ago,
And tells of loys that are to be.

And as you run its columns o'er
Your yester years come trooping back
You fancy you're at home once more
And golden seem the etters black.

It's speech is one you understand
It tells of griefs which you can share,
It brings you in that foreign land,
Glad messages to banish care.

There among scenes and faces strange
The old-home paper seems to be
A faithful friend that doesn't change
A friend that you are glad to see.

LIBERALS FEAR RETIREMENT OF PREMIER KING.

DUPLESSIS TACTICS CAUSE CONCERN

Some important Liberals express a growing concern of the party's future under new leadership as they see signs of a parallel of the 1919 situation when Henri Bourassa's Quebec nationalism contributed to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's defeat.

Offering their comment on the understanding it would not be attributed, they said that as a matter of caution, they would like to see their present champ Prime Minister MacKenzie King—pilot them through the next general election.

But they accept Mr. King's reiterated statement that he has fought his last campaign and would like to retire in the near future rather than wait until the end of the government's present term of office—about 1950. They would like Mr. King to take with him into retirement any of his veteran cabinet ministers who have served their time so that successors can find their feet and close ranks before the next general election.

"We might as well be realistic about this," said a young liberal who is widely named as cabinet material. "The chief is not going to run."

There are many of us who would like to see his successor named now so the disruption and perhaps some discord of a last minute shuffle won't cause party disunity and weaken us at the polls."

OLD AND HAPPY CUSTOM ON THE YORKSHIRE MOORLANDS

Among old customs still observed in the remote parts of the English countryside is the sheep - clipping supper in Yorkshire. Formerly these suppers followed the sheep-clipping days on each of a number of moorland farms in turn, usua'ly with a day's interval between. I've just attended (writes S. M. Jameson) one of these old-time suppers at Charlie Mackley's Glebe Farm, at Saltergate on the North Yorkshire moors. The sheep were clipped on low benches in a cart shed.

Most of the men had come from the neighboring farms and villages. The Mackley family were there in force. There were Joseph, David, William, Charlie Gedrge, Jack and Ronnie. Charlie, with his sheep dogs, had brought in the sheep from the moorland the night before, and those nearer home that morning. He was busy docking lambs, trimming their hind quarters, cleaning the maggoty ones and sorting out the strangers —sheep belonging to other farmers.

Moorland farmers have a book recording the markings of the herds belonging to the various owners. The Mackley's sheep are "stoud and holed." That means the tip of one ear is snipped off and there's a hole punched below. Then there is a small slit in the other ear.

A constant flow of good-humored quips and banter was shouted across one to another while men clipped. "Thoo's been all this tahme catchin' yan, an' then thoo's brown ma nowt but an oud Swaddil," shouted a clipper to his catcher when he'd got a Swaledale ewe with matted fleece and bad to clip. Then a younger clipper called out to the sweeper-up "You'd des mair good workin' in t' garden nor stannin' there i' mah jeet," to which the sweeper-up tartly replied: "Non. Ah des two jobs. Ah Sweeps up an' Ah watches ti see if you lot's workin'."

Herbert Wilson, of Newton, an "old hand" among clippers has attended the clippings for sixty years. Herbert is of slight build, but he's tough. He was a "catcher" when he was seven or eight years old and a clipper at ten. In those days he was on the job by five o'clock in a morning rounding up sheep. He's one of the "old standards" who delight in hard work; indeed he'd sooner go to a sheep clipping than a village club feast, he says. Oswald Woodmansey, the sheep catcher, assured me it's a rough job catching.

Moor sheep are not like the heavy breeds: they have got to be dragged in by the horns. And can they jump! A "stranger," separated from the flock, will take stone walls and hurdles in leaps and bounds, and make off towards the moor, and neither her dog could stop it.

George Mackley was the wool-gatherer," or wrapper up of the fleece. He said he started as a youngster picking up the bits of loose wool and helping catch an odd sheep or two. Then an "old hand" taught him wag lappin', and he's done the job ever since.

After clipping day George carries the fleeces into the granary and "dresses" em up" — that's arranging them in a pile ready for going to the wool buyers. The sheep are called "Moor Jocks," Herdwick Marya" and "Rannocks" up on the moors.

"GIVE US THE TOOLS ?"

Canadian farmers are reaping bountiful crops this year. Barring accidents, the West will reap a harvest that is more than average crop of wheat and oats. In Ontario, there is a good crop of hay, grain, fruits and vegetables. This means prosperity not only for the farmers, but for the country as a whole.

The weather during the growing season has been good. In spite of a long dry spell, the crops have come through well. We talk so much about the weather that we are apt to overlook the part which tools play in the production of a crop. Where would the farmer have been this year, without his ploughs, his harrows, louders, sprayers, spreaders, and the binders ? Where would he have been without his horses and tractors ? No matter how propitious the weather had been, without these there would have been calamity in Canada.

That is the situation in which half the farmers of the world find themselves, this year. Nature has done her part and is doing it, but the good earth is producing little because the farmers lack tools. Occupying armies destroyed all the tools they could lay their hands on. Farm machinery was either carted off or melted down to be made into guns and bullets. Not only so, but the animals were killed, and the seed eaten by the people, to ward off starvation.

Mr. John Diamant, Napanee, is in receipt of a letter from relatives in Greece, which describes the conditions there after four years under German occupation. The farmers have practically nothing left but the land. UNRRA is supplying seed, but seed cannot be sown on land that has been unused for years and has overgrown with weeds. The greatest need for these farmers at the moment, is draft animals with which to work the land. Mules are the best, under the present circumstances, for this purpose. UNRRA has a few mules in Greece but is not giving them to the people. They have to be bought. But the people have no money, or very little. Several farmers will pool what money they can get, buy a mule and then share it among them—each farmer getting a little bit of land worked, only enough to insure enough food to keep the family from starving. The mules cost $125 each — not a great deal of money as values go in this country, but a fabulous sum to poverty - stricken people: to people who, for no fault of their own, have been deprived of all they possess.

Mr. Diamant who, because of his knowledge of Greece and his contacts, has created much interest in our community for this unhappy country, is appealing to friends here for gifts to enable him to purchase two or three mules for war - stricken relatives and acquaintances, in Greece. This is a worthy project and one in which many people in this richly blessed community will want to have a share.

CENTRALIZATION

Premier Drew has been pointing to the long hours spent by the Members of the Dominion Legislative Assembly in the pursuit of their duties, as evidence for a distribution of responsibility as between the Provinces and the Federal Government. There should be no need for undue worry over the long hours spent on overtime by our federal members. The fact is that all of the members do not work all of the time. There are times when there is not much more than a quorum of members in the House. Of course, some are out on committee work, but by no means all the absentees are so occupied. It is doubtful if very many of our members suffer from overwork. The Cabinet Members and their Assistants have certainly had a busy time of late, and it may be it was they, Premier Drew had in mind.

Apart, altogether, from the question as to whether the Members of the Federal House are overworked or not, the main contention of Premier Drew is absolutely sound. There is a grave danger in our country of overcentralization. When Confederation took place, what was envisioned for Canada was a deferation of provinces. Certain well defined duties were allocated to the Federal Government and others to the Provinces. Of course, at that time, nobody could have foreseen the development that has taken place. Then, there were no automobiles ,no trucks, no aeroplanes, and no mechanized farms. There was little large-scale industry as we know it, and no highway system. The nation was not taxing the people to anything like the degree it is doing to-day. The whole situation was different.

Naturally, in a changing society, the Government must adjust its plans and activities, interests and responsibilities, to the altered conditions. We are in the midst of that adjustment process, now. And there is a conflict of opinion as to where the federal responsibilities end and those of the Provinces, begin. The Rowell - Sirois Commission made a survey and recommendations to meet the situation. The recommendations, however, were never adopted. Then the war came, and with it the necessity of placing power, temporarily, in the hands of the central government. This power, the central government is loath to relinquish.

In a country such as ours, with a large English-speaking group and a large French-speaking group, and lesser national groups stretched all across the north half of the American Continent, there must be some uniformity in laws and in taxation. A strong central government, with a strong co-operative provincial legislature, are essential to national well-being. Nevertheless, the danger of overcentralization is a real one. If the central government is to be all-powerful and the provinces merely dependent on the will or the wishes of the Federal Government, the whole idea of confederation will be viloated. The present unhappy stalemate should be ended, and an agreement reached which will maintain and perpetuate the fundamental principles on which our nation was founded.

THEN AND NOW !

Every once in a while, some writer or speaker in this country, will point to the tranquility of labor-management relations in Great Britain, as an example for Canada. There are no labor troubles in Great Britain, we are told. There, everybody is working hard and co-operatively for national recovery. Well, of course, there have been labor disputes in Great Britain since the war ended, and just now, six million people in London are without gas to cook their meals with, because of labor troubles.

This, however, is by the way. The point that is so often overlooked by those who picture the present tranquil labor-management situation in Great Britain, is the past history of labor relations, there. It must not be forgotten that, following the First World War, Great Britain, with respect to Labor, was where Canada is to-day. It must not be forgotten that there was a general strike which tied up everything in Great Britain, in 1926, and that Ernest Bevin was the leader of that movement. Of course, the strike was broken — no government can permit a strike of that proportion to disrupt its whole organized life. But the strike demonstrated the power of the worker, and many of the conditions for which he then contended, have been attained.

The conditions following the Second Great War are similar to those following the First World War, except that there has been a worldwide depression in between. We cannot help but feel that it is the fear of depression that, to a large extent, is determining the demands of Labor for higher wages and shorter hours. With a world shortage of consumer goods, Management is ready to go full out in production. With the technical skills learned during the war applied to peace production, it would not take long for production to overtake consumption. Then what? — the inevitable lay-off and unemployment. With work rationed and a living wage granted the laborer, this situation may be avoided. So the Laborer argues.

Whether that will solve the problem of recurring "booms and busts" or not, we cannot tell. But the workmen who, along with their families suffer most in the periods of depression, think so !

A MATTER OF PROPORTION

We have a vague memory of a brass coal scuttle, the purchase of which by an Ontario Government Department, some years ago, had a lot to do with the defeat of that government. A brass coal scuttle was just one of those extravagances which should not be tolerated by those who serve the people. We wonder what those who denounced the coal scuttle would have to say about the Federal Government's recently reported request for $300,000 with which to purchase furniture. We fail to see where that amount of money could be spent on furniture. To a novice, it would seem that three hundred thousand would buy all the furniture in the country, except of course, antique furniture. We can imagine that three hundred thousand might not last too long in an antique shop.

But, after all, when we come to think it over, it may not be so far-fetched as it would seem on first glance, that governments be interested in old-fashioned furniture. The new kind, with swivel-back chairs, desks with disappearing typewriting machines, might be too modern, too efficient for the leisurely movements of office holders. It may be that! Otherwise it is hard to see what on earth a department would do with $300,000 worth of furniture.

Anyway, the item passed and the Department of Public Works will buy $300,000 worth of new furniture. This puts the brass coal scuttle in the shade.

UNRRA Shipments to Greece Now More Than 2,700,000 Gross Long Tons

Approximately 2,772,624 gross long tons of relief and rehabilitation supplies have been shipped to Greece by UNRRA by July 1, 1946, UNRRA headquarters has announced. Estimated June shipments were 92,200 gross long tons.

By commodity groups, UNRRA shipments to Greece cumulative through May 31, 1946, in gross long tons, were as follows: Food, 1,940,977; Clothing, Textiles and Footwear 33,902; Medical, 3,643; Agriculture, rehabilitation, 147,359; industrial rehabilitation, 69,945; supplies furnished by Combined Military Authorities, 715,841.

Greek Reforestation Program Expedited by UNRRA

Athens. — Lt. B. Dickerman, one of three members of an UNRRA agricultural party who arrived in Greece toward the end of June to carry out a survey has taken over the direction of the UNRRA Greece Mission's Forestry Section. Accompanied by Director Christodoupolous of the Agricultural Ministry's Forestry Department, he visited the Ministry's nurseries at Daphni and Gouli to acquaint himself with the destruction wrought on the Greek forests and the urgent need of the reforestation program. The American arboriculturist expressed himself as satisfied with the work done and promised to expedite UNRRA's delivery of implements and barbed wire needed for the protection of the reforestation area.

The purpose of the survey of the three-man party is to further an agricultural rehabilitation plan which will specifically cover, irrigation drainage, soil conservation, forestry and so forth. UNRRA Greece Mission officials state.

Beds For Tuberculars Now 77 Above Pre-War Figure

Athens — The reopening of the Mount Parnes Sanatorium near Athens brought the number of beds available in Greece for tuberculars to 77 above the pre-war figure, it was announced by the Minister of Health in the ceremony marking the event. UNRRA aid rehabilitated the war-damaged institution, under the direction of Dr. Donald R. Thomson, of Swiss-trained Scotsman, whose efforts were warmly lauded by the Minister.

Despite the increase in beds above the pre-war level, tuberculosis remains the first urban health problem in Greece. UNRRA-imported X-ray units have defined the problem, showing that the incidence of the disease is now from 10 to 14 times as great as in Great Britain and the United States. The number of cases waiting treatment is no less than 100,000 throughout the country as a whole, according to Dr. J. B. McDougall, head of the Tuberculosis Section of UNRRA Health Division, who states that 20,000 beds are required for treatment. Since there are still only 4,000 beds available in 78 institutions, Greece is 15,000 short of minimum requirements.

However, with UNRRA equipment, drugs and advice the total number of beds has been raised 599 over the figure of a year ago. Twelve X-ray machines and three mass X-ray units have been imported by UNRRA for examination purposes, and UNRRA has also installed two mass X-ray units paid for by Greek War Relief. Special rations of UNRRA food are given sufferers, while UNRRA food imports in general have struck at the root of the disease, malnutrition.

"Without the help of UNRRA," said the Minister of Health, "it would have been hard to achieve what we have. The allied nations can rest assured that in assisting Greece they help a people poor in resources but rich in gratitude."

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, AUGUST 18TH, 1946

"JESUS AND THE SACREDNESS OF HUMAN LIFE"

Lesson Text: Exodus 20: 13. Matthew 5: 21-24; 10: 29-31; 18: 10-14.

All people who have made an attempt to organize themselves into an organized society have had to provide some legislation for the protection of life and property. In this, the Hebrews were no different from others. "Thou shalt not kill." Of course, the Jews made a distinction: not all those who killed were murderers. There were those who were guilty of manslaughter, just as there are in our land. Nobody in his right senses would challenge this law and this prohibition against killing as the basic principle of society. However, there is a sense in which killing is just as deadly as if done with knife or gun, but is not so regarded by modern society. Bad housing, slums, undernourishments, these cause death, premature death. Indeed they are the conditions which breed much juvenile delinquency and lawlessness of all sorts. These should be removed. The Sixth Commandment applies here as well as to personal crimes of violence.

Then, too, war is organized killing. We have not yet, in our development as a race, reached the point where we can settle our disputes in a peaceful manner. As individuals, we go to court. But when differences between nations become extreme, resort is made to arms — to organized killing. The prohibition in Holy Writ against killing, applies here, too. But it will be a long time before the nations will be willing to trust their differences to an independent tribunal for settlement. An attempt was made through the League of Nations, another attempt is being made under U.N.O. The encouraging thing about it is that in spite of failures, new efforts are being made. Some day they will succeed.

The second section of to-day's lesson has to do with Jesus' interpretation of this commandment. The command not to kill, has to do only with external acts. Our Lord finds the guilt not in the outward act but in the heart of the offender. "Many a man, might be, in spirit a murderer and yet be perfectly blameless in the eyes of the law. There could be no murder without an outward act. It is the motive that determines the character of the action, and since the motives to murder may be various—envy, malice, hatred, contempt—these constitute the very spirit of murder."

Elaborating this, Jesus deals with two spiritual violations of this lawanger and contempt. "Whosoever is angry with his brother," and "Whosoever shall say thou fool." (Raca is a word meaning fool). Anger, of course, may be of two kinds. There is a righteous anger, as when a person is angry with unholy or lunlovely conditions. It is the unrighteous anger that is to be condemned: that arising out of hate, malice ,envy. So far as a person yields to this wicked passion, he is a murderer before God, though he may have committed no outward wrong, and be blameless in the eyes of men.

In the third passage, Jesus again emphasizes the value of human life. He tells of the ninety-and-nine that had a secure fold, and the wandering one that was in danger. Every human life is of value and must be regarded as precious in God's eyes. That means the life of the man in the mine as well as the man in the office; the man in the mill as well as the man at the desk; the man in the pocket limbs as well as the minister or statesman; the black man, the red man, the yellow man, as well as the white man.

CANADA MAY FOLLOW BRITISH PATTERN

National Defence Headquarters is making a study of the question of personal liberties of the peace-time Canadian soldier and it is believed to be somewhat similar to one proceeding in Britain's war office.

The British probe was disclosed in London by Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery who, at the same time, gave a press conference his own views.

"In general," said the chief of the Imperial General Staff, "I believe that the trained soldier, when not required for duty, should be free to go where he pleases and return to his quarters when he pleases."

He said the War Office study would cover such subjects as 'lights out,' tattoo roll calls, short passes and similar rules tied to the traditional military way of life.

Air MSHQ spokesman confined himself to the statement that "the question of increasing the personal liberties of the soldier is being studied at the present time." But it was considered highly probable that such subjects as Lord Montgomery mentioned would come within the ambit of the study.

Financial and other inducements have already been offered in an effort to swell the lagging pool of peace-time recruits for the permanent army. These include an end to the double decker beds and numerous chances for in-service training that the world can offer.

At the same time it was announced that "certain pre-war regulations that infringe on the personal liberties" were being eased or abolished. This was aimed at giving married veterans a better chance for decent home life with their families.

THE SAILOR'S HAMMOCK

A hammock is pleasant for a summer afternoon's snooze in the garden but for a sailor it is often the bed all the year round. It swings free between decks and can be vastly stowed away.

Sailors first obtained the idea from the Indians of America 450 years ago. The sailors of Christopher Columbus found that the natives of the West Indies used a suspended net made of fibre for sleeping in and called it a hamaca. Hmacas soon became popular.

THE OLD HOME PAPER

It's like a smiling face,
It's like a voice you long have known,
You see it in some distant place
And rush to claim it for your own.

The paper from your old home town
Has bridged the long and dreary
miles
And with it you can settle down
Among familiar tears and smiles.

It speaks for every friend you know,
It tells of scenes you yearn to see,
It brings back joys of long ago,
And tells of joys that are to be.

And as you run its columns o'er
Your yester years come trooping back
You fancy you're at home once more
And golden seem the etters black.

Its speech is one you understand
It tells of griefs that you can share,
It brings you in that foreign land,
Kind messages to banish care.

There among scenes and faces strange
The old-home paper seems to be
A faithful friend that doesn't change
A friend that you are glad to see.

LIBERALS FEAR RETIREMENT OF PREMIER KING.

DUPLESSIS TACTICS CAUSE CONCERN

Some important Liberals express a growing concern of the party's future under new leadership as they see signs of a parallel of the 1911 situation when Henri Bourassa's Quebec nationalists contributed to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's defeat.

Offering their comment on the understanding it would not be attributed, they said that as a matter of caution, they would like to see their present champ Prime Minister MacKenzie King—pilot them through the next general election.

But they accept Mr. King's reiterated statement that he has fought his last campaign and would like to retire in the near future rather than wait until the end of the government's present term of office—about 1950. They would like Mr. King to take with him into retirement any of his veteran cabinet ministers who have served their time so that successors can find their feet and close ranks before the next general election.

"We might as well be realistic about this," said a young liberal who is widely named as cabinet material. "The chief is not going to run."

There are many of us who would like to see his successor named now so the disruption and perhaps some discord of a last minute shuffle won't cause party disunity and weaken us at the polls."

Among old customs still observed in the remote parts of the English countryside is the sheep - clipping supper in Yorkshire. Formerly these suppers followed the sheep-clipping days on each of a number of moorland farms in turn, usually with a day's interval between. I've just attended (writes S. M. Jamieson) one of these old-time suppers at Charlie Mackley's Glebe Farm, at Saltergate on the North Yorkshire moors. The sheep were clipped on low benches in a cart shed.

Most of the men had come from the neighboring farms and villages. The Mackley family were there in force. There were Joseph, David, William, Charlie Gedrge, Jack and Ronnie. Charlie, with his sheep dogs, had brought in the sheep from the moorland the night before, and those nearer home that morning. He was busy docking lambs, trimming their hind quarters, cleaning the maggoty ones and sorting out the strangers —sheep belonging to other farmers.

Moorland farmers have a book recording the markings of the herds belonging to the various owners. The Mackley's sheep are "stoud and holed." That means the tip of one ear is snipped off and there's a hole punched below. Then there is a small slit in the other ear.

A constant flow of good-humored quips and tanter was shouted across one to another while men clipped. "Thoo's been all this tahme catchin' yan, an' then thoo's browt ma sheet but an ead Swaddil," shouted a clipper to his catcher when he'd got a Swaledale ewe with matted fleece and had to clip. Then a younger clipper called out to the sweeper-up "You'd dee mair good workin' in t' garden nor stannin' there I' mah feet," to which the sweeper-up tartly replied: "Nor, Ah dea two jobs. Ah 'sweeps up an' Ah watches ti see if you lot's workin'."

Herbert Wilson, of Newton, an "old hand" among clippers has attended the clippings for sixty years. Herbert is of slight build, but he's tough. He was a "catcher" when he was seven or eight years old and a clipper at ten. In those days he was on the job by five o'clock in a morning rounding up sheep. He's one of the "old standards" who delight in hard work; indeed he'd sooner go to a sheep clipping than a village club feast, he says. Oswald Woodmansey, the sheep catcher, assured me it's a rough job catching.

Moor sheep are not like the best breeds. They have got to be dragged in by the horns. And can they jump! A "stranger" separated from the rest, will take stone walls and hurdles in leaps and bounds to make off towards the moor, and neither man nor dog could stop him.

George Mackley was the wool-sorter," or wrapper up of the fleece. He said he started as a lad of eight picking up the bits of loose wool and helping catch an odd sheep or two. Then at "old hand" fancied himself a lappin' and he's done the job ever since.

After clipping day George carries the fleeces into the granary and "dresses" 'em up" that strapping them in a pile ready for taking to the wool buyers. The sheep are called "Yet-vs, Jocks," "Hollin Marys" and "Rannocks" up on the moors.

DORLAND

Dor'and, August 10. — The drought broke with a crash in the early hours of this morning. The rain did not last very long, but a lot of water fell in a short time, and some tomato growers are hoping they may yet have a half a crop. Hydro and telephone service was disrupted. Power has been off now for over eight hours. Threshing is delayed, but had been progressing rapidly all week. Grain is reported to be yielding well, and is a good quality.

BRITONS

WHO CANT SPEAK ENGLISH

It must be a strange experience for Englishmen to find themselves surrounded by the truest of true Britons who cannot speak any English. Yet that can happen in some parts of Wales where there are still about 68,000 people who speak only Welsh. The total population of Wales is about two and a half millions; of the number, besides the 68,000 mentioned, there are 811,000 who can speak both Welsh and English, and there are one and a half million Welshmen who cannot speak Welsh.

The Ministry urges that all Welsh children should be encouraged to speak their ancient and beautiful tongue in which there is a wealth of literature. At the same time every Welsh child should receive an education that will enable him or her to earn a livelihood in any part of the country.

LABOR DISPUTES CRIPPLING PRODUCTION

Ottawa, Aug. 13 — A continuing but slower decline in unemployment was reported by the Labor Department today, but unrelieved curtailment in production and acute shortages in many industries said, as a result, material bottlenecks are becoming more serious."

These obstacles, the department said, are "curtailing employment expansion."

There are now 160,000 unplaced applicants registered with the National Employment Service August 1st, after a decrease of 19,000 in July compared with a drop of 32,000 in June. The July decline coincided with the addition of 20,000 students and a large number of vacationing students to the working force.

Unfilled vacancies totalled 106,000 August 1st. This represented a decline of 15,000 from the 121,000 vacancies recorded June 27th. The decline reflected three conditions: industrial unrest, which curtailing expansion; available jobs were rapidly filled; employers were not listing total labor requirements.

STEEL SHORTAGES CLOSE PLANT

Shutdown of assembly lines of the Chrysler Corporation of Canada plant at Oshawa because of material shortages was announced Tuesday. The shutdown becomes effective at 4:00 p.m., Friday.

The announcement by President William A. Wecker said it is estimated that 1,000 of the 4,100 employees at Oshawa will remain at work in various departments for indefinite periods beyond Friday.

VALUE OF SNOW

With falls of snow quite imminent it is well to remind ourselves of its value.

Snow is certainly valuable for re-sewing underground waters, whose level has run low as happens under protracted drought. The virtue of snow is that melting slowly, the water from it sinks gradually into the land; it is not at once borne away to the rivers and the sea as may happen to pelting storm rains. We must not assume, however, that we derive as much water from snow as from continuous rainfall. An inch of rain spread over an acre means 101 tons or 22,600 gallons; but it takes ten inches of snow to equal an inch of rain.

BUS DRIVER EXONERATED OF ANY BLAME

Kenneth Down, 9 Jenkin Street, Kingston, driver of the Collacutt Coach Lines, was exonerated by a coroner's jury in Whitby last Monday of blame in the death of Leonard Robinson of Whitby, who was fatally injured July 26 when struck by a bus being driven by Down.

The jury returned a verdict that Robinson met his death "by his own negligence and unreasonable conduct on the highway".

The accident occurred on No. 2 Highway in the evening just outside of Whitby. According to Mr. Down the man stepped directly into the path of the bus, trying to flag it down, evidently believing it was a local vehicle instead of an express. Down said he swerved the bus but was unable to avoid striking Robinson. The bus crashed into a ditch, injuring eight passengers

WAR STILL ON FOR SALVATION ARMY

Not until the end of this year will the war be over for the Salvation Army, according to Commissioner H. Orames, Territorial Commander for Canada.

While work for the Armed forces ended in Canada on June 30, Salvation Army supervisors will remain in the field overseas at least until September 30. Completion of administrative work in connection with the operation of the Salvation Army Red Shield War Services is expected to take until December 31.

The Salvation Army became the only Canadian Auxiliary Service carrying on Field operations on July 31, when the other organizations turned over their activities.

Since hostilities ended, Salvation Army members serving either in the armed forces or as supervisors have been trickling back to Canada and The Salvation Army has been steadily increasing home front operations that were diminished because of loss of personnel to war activities. The Salvation Army volunteered its services before the war started.

A major custom of wartime activities has been that large numbers of ex-servicemen who encountered Salvationists at training centres and on active service abroad have turned to Salvation Army representatives for help and guidance, said Commissioner Orames.

To restore The Army to full-time home front operations and carry out long-deferred expansion of facilities and services, the Home Front Appeal for $2,000,000 opens across Canada, Monday, September 16th.

100 YEARS OLD

The Napanee Collegiate and Vocational Institute will re-open on Tuesday, September 3rd, and invites registration from town, county and adjacent counties.

This Institution began as an Academy in 1846, later became a Grammar School, a High School, a Collegiate Institute and in 1929 a Collegiate and Vocational School.

At first fees were ten shillings and nineteen per quarter but now the municipalities concerned pay for the education of their pupils.

The School is particularly well equipped with gymnasium, auditorium, science and agricultural laboratories, farm mechanics' shop, etc. Instruction is also given by radio record player, and by sound projecter.

The best types of Business Instruction is also provided. All the Commercial Teachers are specialists. There are about 40 typewriters, adding machin, dictaphone, duplicator, etc.

The latest development is a practical Course in Agriculture offered to Grades IX and X. This is an addition to the Course in Agricultural Science given in all Lower and Middle School forms. Among the topics taught are breeds, incubation and management of chickens, building of brooder houses, dairying, industries dependent on products from the farm, grasses, legumes, roots, fruits, grafting, study of insects' bee-keeping, live stock judging, fertility of soil, storing vegetables, weeds, drainage, home repairs and insulation, common diseases of live stock, farm forestry, maintenance of the car and tractor, etc. It is expected that this practical course will also be continued in Grade XI.

Beginning in September, 1946, the staff will consist of 15 qualified teachers, and a secretary. Whether you contemplate University, Normal School, Agricultural College, Civil Service, Secretarial work, or just a good general education, you will make no mistake in registering with this school. To accommodate those from a distance the School opens at 8:15 each day. From the middle of October till Easter the Board of Education supplies free one hot dish for those staying for lunch. This is usually soup or cocoa.

Since all pupils in Grade IX must take the same course, it is not necessary to interview the Principal before the opening of school but the parents are again urged to attend the opening session when the courses are explained and any questions can be answered.

Keep this Notice for Reference

On Tuesday morning, September 3rd, all pupils of Grade IX and all in the Commercial, Forms X, XIc, XIIc, and Special Commercial pupils will assemble in the Auditorium at 10:00 o'clock.

Pupils of Grades X, XI, XII, and XIII of the General or Matriculation Courses will meet in the Auditorium at 2:00 o'clock. 33a

Low Criticizes King Tactics

SOCIAL CREDIT LEADER SPEAKS AT NORANDA

Mr. Low spoke on behalf of Real Cacuette, Social Credit candidate in the September 16 federal by-election in Pontiac. The Pontiac vacancy was caused by the death of W. R. McDonald, Liberal.

Mr. Low said "the government of Canada is responsible for the shameful conditions we witnessed recently when so many government employees took the stand to admit loyalty to a government other than Canada."

He charged this was proof of the courtship of the Communist party in 1945 and said ostensibly the party was outlawed in the early part of the war, but later it was permitted, and as proof of government friendship a large number of civil servants of doubtful loyalty were hired in important posts.

At another point Mr. Low said "If one Social Credit member is elected to the House of Commons from the province of Quebec it marks the end of machine politics in Canada."

Issue Itinerary For Monty's Visit

Defence Headquarters last week issued the itinerary of the forthcoming visit to Canada of Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, Chief of the General Staff of the British Army.

Viscount Montgomery will arrive at Halifax, August 25 aboard the Mauretania and then will make a quick tour of the Dominion, leaving for the United States by Plane on September 10.

The itinerary:

Aug. 25 — Arrives at Halifax; Aug. 26 — Visits Charlottetown and Fredericton; Aug. 27—Visits Quebec City and Montreal; Aug. 28-29 — Visits Ottawa; Aug. 30 — Visits Royal Military College, Kingston; Aug. 31 — Visits Toronto; Sept. 2 — Visits Winnipeg; Sept. 3 — Visits Regina and Calgary; Sept. 4 — Visits Victoria and Vancouver; Sept. 5, 6, 7—Visits Jasper, Alta.; Sept. 8 — Visits Edmonton and stays overnight in Winnipeg; Sept. 9 — Arrives Ottawa and stays overnight; Sept. 10 — Leaves Ottawa for Washington.

JAPANESE LEAVE FOR JAPAN

About 1400 Japanese who have been living in Canada sailed from Vancouver on August 2 bound for Japan.

These people who have agreed to go to Japan to take up residence, sailed on the S.S. Meigs for Yokohama.

As in the case of approximately 1800 others whose repatriation took place recently, those sailing on August 2 received free transportation and other assistance from the Canadian Government.

Churchill Declines Australian Invitation

Winston Churchill has informed Prime Minister Chiffley he will be unable to accept an invitation to visit Australia in 1947, it was learned last week.

In reply to Mr. Griffley's letter of invitation Mr. Churchill expressed his desire to visit Australia and New Zealand, but said he was not sure his strength would equal the air journey, and that his work in leading the opposition in the House of Commons was extremely heavy.

The Late Mrs. George D. Hawley

Mrs. George D. Hawley, widow of the late Sheriff G. D. Hawley, died at her residence on Thomas Street, Napanee, on Sunday, August 11th.

Mrs. Hawley, who had reached an advanced age, had been remarkably well until the past six months, and for only about three months had been confined to bed.

She was a daughter of the late Dr. A. S. Bristol, a well known physician of early days in Napanee, and was born in Napanee, where she had lived all her lifetime except for ten years spent at Hawley following her marriage.

Mrs. Hawley had a very charming personality, which endeared her to a host of friends. She was a lifelong member of St. Mary Magdalene's Anglican Church and took an especial interest in the Women's Auxiliary, of which she was a life member. During World War I she was active in the Red Cross, and throughout nearly the whole of the war was in charge of the committee who gave out the wool.

She was predeceased by her husband in 1934 and is survived by one daughter, Miss Ethel Hawley. She also leaves two half sisters, Miss Emily P. Bristol, in Sacramento, California, and Mrs. Henry Fisher, in British Columbia. She was predeceased by two brothers, George and Edmund Bristol, and one sister, Mrs. Herbert Saunders, Kingston.

Her funeral was conducted at St. Mary Magdalene's Church by Archdeacon Beamish on Tuesday afternoon, and interment was made at Riverside cemetery.

TO REDUCE BLINDNESS

A party of three investigators, sponsored by Britain's Institute of the Blind and the Council Office, is investigating problems of blindness in the Middle East and in Africa. The party will specially consider what can be done to reduce blindness by improved education in hygienics, increased medical services, particularly in the expansion of pre-natal clinics and an increase in mid-wifery services. Territories to be visited are Palestine, Cyprus, Aden, Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika, Zanzibar, Northern Rhodesia, Nyasaland, Nigeria, Gold Coast and Sierra Leone. The party is expected to return in March 1947. It is hoped later to extend these investigations to other parts of the Colonial Empire.

BRITISH BLOOD PLASMA RELIEVED DUTCH

In a review of Britain's blood donation scheme last year the Ministry of Health states that about four thousand bottles of dried plasma were sent to Holland after the liberation for the medical treatment of people suffering from the effects of starvation. This was in addition to many thousands of bottles of whole blood, and plasma sent to the British fighting services and used in civilian hospitals in Britain, where transfusion is being used more widely than ever before, especially for surgical and maternity cases. The total number of blood donations in England and Wales ast year was nearly 394,000. Before the war, blood transfusion was the concern of a few voluntary associations and one or two local authorities. Now a service designed to meet the needs of wartime casualties has become an established and valuable part of the general hospital services of Britain.

Among the topics taught are breeds, incubation and management of chickens, building of brooder houses, dairying, industries dependent on products from the farm, grasses, legumes, roots, weeds, drainage, home repairs and insulation, common diseases of live stock, poultry, dairy, maintenance of the car and tractor, etc. It is expected that this practical course will be continued in Grade XI.

Beginning in September, 1946, the staff will consist of 15 qualified teachers and a secretary. Whether you contemplate University, Normal School, Agricultural College, Civil Service, Secretarial work, or just a good general education, you will make no mistake in registering with this school. To accommodate those from a distance the school opens at 9:15 each day. From the middle of October till Easter the Board of Education will provide free one hot dish for those staying for lunch. This is usually soup or cocoa.

Since all pupils in Grade IX must take the same course, it is not necessary to interview the Principal before the opening of school but the parents are again urged to attend the opening session when the courses are explained and any questions can be answered.

Keep this Notice for Reference

On Tuesday morning, September 3rd, all pupils of Grade IX and all in the Commercial Forms IX, XIa, XIIa, and Special Commercial pupils will assemble in the Auditorium at 10:00 o'clock.

Pupils of Grades X, XI, XII, and XIII of the General or Matriculation Courses will meet in the Auditorium at 2:00 o'clock. 33a

SOCIAL CREDIT LEADER SPEAKS AT NORANDA

Mr. Low spoke on behalf of Real Caouette, Social Credit-candidate in the September 16 federal by-election in Pontiac. The Pontiac vacancy was caused by the death of W. R. McDonald, Liberal.

Mr. Low said "the government of Canada is responsible for the shameful conditions we witnessed recently when so many government employees took the stand to admit loyalty to a government other than Canada."

He charged this was proof of the courtship of the Communist party in 1945 and said ostensibly the party was outlawed in the early part of the war but later it was permitted, and as proof of government friendship a large number of civil servants of doubtful loyalty were hired in important posts.

At another point Mr. Low said "if one Social Credit member is elected to the House of Commons from the province of Quebec it marks the end of machine politics in Canada."

JAPANESE LEAVE FOR JAPAN

About 1400 Japanese who have been living in Canada sailed from Vancouver on August 2 bound for Japan.

These people who have agreed to go to Japan to take up residence, sailed on the S.S. Meiga for Yokohama.

As in the case of approximately 1800 others whose repatriation took place recently, those sailing on August 2 received free transportation and other assistance from the Canadian Government.

Churchill Declines Australian Invitation

Winston Churchill has informed Prime Minister Chifley he will be unable to accept an invitation to visit Australia in 1947, it was learned last week.

In reply to Mr. Griffley's letter of invitation Mr. Churchill expressed his desire to visit Australia and New Zealand, but said he was not sure his strength would equal the air journey, and that his work in leading the opposition in the House of Commons was extremely heavy.

The Late Mrs. George D. Hawley

Mrs. George D. Hawley, widow of the late Sheriff G. D. Hawley, died at her residence on Thomas Street, Napanee, on Sunday, August 11th.

Mrs. Hawley, who had reached an advanced age, had been remarkably well until the past few months, and for only about three months had been confined to her bed.

She was a daughter of the late Dr. A. S. Bristol, a well known physician of earlier days in Napanee, and was born in Napanee, where she had lived all her lifetime except for ten years spent in Hawley following her marriage.

Mrs. Hawley had a very charming personality, which endeared her to a host of friends. She was a lifelong member of St. Mary Magdalene's Anglican Church and took an especial interest in the Women's Auxiliary, of which she was a life member. During World War I she was active in the Red Cross, and throughout nearly the whole of the war was in charge of the committee who gave out the work.

She was predeceased by her husband in 1934 and is survived by one daughter, Dr. Ethel Hawley. She also leaves two half sisters, Miss Emily F. Bristol in Sacramento, California, and Mrs. Henry Fisher, in British Columbia. She was predeceased by two brothers, George and Edmund Bristol, and one sister, Mrs. Herbert Saunders, Kingston.

Her funeral was conducted at St. Mary Magdalene's Church by Archdeacon Daniel on Tuesday afternoon, and interment was made at Riverside cemetery.

TO REDUCE BLINDNESS

A party of three investigators, appointed by Britain's Institute of the Blind and the Colonial Office, is investigating problems of blindness in the Middle East and in Africa. The party will specially consider what can be done to reduce blindness by improved education in hygienics, increased medical services, particularly in the expansion of pre-natal clinics and an increase in mid-wifery services. Territories to be visited are Palestine, Cyprus, Aden, Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika, Zanzibar, Northern Rhodesia, Nyasaland, Nigeria, Gold Coast and Sierra Leone. The party is expected to return in March, 1947. It is hoped later to extend these investigations to other parts of the Colonial Empire.

BRITISH BLOOD PLASMA RELIEVED DUTCH

In a review of Britain's blood donation scheme last year the Ministry of Health states that about four thousand bottles of dried plasma were sent to Holland after the liberation for the medical treatment of people suffering from the effects of starvation. This was in addition to many thousands of bottles of whole blood and plasma sent to the British fighting services and used in civilian hospitals in Britain, where transfusion is being used more widely than ever before, especially for surgical and maternity cases. The total number of blood donations in England and Wales last year was nearly 394,000. Before the war, blood transfusion was the concern of a few voluntary associations and one or two local authorities. Now a service designed to meet the needs of wartime casualties has become an established and valuable part of the general hospital services of Britain.

OBITUARIES

MRS. EMMA REYNOLDS

The death of Mrs. Emma Reynolds, a highly respected resident of Green Point for many years, occurred on Tuesday, August 6th, at 7:00 p.m. Mrs. Reynolds had not been in good health for the last few years. On May 19th she suffered a severe stroke but after a week she rallied and was able to sit in a chair for a few hours at a time. Her mind becoming clear she enjoyed the company of her many friends who called to visit with her.

Born at Morven, east of Napanee, over 81 years ago, she was the eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Brooks. After her marriage to Mr. Jay Reynolds, she resided at Green Point. After living there for four years she went West, but after a short stay in the West returned to Green Point, in Prince Edward County. She was a member of the United Church and took an active part in all its work.

She is survived by her husband, one sister, Mrs. G. D. Anderson who has been with her nearly four years; one brother, William, on High Shore, also one sister-in-law, Mrs. Ethel Brooks, P. E. County. One brother, Perry, predeceased her a few years ago. Four nephews, Maurice Brooks, Clarence, Roy and Howard Brooks, also survive her.

The funeral service was conducted at her late residence by her pastor, Rev. Mr. Carender, of Northport. The pall-bearers were close friends. The beautiful floral tributes testified to the high esteem in which the deceased was held by her friends and family.

VESTERFELT-WELLS

A quiet wedding took place at Grace United Church, Napanee, at 2:30 on Wednesday afternoon, when Doris Beatrice, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Wells, Kingston, became the bride of William Wellington Vesterfelt, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Vesterfelt, Norwood. Rev. C. D. McLellan, the pastor, was the officiating clergyman. Wedding music was played by Mrs. Black, organist.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked charming in a floor length gown of white net over silk jersey, designed with sweetheart neckline and shirred bodice, matching the shirred puffed sleeves. She wore a veil of white net caught with small white carnations and white lace mitts. Her only ornament was a three strand necklet of pearls, a gift of the groom, and she carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. Miss Marilyn Benn, a friend was bridesmaid of honor and only attendant. She was attired in a blue net gown made over satin, a pink hat and pink mitts, and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. Levi Card, Grattan Street, Napanee, which was decorated with pink and white streamers, gladioli and other summer flowers for the occasion. The bride's mother received wearing a gown of fuchsia and white silk crepe, navy and white accessories and a corsage of gladioli and English roses. The bride's table was centred with the three-tiered wedding cake. Over thirty guests attended.

Later, the bride and groom left on a trip to Norwood, Toronto, and

WHO... IS CANADA'S No. 1 CITIZEN?

IT IS YOU . . . OR SHOULD BE.

If you are a No. 1 citizen, you will be doing your share to ward off the menace of inflation* facing Canada today.

How? . . . By conservation in your personal finances . . .

Here are five ways you can fight inflation:

- Hold on to your Victory Bonds
- Buy only those goods which are in fair supply and save your money for the day when goods now in short supply will be readily available
- Avoid black market purchases
- Keep up your insurance
- Build up your savings account

If we all help in all five ways, the threat of inflation —rampant in some other countries and now menacing us—can be beaten and stamped out.

Let us all be No. 1 citizens. Remember, if you are a No. 1 citizen, you will look after No. 1 . . . Save for yourself and you save for Canada.

* Inflation, to the citizen, means simply less and less value for his dollar . . . his living costs soar as free and careless spending drives up the price of goods still in short supply. Inflation is no respecter of persons . . . like the rain, its evil falls on the just and the unjust alike. Thus, Canada's fight against the menace of inflation is your fight...the fight of each of our citizens —12,000,000 strong.

FERTILIZERS FOR FALL USE IN ONTARIO

The Fertilizers Administrator has approved several fertilizer mixtures for manufacture and sale throughout the Province of Ontario for the Fall season. These mixtures are as follows:

0-14-7	2-12-6
4-12-6	4-8-10

and 4-24-12

With the exception of the latter mixture, namely, 4-24-12, these are all farmilar to Ontario farmers and for their particular needs under specific conditions the new booklet published by the Ontario Fertilizer Advisory Board includes sound advice.

With respect to the 4-24-12, this is in reality a double strength 2-12-6 and since many farmers would like a small amount of plant food as the 2-12-6, only double the amount need be applied as in the better known 2-12-6.

The reason for including this more concentrated mixture is that the production of superphosphate from the raw rock has been reduced substantially because of difficulties in importing sufficient phosphate rock.

In order to cope with these emergency conditions, the Fertilizers Administrator has arranged for the shipment of the required tonnage of ammonium phosphate 11-48-0 from Trail, B.C. Upon arrival at the Eastern Canadian fertilizer plants it will be mixed with the required amount of potash to make up 4-24-12. While this is not a new mixture, its use has been confined largely to farmers in Eastern Canada who do not possess fertilizer drills. In such cases the 11-48-0, or mixtures made from it, are mixed directly with the grain and sown along with it. Of course, it may also be used quite satisfactorily in any grain drill equipped with a fertilizer attachment, but the machine should be adjusted to sow about half the amount of ordinary mixtures.

There are some mixtures employed before the war, which, because of the fertilizer supply situation, have not yet been placed back on the list. Some of these mixtures will be available for Spring use, but until the supply situation is clarified, and fertilizer materials are available in the plants of the various fertilizer manufacturers, it is deemed wise to be cautious in increasing the number of mixtures for Fall use.

Farmers who so desire may obtain the fertilizer ingredients and make up their own mixtures provided they are in such amounts as will make up any of the approved analyses.

In cases where official soil tests show the need for special fertilizer treatments, and on the recommendation of the Fertilizers Administrator or his representative, quantities of fertilizer materials may be purchased in the amounts indicated as being required by the soil test.

Further information regarding the fertilizer situation as it affects the farmer user may be had by communicating with the Regional Supervisor, 86 Collier Street, Toronto 5, Ontario.

WORLD'S BIGGEST SHIP READY TO PUT TO SEA

There is almost a touch of tragi-comedy in world affairs when one hears that the biggest and most luxurious ship in the world, in the first six years of its existence, will not follow its career. When the "Queen Elizabeth" was built by the Cunard White Star Line, this 85,000 tonner was not only the world's biggest ship, but more luxuriously fitted out than any other of her kind. Up till now, the "Queen Elizabeth" has, however, only seen war service and has done invaluable work as a transport. The giant is now being prepared for the purpose for which she was originally built. She is now docked at Southampton and 1,100 workers are already busy getting the world's biggest and finest ship ready to put to sea in September. Like the "Queen Mary," the "Queen Elizabeth" will be put into service on the North Atlantic route.

Question and Answer Column

Readers may direct their questions, giving their name and address and mentioning the name of this paper, to Information Branch, WPTB 490 Sussex St., Ottawa, Ontario.

Q. When will the new ration book be distributed? I will be away from home from August 15th to September 30th and would like to make arrangements to get mine before I leave.

A. The No. 6 ration book will be distributed between September 8 and 16 and you will be able to get yours at the nearest distribution centre to wherever you happen to be at the time. If you prefer you can fill out the application card in the back of your present ration book and leave the book with card attached with some responsible person so that they may pick up your new book.

Q. Am I allowed to take food into the United States? I will be spending a few days there and would like to take my friends some meat and butter.

A. Canadian visitors to the United States are allowed to take butter meat and preserves up to the value of $5.00. Anything over that amount requires an export permit.

Q. Last summer we spent our holidays at a summer cabin. When we applied again this year we were advised that the rent would be four dollars more a week. Is this allowed?

A. Certainly not! Summer accommodation comes under the Rentals regulations the same as any other type of living accommodation. Owners are not permitted to increase the rent unless they have secured permission from the Rentals Administration. If they have obtained permission to make an increase a card should be in your hotel room or cabin stating the approved price for the space.

Q. We have been saving meat coupons during the warm weather and now they will not be of any use after the end of the month. Is this correct?

A. Yes! Meat coupons M40 to M50 will expire on August 31st. Butter coupons R19 to R27 also expire at that time.

WORD RELATIONS

The word Class comes to us from the Latin word Classis, meaning originally an assembly called by a cry - a shout. As civilization grew and train people were chosen to be soldiers, traders, and so on, the word was used for the various groups, and came to mean a trade, or order.

The great idea of the word, however, is an assembly brought together - a shout, and among its brothers and sisters are:

Council, which means an assembly called together.

Haul, which is associated with moving something to somewhere.

Calendar, which comes from the Latin word meaning the first day of the month, when public notices were probably shouted out by the magistrate.

All these words can be traced back to the old Aryan root Kal, to cry out, or call.

THE CURIOUS WEASEL AND ITS PECULIAR TRAIT

The weasel is regarded as one of the most curious of all the smaller animals. Not only is it a curious acting and looking animal, but it also has a "curiosity" all its own.

The animal delights in investigating all the traps it can find, and in this way many a weasel is caught, having stuck its nose too far into an untended traps which may even contain the stalest of baits.

Another queer trait of this weasel is its overwhelming desire to see what is going on around it. Many times a weasel is chased into a hole but almost immediately it will stick its head out to see what is happening, and the hunter finishes him off. However, this is not a good habit on the part of farmers, since many other animals besides weasels damage poultry.

SUGAR ND SCIENCE

Three who find the sugar in the cup scanty should not grumble; it is much more needed elsewhere.

Seventy of the industries we look to for the revival of commerce depend on it. Motor fuel consumes it; this way many a weasel is caught, it has a place in synthetic rubber tires; in industrial alcohol; in waterproofs, in soap.

This unfailing stimulant, which has been called the 20th century's Aladdin's Lamp because it lights so many ways and supplies so many means, was first brought to England by the Crusaders, home from Palestine. It reached there through Persia from India. Spanish and Portuguese sailors distributed the sugar cane to West Africa and the Canaries.

For long sugar was a luxury weighed on the apothecary's scales. Now, supplemented by beet sugar, the world is weighing it by the million tons, and yet cries out for more.

LARGEST STEEL TUBES

London—United Kingdom manufacturers have just produced what are believed to be the largest stainless steel tubes in the world. They are fourteen inches outside diameter, one quarter inch thick, and over twenty feet in length. They are to be used in a food plant and will be subject to severe high frequency vibrations.

A Free Pamphlet on this pressing problem is available through any branch of The Royal Bank of Canada.

This pamphlet reviews some of the disastrous results which have come from faulty soil management, the staggering losses which even now are being sustained by Canadian farmers through sheet erosion, soil drifting and other causes, and suggests means by which farmers and rural communities may best organize to fight this creeping death.

Every forward-looking farmer should read this pamphlet. If there is no branch of the Royal Bank near you, a copy may be obtained on request to The Royal Bank of Canada, Head Office, Montreal.

INDIAN PUDDING A TRADITION

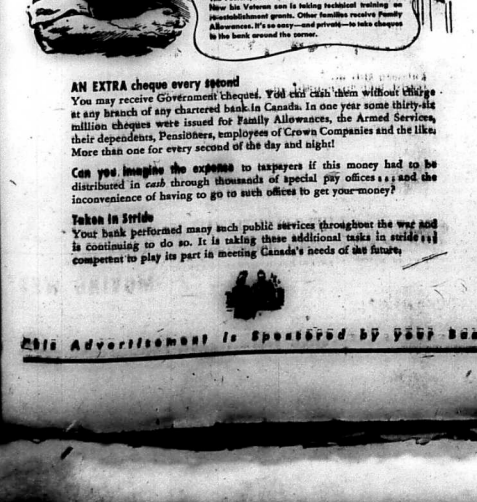
Today people are turning back to hearty homespun foods, making them more satisfying and sometimes more economical. They belong to cold weather, however, for there's nothing delicate about these old-time foods. Theirs is the job of filling-up, and well they do it!

Indian Pudding was a favorite of the early colonists. It was popular in grandma's time and today in its modern form is a pudding worth remembering.

Modern
Indian Pudding

Two eggs, one-quarter cup sugar, half-teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon ginger, one-quarter teaspoon cinnamon, one-quarter cup molasses, one quart milk, one-quarter teaspoon vanilla extract, one quart corn flakes.

Beat eggs. Add sugar, salt, spices and molasses; beat well. Add milk, flavoring and corn flakes. Pour into a greased baking dish; set in pan of water to one-inch depth and bake in slow oven (300 deg. F.) one and one-half hours to two hours, or until done. Yield: eight servings.



STREET SCENE - 1946
Government cheques come to this street every month. The Fosters, for instance—he was wounded at Vimy. Now his Veteran son is taking technical training on Rehabilitation grants. Other families receive Family Allowances. It's so easy—and private—to take cheques to the bank around the corner.

AN EXTRA cheque every second

You may receive Government cheques. Old civil servants without charge at any branch of any chartered bank in Canada. In one year some thirty-six million cheques were issued for Family Allowances, the Armed Services, their dependents, Pensioners, employees of Crown Companies and the like. More than one for every second of the day and night!

Can you imagine the expense to taxpayers if this money had to be distributed in cash through thousands of special pay offices . . . and the inconvenience of having to go to such offices to get your money?

Taken in Stride

Your bank performed many such public services throughout the war and is continuing to do so. It is taking these additional tasks in stride and competent to play its part in meeting Canada's needs of the future.

A LONG COLD DRINK!

Everybody feels the need for long cold drinks during the summer. The longer and colder they are, the better. Someone once remarked that she felt dehydrated by the heat, which is exactly what happens and the only way to feel rehydrated is by drinking lots of water or other cold beverage.

A good habit to take in which will prove to be a great time and sugar saver, is to have a jar of ready-made syrup in the icebox for use at a moment's notice. It saves time and, what is more important these days, sugar, since quite often when sugar is added to a cold drink, a good portion of it does not dissolve and is lost. The syrup is made in the proportion of 1 cup of water to 1 cup of sugar, brought to a boiling point, skimmed and stored in a covered glass jar in the icebox. Any syrup or fruit juice left over after canning may also be used.

Simple, cold drinks like lemonade or orangeade are very much improved by the addition of a few fresh berries or berry juice. The juices of seasonal berries may be used to make cold appealing summer drinks. Cold drinks that are also nourishing may be prepared with milk and children who do not like milk alone may like it if it is disguised with another flavor.

The home economists of the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture suggest a few recipes for long cold drinks.

AIDS FOR SKILLED SIGHTLESS

London — One of Britain's latest inventions is a Braille reading micrometer for the rehabilitation of blinded ex-Servicemen in certain industries. It was shown at the Design and Industries Association exhibition held in London. This micrometer has been made by a Sheffield firm who were asked by Messrs. Hall's Medical Institute for the Blind to apply Braille to a micrometer that would enable those blinded then, the Sidney Works. It had been skilled tool and instrument makers, to carry on with their normal work.

Two designs were produced; they were used by blind craftsmen who offered suggestions which led to improvements. The instrument is based on the ordinary micrometer but the Braille characters on relatively large drums add by reporting these drums the blind men can "take the readings." The model shown is an English reading micrometer but the same principle can be applied to a metric reading micrometer. The system of gearing and drums, too, can be fixed as a standard attachment to any micrometer or micrometer head.

Nazi-Wrecked Colony of Wieringermeer Rises Again

BY DeWITT MACKENZIE
A. P. Writer on World Tour

Medemblik, Holland. — From the top of the great dyke which holds back the waters of the Zuider Zee there stretches before you on the land side a scene of devastation that is logged in United Nations records as one of the meanest war crimes of the Nazis.

This was the flooding of the great Wieringermeer farm colony of 48,000 acres by dynamiting the dykes and letting in the Zuider Zee.

Three villages and 512 farms were wiped out. The Germans did this on April 17, 1945, without military reason but solely as an act of hate just before their surrender.

The colony was brand new, for the land was reclaimed from the sea only about fifteen years ago. The government had built the tidy houses and ample barns and had constructed three villages as well. The colonists rented from the government. The farmers and their wives were young people just starting out in life. The birthrate was so heavy that basements had to grow on every bush.

The land blossomed. The colonists were happy and the government was proud of its model experiment. Into this Arcadian scene stalked the Nazi war machine.

The enemy long had hated the colonists because the latter were anti-Nazi and there were many underground workers among them. So the invaders, though they knew war about to surrender, flooded the happy Eden.

The Hitlerites blew two huge gaps in the tall dyke—and the little Dutch boy's thumb couldn't cope with that. The flood tore through the openings and covered the land to a depth of fifteen feet in places. The Germans did notify the colony a few hours in advance so that there was no loss of human life and only two per cent of the cattle were drowned. But the lovely farm houses and villages with their handsome churches and public buildings largely dissolved in the waters. Even the trees were killed.

However, the Nazi meanness has been met with a philosophical determination which is well represented in a jigsaw puzzle with which the children of the zone are playing.

This depicts the predicament of the flooded area in a humorous light. There's the pretty young housewife standing on a tiny island in the flood with a basket of eggs on her arm, looking as though she is afraid she will get her feet wet. There's a fat and perplexed pig on another island that's just big enough to hold it. And a contented farmer is catching fish from the roof of his barn.

The government is paying for the losses sustained by the young couples and will replace their houses and barns.

When war broke out there were attached to this model colony some 300 young German Jewish men and women who were studying the system for use in colonizing work in Palestine. All these were taken away to Germany. Only about twenty have returned, and it is reported here that all the rest are dead.

LET IT SNOW!

In 1860 the King of Norway took cognizance of skiing as a sport and donated trophies for competitors. In order that all competitors should be given a fair chance, rules for Downhill, Slalom, Cross-country and Jumping were drafted. This was the starting point for skiing as a world sport, declares Major Ian Eisenhardt, National Director of Physical Fitness.

As skis were introduced into Central Europe, Switzerland, the Bavarian Alps and other countries, they changed in shape until they are today shining pieces of hickory or ash with metal bindings.

Skiing has swept North America. In the United States, the National Ski Association was founded in 1904 with seventy-one affiliated clubs with a total membership of about 4,000. In 1942 the annual bill for ski equipment for the United States amounted to $190,000,000, indicating that there were at least 2,000,000 skiers on trails and hills.

The same story could be told about Canada. The Canadian Amateur Ski Association was founded in 1920 with only five member clubs and to-day there are well over one hundred.

The various National Ski Associations throughout the world have affiliated in a world-wide body called the "Federation Internationale de Ski" or more commonly known as FIS.

During the war both the American and the Canadian Ski Associations discontinued their championships. But, in spite of war, more Canadians than ever have become converts to the sport, and we now see thousands where there used to be hundreds.

Although skiing can draw spectators, it is essentially a participation sport. As an out-door sport where participants are constantly in the fresh air and sunshine, it contributes immensely to the nation's health and physical well-being.

THE VALUABLE SHARK

Sharks are certainly very terrifying creatures, but they are also very useful.

A great many sharks are found in the Caribbean Sea, which has many warm currents, and fishermen in the West Indies are now specially engaged to catch them. The reason for this is that practically the whole of the shark is valuable. Its skin will make spectacle cases; the liver, like cod liver, produces oil which does us a great deal of good; shark fins are considered a great dainty, especially by the Chinese, who like them for soup and also from them make gelatine. The white meat, either fresh or salted, is a wholesome food for human beings, and the rest of the meat can be converted into animal food or useful fertiliser.

There are, of course, many kinds of sharks. Some are as much as forty feet long—more than half the length of a tennis court—but some varieties are much more valuable than others and fishermen have to learn which these are.

Shark-catching and marketing may be very useful to the West Indies. Formerly the people depended upon growing sugar-cane, but with increasing competition, and the greater use of beetroot sugar they could not sell their products so well. So Britain is now providing money to help them to grow better crops and raise animals for their own needs and also to develop their fisheries; and the shark will help the people of the West Indies.

THE MILKY WAY

In planning meals for the home where there are children, it is necessary to think of them first. Milk, then is a food to be considered.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, say that it is easy to plan dishes that have the required amount of milk for the children and still appeal to the adult members of the family. Milk soups, scalloped dishes and many delicious desserts carry a large proportion of milk yet are not suggestive of baby food.

The care of milk in the home is very important. As soon as possible after delivery, the milk should be taken into the house and put immediately into the refrigerator or other cool place. The bottle and cap should be washed, before putting away, in order to remove any dirt or dust which may have adhered to the bottle during delivery.

Milk should be kept in the storage place, except when it is actually being used. When cooking with milk, the bottle should remain in the warm kitchen only long enough to measure out what is required. In serving milk, the amount put on the table should be as nearly as possible what will be used, and after the meal, milk, cream and butter should be the first foods put away. Left-over milk should not be poured back into the bottle, as the milk in the bottle will be several degrees colder than that taken from the table, and mixing them may affect the keeping quality and flavour. Milk pitchers should be thoroughly washed and frequently scalded.

Milk readily absorbs odours and flavours of other foods. To guard against this, it should be kept covered and away from strong foods such as onions, cabbage or fish.

QUICK CREAM SOUP

Four tablespoons butter, four tablespoons flour, one quart of milk, one slice onion, one teaspoon salt, two cups grated raw carrot or turnip.

Melt butter. Blend in flour and gradually add milk. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Add onion, salt and grated vegetable, and cook over hot water until vegetable is tender. Strain and remove onion. Sprinkle chopped parsley over soup just before serving. Six servings.

PARINA CREAM

Two cups milk, one-third cup of farina, half-teaspoon salt, one egg, one-third cup brown sugar, two tablespoons lemon rind, half-teaspoon vanilla.

Heat milk in top of double boiler. Whisk in farina and salt with a fork. Cook twenty minutes, stirring until it thickens. Add sugar, well beaten egg and grated lemon rind; cook two minutes longer. Serve hot with top milk; this pudding may also be served chilled. Six servings.

CARROT CUSTARD

Two cups carrots, grated and cooked (or left-over cooked carrots, ground), two egg yolks, one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon ginger, one and one-half teaspoons cinnamon, one tablespoon flour, half-cup sugar, half-teaspoon nutmeg, one teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon vanilla, two cups milk, two egg whites.

Mix carrot and beaten egg yolks. Add melted butter. Mix dry ingredients and stir into carrot mixture. Add milk and vanilla. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a greased casserole. Oven-pooch in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F. for 45 minutes or until set. Six servings.

This quantity will make two, one-crust pies. Bake the shells for ten minutes in a hot oven, 400 deg. F. Add custard mixture and bake in a moderate oven, 300 deg. F., for 45 minutes, or until set.

"SHOOTING STARS" AND STRATOSPHERE

Schnectady, N.Y. — Harvard University astronomers have discovered from observations of falling meteors or "shooting stars" that the temperature of the air 38 miles up is hot enough to boil water.

Dr. Fred L. Whipple, Cambridge, Mass., associate astronomy professor at Harvard, said that meteors give clues to the nature of the upper atmosphere because they appear at a height some 40 miles above the level reached in the most successful ascents of small free balloons. He explained that two cameras are located 10 miles apart and aimed at a point where a meteor is shot simultaneously by both cameras.

Whipple reported that a rotating shutter on each camera cuts photographic trails in small segments and enables observers to measure the velocity and direction of the meteor as it enters the earth's atmosphere. Having ascertained the heights and direction of a trail in space, its velocity can be determined by measuring the separation of the breaks made by the camera shutters, a twentieth of a second apart. Then it is possible, the astronomer stated, to measure directly the rate the meteor is slowed down by resistance of the air. The denser the air, the more rapidly a meteor is slowed down.

SPONGE FISHERS

During the war sponges were almost unprocurable, and those who had sponges of their own watched with dismay as they crumbled to nothing from old age.

Now news has come that one of the biggest homes of sponges, the Bahamas, may be re-opening the beds to fishers, for sponges are marine growths that are found on the sea-bed in certain areas. The Bahamas beds have been closed since 1939, when disease attacked the growing sponges.

The Bahamas are not the only place in the Empire where sponge-fishing is carried on. One of the richest areas for sponges is in the waters of the Mediterranean around Cyprus. The fishers work in crews of nine, during the summer months.

When they are fishing in shallow water one of the crew peers through a contraption made out of a petrol tin and having a glass bottom, to see if there are sponges to be had in that region. In deeper water divers are used, and they wear a breathing apparatus rather like a gas-mask, and are attached to the boat by a communicating cord.

When the catch is brought in, men tread the sponges in salt water to remove the black rubber-like skin around them. The sponges are next trimmed with shears to give them a convenient shape, dried in the sun, and then they are ready for the market and the bath.

RAILS IN WAR AND PEACE

On Britain's railways, as well as on her roads, improvements are being planned and will be carried out as soon as the ravages of six years of war have been made good. The standardisation of locomotives will be expedited and during the first year of peace passenger rolling-stock will be renovated, repainted and equipped with prewar of better lighting. New carriages will be built. There will be many new designs, embodying bright colours and fabrics and greater ease. Will be made of plastics and light-weight alloys. Hundreds of stations will be rebuilt and modernized.

New details were disclosed recently of the part Britain's railways played in winning the war. It is now revealed that each thousand-bomber raid required twenty-eight trains of gasoline and eight trains of bombs. These were provided, often at short notice with a minimum dislocation of normal passenger and freight trains.

In the eight weeks before D-Day the railways ran 24,459 special trains for the movement of troops and ammunition and equipment. And so thorough were the precautions taken, that little of this traffic was apparently connected with the impending invasion.

SAVOURY STEWS

A good stew is a culinary triumph. They may be made from a wide choice of meats, and variety may be achieved by combining different meats. Whatever the ingredients or method, all stews should be good.

If the meat is dredged with flour, it develops flavour, thickens the gravy and gives a more attractive colour.

Variety may also be obtained by the use of different vegetables which vary in flavour, colour and texture. Onion always adds interest in flavour but use only one other strong-flavoured vegetable such as turnip or cabbage. Add these vegetables just in time to cook tender. Many a stew has been spoiled by overcooking the vegetables. Additional salt will be required when the vegetables are added.

Stews afford the ingenious homemaker a wide scope for her imagination. Try a cup of sour cream in a veal stew, or a little curry powder in a lamb stew. Marjoram and thyme or a little bay leaf are good seasonings. Experiment cautiously and taste carefully. The flavour should be subtle.

Attractiveness in serving is important to the success of any stew. If the meat and vegetables are arranged on a platter, and the gravy served from a separate dish, it may have more eye-appeal. Omit potatoes from the stew when dumplings, baking powder biscuits or noodles are served as accompaniments.

To Make a Good Stew:

Cut meat in uniform small pieces.
Season well and dredge with flour, if desired.
Brown meat in hot fat.
Add only enough liquid to cover.
Cover closely and cook slowly at simmering temperature until tender — about one and one-half hours.
Never allow a stew to boil hard.
Add the vegetables just in time to cook tender — about one-half hour before serving. Remove meat and vegetables before thickening the liquid for gravy.

SPANISH STEW.

One and one-half lbs veal (breast, shank, flank, neck or shoulder); two onions; one cup diced celery; one cup uncooked spaghetti (broken into pieces); two cups of water; two cups tomato juice; seasonings.

Wipe veal. Remove fat. Cut veal into one and one-half inch cubes. Roll meat in flour, brown meat and onion in fat, taken from meat. Add water. Bring to boiling point and simmer for a half-hour. Add remaining ingredients, season and simmer one hour longer. Thicken with a paste made of flour and water. Six servings.

STEW SUPREME

one and one-half pounds lamb or beef (breast, shank, flank, neck or shoulder); two tablespoons fat; one cup of chopped onion; two and one-half cups of canned tomatoes; three-quarters teaspoon of salt; one and one-quarter teaspoons of spicy meat sauce; three medium carrots, diced; one-quarter cup of chopped green pickle (optional); one-half cup sweet or sour milk.

Cut the meat in narrow strips, one-inch in length. Brown meat with onion in hot fat. Add tomatoes, salt and meat sauce. Cover closely and simmer two to two and a half hours. Add carrots and continue cooking for twenty minutes or until tender. Ten minutes before serving, add the green pickle and the milk. Six servings.

— DESSERTS —

We must have desserts, if the joy of eating is to be maintained. For generations the menu has been planned to end triumphantly with the dessert course. They should add a touch of festivity and glamour to the meal.

Choose your dessert course wisely for it can mean the difference between pleasure and dissatisfaction. Your success and reputation can depend largely upon the desserts you serve.

Since desserts are served when the appetite has been partially appeased, they must be attractive in appearance. Colour, texture and shape all play their part in this appeal, also the dish in which they are served.

Always remember the dessert course should go hand-in-glove with the main course — the one complements the other. If the main course has been heavy, then serve a dessert which is light in texture, with a fresh, tart flavour. On the other hand if the main course has been light, it gives the homemaker ample scope to use her rich steam puddings, or heavy sweet desserts.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, suggest that you serve some hot and some cold as an antidote to monotony.

COFFEE SPANISH CREAM

One tablespoon gelatin, one-quarter cup cold coffee, two egg yolks, one-quarter teaspoon salt, three-quarters cup hot coffee, one cup hot milk, one teaspoon vanilla, two egg whites, one-quarter cup sugar.

Soak gelatin in the cold coffee. Beat egg yolks and salt. Add hot coffee and milk. Cook over hot water, stirring constantly, until thickened enough to coat a spoon. Add gelatin and stir until dissolved. Remove from heat, add vanilla and cool. When the mixture begins to thicken, fold in meringue made by adding the sugar to the stiffly beaten egg whites. Turn into a lightly greased mould or individual sherbet glasses. Chill thoroughly. Six servings.

GINGER PUDDING

One quarter cup shortening, one teaspoon soda, one cup of hot water, one cup molasses, one and one-half cups sifted pastry flour OR one and one-third cups all-purpose flour, one teaspoon ginger half-teaspoon of salt.

Cream fat. Dissolve soda in water. Add molasses to fat. Sift together the flour, ginger and salt and add alternately with water to creamed mixture. Blend until smooth. Bake in greased muffin pans in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F. for thirty minutes. Serve hot with sauce. Makes 24.

NOTE: If any left-over, they may be reheated by steaming or by sprinkling lightly with water and heating them in the oven. This batter may also be used with drained canned fruit, to make an Upside-Down cake. Use fruit juice to make a pudding sauce.

STEAMED WHOLE WHEAT PUDDING

One-quarter cup shortening, one-quarter cup granulated sugar, one egg, one-quarter cup light molasses, half-cup milk, one and one-half cups whole wheat flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-quarter teaspoon soda, one teaspoon salt, half-teaspoon cinnamon, one-quarter teaspoon cloves, one - quarter teaspoon nutmeg, three-quarters cup seedless raisins

Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, then the well beaten egg. Combine molasses and milk. Mix the dry ingredients thoroughly and dredge raisins with a small portion of this mixture. Add dry ingredients to the first mixture alternately with the liquid. Lastly add the raisins. Steam in individual greased moulds for 45 minutes or in a large greased mould for one and one-half hours. Serve with Lemon or Brown Sugar Sauce. Cover moulds with waxed paper or cheesecloth while steaming, to prevent the pudding from becoming soggy. Six to eight servings.

Poliomyelitis Serious Only in Montreal

As health authorities in Montreal, Canada's largest city, reported the existence of 109 cases of poliomyelitis —including 20 new cases in less than 48 hours — a survey by the Canadian Press showed late last week that nowhere else in the Dominion is the incidence of the dreaded polio considered serious.

Dr. Adelard Groulx, Montreal Health Director, said the increase of the disease this year presented "a serious situation." He said the 109 cases might be the start of an epidemic but it was too soon to determine whether an epidemic would develop.

Complete figures were lacking in some provinces but the survey indicated Montreal probably had more cases of polio than the rest of the country combined. Dr. Groulx said 11 deaths from polio had taken place in Montreal this year.

Canada appeared to have escaped the serious outbreak in the United States, the worst since 1916. The United States public health service reported a cumulative total of 5,454 cases throughout the country, including all states but West Virginia. The 1916 total was 26,000.

Watch the Border

In acme Canadian communities near the United States border officials said a close watch was being kept to prevent transfer of the disease to Canada by visitors.

No complete total for the Dominion was available but the apparent general increase in polio cases was before the House of Commons in Ottawa and Acting Minister of Health McCann was expected to present a report today. He said yesterday that the Health Department had been receiving reports from provincial health departments for the last day or two.

Precautions

Avoid overtiring from strenuous exercise and sudden chilling, such as would come from a plunge into cold water on a hot day.

Avoid tonsil and adenoid operations except in emergency.

Use the purest milk and water obtainable; keep flies away from food, do not swim in polluted water.

Curare Used in Polio Attack

Eleven-year-old Melissa Woodring, second child of Harry M. Woodring, former Secretary of War, to be stricken with infantile paralysis, was reported recovered by her doctors last week after a single injection of the drug curare. Marcus Woodring, 12, died July 19 as a result of the disease.

The child's father said that shortly after she was taken to hospital July 25 her doctor, Dr. Paul E. Bellknap, and consulting physicians decided to try the serum used drug extracted from So. American weeds.

"She began improving right then and continued to improve," Mr. Woodring said. "The paralysis went away. Every symptom of the disease disappeared that afternoon."

In a recnt issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, Dr. Max J. Fox of Milwaukee referred to curare as "a dangerous drug not to be encouraged for the treatment of the acute phase of poliomelitis." An A.M.A. spokeman said, however, that experiments with the drug were continuing.

ROLLED OATS BATTER PUDDING

Four medium apples; two tablespoons sugar; one-third cup milk-flavoured fat; one-third cup of brown sugar; one egg; half-teaspoon vanilla; half-cup sifted all-purpose flour; two teaspoons baking powder, one-quarter teaspoon cinnamon; one-quarter teaspoon salt; half-cup rolled oats; half-cup milk.

Peel, core and slice apples; place in a greased baking dish and sprinkle with sugar. Cream fat and brown sugar and cream well together; add beaten egg and vanilla and beat well. Mix and sift flour, baking powder, cinnamon and salt, and rolled oats. Add dry ingredients alternately with the milk to the creamed mixture. Pour batter over apples and bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F. for 40 minutes. Six servings. Note: other sweetened, fresh or drained canned fruit may be used instead of apples.

BUCKINGHAM EGGS
(England)

Six eggs, one-quarter cup of milk, half-teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one tablespoon mild-flavoured fat, six slices of bread, two tablespoons butter melted, four tablespoons catsup, three tablespoons grated cheese.

Beat eggs, add milk and pepper. Melt fat in top of double boiler. Add eggs and cook over hot water, stirring frequently until set. Toast bread and spread with catsup mixed with melted butter. Pile eggs on toast. Sprinkle with cheese and serve at once. Six servings.

CURRY MEAT LOAF
(South Africa)

One cup bread cubes, half-cup milk, one egg, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, one and one-half teaspoon of curry powder, one cup cooked meat, one-quarter cup chopped onion, one teaspoon vinegar, two stalks celery chopped (about one-third cup).

Soak bread in milk, beat with a fork until broken. Add egg and continue beating until light. Add salt and pepper and curry powder. Mix with meat, add onion, vinegar and celery. Pack into a lightly greased loaf tin and bake in a moderate oven, 350 deg. F.—about one hour.

CEREALS

The word "cereals" immediately presents a picture of breakfast food. Some people forget or do not know that they can also be used in soups, main dishes, muffins and hot breads, and also in desserts and in cookies.

Canada produces large quantities of cereals in great variety. They are therefore an easily obtained food. Canadian people should use more of them. Whole grain cereals are those from which little or nothing is removed in processing. They are a more complete food than those which are refined. There is a choice of flaked, cracked and rolled types, also meals and flours, all of which are inexpensive.

Cereals should be examined frequently to make sure they are in good condition. All should be kept tightly covered in a cool, dry place, to protect against insects and vermin. Glass sealers or tightly covered tin canisters are excellent for storing cereals purchased in bulk. Those which come in package may be stored in their own containers, but must be kept tightly closed.

To prevent the development of weevils, heat the cereal in a warm oven (not higher than 200 deg. F.) for about an hour. Cool well before storing. Whole grain flours and meals containing germ and any prepared flours containing fat will turn rancid unless kept in a cool, dark place. The home economists of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, offer several excellent recipes:

TOGUS BREAD

Two cups milk, one tablespoon of vinegar, half-cup molasses, half-cup corn meal, one cup of whole wheat flour, one and one-half cups of all-purpose flour, half-teaspoon soda, half-teaspoon of salt.

Add vinegar and molasses to milk. Let stand one hour. Add cornmeal, whole wheat flour and white flour, sifted with soda and salt. Mix well, pour into greased one-pound baking powder tins, cover, set in three inches of boiling water and steam one and one-half hours. Makes three small loaves.

CRACKED WHEAT TAMALE

One-half cup uncooked cracked wheat, one and one-half cups of boiling water, one and one-half cups raw meat, one small onion, chopped, one tablespoon flour, one cup tomato juice, one and one-quarter teaspoons salt.

Reserve two tablespoons of cracked wheat. Pour boiling water over the remainder and let stand ten minutes. Brown meat and chopped onion, add flour, tomato juice and salt. In a baking dish, place alternate layers of meat mixture and soaked cracked wheat. Sprinkle top with the two tablespoons of dry cracked wheat. Bake covered, in moderately hot oven, 375 deg. F., for thirty minutes. Remove the cover and continue baking until brown, about thirty minutes. Six servings.

SAUTED CEREAL SLICES

Two cups of cooked cereal, one egg, two tablespoons milk, fine, soft bread crumbs.

Place cereal in small mould or loaf pan. Chill until firm. Slice in quarter-inch slices. Mix egg and milk. Dip slices of cereal into egg, then into bread crumbs. Melt a little fat or syrup. Six servings.

In a hot frying pan and brown on both sides. Serve with

Nat Registration Has Been Dropped By Government

Not Necessary Now to Carry Registration Cards

National registration has been discontinued effective last Thursday, Humphrey Mitchell, Labor Minister, informed the Commons. Further prosecuting would not be entered lator-infractions of the registration regulations and pending cases will be dropped.

The Order-in-Council abolishing the registration also provides for dropping charges for violation of service mobilization regulations. The number of men not listed has been reduced to 6,553, out of a total of 1,859,811 all dealt with under mobilization regulations. Many in those unaccounted for were men who had left the country, died, or who were registered under two names. The number of actual delinquents was placed at 1,363.

In making the announcement, Mr. Mitchell said: "I am happy that we have reached the day when we are able to dispense finally with these registration and mobilization regulations, and I am sure that the honorable members will agree with that sentiment. These measures were vitally necessary for war purposes. They helped Canada over many of, our man-power difficulties, but they represent one of the features of wartime administration which is democratic public tolerate and even expect, but which the same public very properly feel is not in accord with the peacetime machinery necessary in the government of a free people."

The Minister recalled the circumstances under which the registration was taken in 1940 to enable Canada to make the most efficient use of her man-power. With the assistance of volunteer registrars, forms were completed by 7,862,920 persons under the War Services Department. In March, 1942, the registration was transferred to the Labor Department.

Since 1940 the job of keeping the records up to date involved about 8,000,000 changes, including new addresses, marriages, deaths, corrections and new registrations.

PUT TO MANY USES

Information yielded by the registration was used for military call-up, procurement of skilled workers for essential industries, indexing technical personnel, including doctors and nurses, identifying individuals for a variety of purposes and listing certain foreign nationals of whom citizens available for military service under those countries.

Two Napanee Boys Injured Last Week In Car Smash

Fred Luby of Napanee sustained a compound fracture of the leg and Garry Smith, also of Napanee, was rendered unconscious, when the car in which they were passengers was struck by a transport in Deseronto, last Thursday evening.

The car in which the two boys were passengers was driven by Allan Simpson, Jr., and was almost totally wrecked. John Simpson, Dr. A. E. Fyffe and W. Aikenbrack, the other members of the group in the Simpson car, were not injured.

The accident occurred when a car in front of the Simpson car swerved to the left side of the road, causing the approaching transport to turn to its left, striking the Simpson car.

Fred Luby was taken to the Belleville General Hospital, and Garry Smith was brought to his home where he has regained consciousness and is able to be out again.

Home Appliances Slowly Coming

Ottawa. — Those post-war washing machines and refrigerators you have been waiting for are still rolling off the assembly lines, although in somewhat limited numbers.

Electric refrigerators, showing particular improvement, the Bureau of Statistics reports, with 5,870 units produced in Canadian factories during June, compared with 5,823 in May and 4,299 in June, 1945.

On the other hand, washing machine production in June dropped to 9,250 units compared with 11,377 in May and 10,445 in April.

In addition, Canada imported 430 washing machines in June, exporting 183. Imports of refrigerators were 1,436 and exports 1,000. During the first six months of 1946, production of washing machines totalled 59,233 units, refrigerators 26,169 units.

CAR PRIORITY LAW REMOVED

Ottawa. — All restrictions on the distribution of new cars have been removed, Mr. C. D. Howe, Minister of construction Minister, announced in the Commons last Thursday.

Since July 1st priority certificates for the purchase of cars have been issued only in exceptional cases that the sale or delivery of cars has been restricted to persons already holding priority certificates. With the action announced, dealers will be free to sell or deliver cars to any person. It now is felt that the distribution of motor vehicles can best be handled by normal trade channels and the regulations restricting sale and distribution) have accordingly been rescinded, Mr. Howe said.

Lifting of priority restrictions does not change in any way the ceiling prices imposed by the Prices Board.

The priority plan was introduced to channel new cars to essential users as production of passenger cars was resumed. The flow of new cars from automobile assembly lines lagged behind the number of priority certificates and as a result from May 7th to June 30th applications for priorities were accepted and processed, but because of the backlog of certificates many were not actually issued until July 1st. Since July 1st no applications for certificates have been accepted.

On August 1st the regulations were amended to prohibit the sale or delivery by a dealer of a new car or truck to anyone not the holder of a certificate.

Previously if a dealer had more vehicles on hand than he had unfilled priority certificates, he could sell the surplus as he wished. Now, with the rescinding of the restrictions, the dealer has complete choice in disposing of his cars and trucks.

All Conscientious Objectors Released

Ottawa. — All conscientious objectors have been released from alternative compulsory service camps, it was announced recently.

Labor Minister Hon. Humphrey Mitchell in an announcement in the Commons July 29 said that August 1st as the date abolishing control over conscientious objectors.

At that time it was reported the decision affected 10,872 'conchies' in agriculture and in alternate work camps. At one time during the war 12,664 'conchies were registered, but this number was reduced to the present figure by changes of mind which saw some of them enlist for active service and others enlist for non-combatant services such as the medical corps.

PREMIER KING PLANS TO RETURN

London. — The expectation here is that Premier Mackenzie King will return to Canada early in September at the latest, regardless of the progress made by the 21-power Paris peace conference.

It is pointed out that Viscount Addison, Dominion Secretary, intends to visit Canada next month and this is taken as an indication that the Prime Minister will want to be at home soon after the end of August. He possibly may make time for a visit to Germany ter first-hand information on the situation there.

Among the problems Mr. King faces on his return will be the appointment of four new High Commissioners at London, Dublin, Canberra and Pretoria. There is a permanent appointee in Newfoundland and Alfred Rive now is en route to New Zealand to assume his duties as Canada's new High Commissioner in that Dominion. The vacant posts now are operated by acting High Commissioners.

A dearth of suitable personnel in the much - expanded Canadian diplomatic service is understood to be causing delays in appointments. The pressure is likely to increase rather than diminish with a number of countries anxious to open diplomatic relations with the Dominion.

LAST OUT !

The last private C.W.A.C. to leave England has arrived in Canada — Beatrice Charles, of Toronto. She went to Great Britain in 1937 and joined the C.W.A.C. there. Thus ends one of the most successful ventures in modern warfare. In 1935, when visiting Russia, we were impressed by the Russian girls in military uniforms. It seemed strange and unusual, though we could not help but admire their efficiency and military bearing. When we had occasion to comment on that, on returning, the usual reaction was that taking women into the army was a barbarous custom which would be tolerated only by a nation such as Russia.

It was not long after the war broke out, however, that an agitation started on behalf of women for the army. As hostilities proceeded, and the all-out nature of the war became clear, the experiment was made — cautiously, at first. Then as they proved themselves on actual military duty, the movement to secure women for the forces gained impetus. They served in every theatre of war and in many capacities. Indeed, they served in ways that no one would have thought possible in 1998: in the Army, Navy and Air Force, as office help, signallers, truck, jeep and car drivers. In thousands of ways they relieved men for actual combat. They put up with inconveniences, they overcame the homesickness which attacks all who leave home for the first time. They adjusted themselves to camp life and threw themselves into their duties with vigor and enthusiasm, and with efficiency.

Now, they are home and out of the uniform. They will be able to dress with a bit of finery — so dear to the heart of women — and take their place in society, enriched and strengthened by the experience through which they have come.

The women in the forces have done a good job, of which a greateful nation should be justly proud.

GOING-UP !

Those who are pressing for higher prices in the hopes of making more money, sometimes get the ear of governments. But higher prices always hit hardest the common man, and the average family. In the United States, prices have continued to rise until now, many commodities are out of the reach of the average person. The number of tourists from The United States who are visiting Canada, load-up with all sorts of consumer goods at Canadian prices. In spite of the fact that the discount on the Canadian dollar has been removed, the American tourist finds it profitable to stop here. We are glad to have such kindly neighbours, and rejoice that they can secure goods here, at reasonable prices. Every such customer will go back to his or her country and sing the praises of Canada's economic system, which has, so far, been able to hold the line against increasing prices. This will enhance Canada's prestige better than tons of tourist propaganda. It is the money that counts. We have watched the returning Americans making declaration at the border: it is a conservative estimate that seven out of every ten who have visited Canada, bring back purchases which they declare.

On Friday last, the O.P.G. in The United States, issued some new price increases. Here are a few of them:

"Radios, Electric Phonographs 3 per cent; Electric Stoves, 9 p.c.; Gas Stoves, 5 p.c.; Small Electrical Appliances, Toasters, Irons, etc., 4 p.c.; Bicycles, 3.5 p.c.; Box Springs, 12 p.c.; Ordinary Household Chinaware, 7 p.c.; Clocks and Nonjewel Watches, 6 p.c.; Coal, Oil and Wood Stoves, 5 p.c.; Dry Batteries, 8 p.c.; Household Aluminum Utensils, 5 p.c.; Metal Bed Springs, 4 p.c.; Metal Cots and Doubledeck Beds, 3 p.c.; Metal Office Equipment, 4 p.c.; Outboard Motors, 5 p.c.; Photographic Equipment, 6 p.c.; Portable Typewriters, 5 p.c.; Vacuum Cleaners, 7 p.c.; Washing Machines, 7 p.c.; Window Shades, 10 p.c.; Writing Paper, $7 to $24 a ton."

No wonder the citizens of The United States who can arrange to do so, are buying here. It is to be hoped that Canada will be able to hold her price line.

THE DARDANELLES

There seems to be no end to the demands which Russia makes as her price for helping to win the war against the Axis. We have great admiration for the Russian experiment in social living. Russia has done a good job in that area. Indeed she has pioneered in ways that have forced the Democracies to modify, considerably, their sense of corporate responsibility for the wellbeing of the people. But in the international arena, the Russian statesmen have become experts at lower politics. They are never through making territorial demands, which will give her a position of advantage in the event of future disputes.

The latest of Russia's demands on Turkey is for a revision of the treaty governing the use of the Dardanelles. We are in full agreement with the "Buffalo Evening News" which says:

"The Turkish Government has no other course than to reject Russia's harsh demands for a dominating position on the Dardanelles." The News continues: "This sturdy little nation (Turkey) came out of World War One a dictatorship, but unlike Russia, she has abandoned the one-party state and is taking real steps on the path to democracy. One shudders to think what might become of her reviving freedoms if Russia seizes the Dardanelles.

"If Generalissimo Stalin and his Politburo expect this issue to be dealt with on its merits, they had better stop waving the club over Turkey's head and reduce their demands to reasonable proportions.

"The Straits are controlled by the Montreux Convention of 1936, to which Russia is a signatory, and everyone agrees that it should be revised in the light of changed conditions. But the Russian proposal to exclude Britain and France, the two greatest merchant shipping powers in the Mediterranean, from voice in the new control arrangement is as ridiculous as the insistence on a Russian naval base in the Mediterranean itself.

"The Kremlin wants to play the game one way on the Danube and the other way on the Dardanelles. It is about time she stops her hysterical bluffing and begins to play the game straight. That is the only way she can expect the other nations to meet her halfway."

QUACK ! QUACK !

The boys from "Down Under" seem to be putting quite a lot of pep into the Peace Conference now being held in Paris. The latest of these, to add a touch of life and vigor to the discussions, is the New Zealand delegate, Mr. W. J. Jordan. The report of his comments to the Conference, on Friday, is interesting and refreshing. Among other things he is reported to have said: "Let's get on with the blasted Conference. . . . Before we have even elected a chairman (for a commission) someone is on his feet with ten minutes of quack! quack! and with the translation it takes half an hour. . . . Let's get on with the work — that's what we are here for."

The remark was directed at the Russian delegate, Vishinski, who was raising objections to the procedure on the commission, of the delegate from France. Mr. Vishinski did not reply at once to Mr. Jordan's "quack! quack!" though he did later, when he said that "bad tempers would not get them anywhere."

It is quite significant that Russia which is a totalitarian state, where orders are given and taken without debate, has developed the art of discussion with such aggravating effect. The Russians seem to fear that the whole Western World is against them; that they have ganged up against her. So the Delegates watch every little detail, lest there be some internation joker hidden within. They make a long drawn-out issue of minor matters. They stall, delay and prolong the debate with exasperating discussions of detail. The result is as might be expected. Little progress is being made, and delegates accustomed to move faster are chafing at the bit, a good deal of the time. It is not to be wondered at that Mr. Jordan should lose his patience and urge the Conference to be done with "quack! quack!"

Perhaps, however, it had better be "quack! quack!" than "ack! ack!" In the long run, it is better to talk things out than to shoot them out. The very fact that twenty-one nations are all togeher, talking things over, is an achievement. Much better that they should sit for months, talking, than that they should look with suspicion at each other across national frontiers. So — on with the "quack! quack!"

FACTS ABOUT THE BELGIAN CONGO

The Belgian Congo is a colony covering the immense area of 900,465 square miles in the heart of Africa. The country is bigger than Germany, France, Spain, Britain and Italy put together. It has an outlet to the Atlantic at the mouth of the great Congo river which, with its many tributaries, flows through and on the border of the Colony and is navigable in several extensive reaches. A large part of the country is covered by tropical forests. The population, consisting almost entirely of Africans is 10,820,000. Capital, Leopoldville, population 40,000. Chief port:: Matadi, 60 miles up the Congo from its mouth. There are 3,016 miles of railway. HAVE YOUR CHEST X-RAYED

Within the next few weeks every citizen of this community will be offered a free health service. The Lions Club of Napanee in co-operation with the Ontario Tuberculosis Association and the Ontario Department of Health, has arranged to provide every man, woman and child in this area with a free chest examination without any cost or obligation whatsoever.

This campaign is part of a Province-wide plan begun last fall to cut in half the incidence of tuberculosis within the next ten years. Local officials planning the survey estimate that upwards of four thousand persons will receive a free chest X-ray.

That prevention is better than cure, all will agree. In the present case of tuberculosis, mass X-ray surveys have been found to be among the most effective measures. It is hoped, therefore, that everyone will take advantage of this excellent opportunity to protect their own health ,the health of their family and their community.

The menace of tuberculosis lies largely in the fact that a person can appear perfectly healthy and feel fit and yet have the disease. Happily, when detected in its early stage it can be cleared up fairly quickly and the person return to his employment. The surest way of finding out whether one has tuberculosis is through the X-ray examination. Each person found to have a shadow of the disease may then immediately receive the necessary attention.

The survey has yet another benefit. It will greatly arouse public awareness to this insidious disease. With this awareness fully aroused, there are good prospects that this grim enemy of the people will eventually be done away with.

ONE YEAR AFTER V-J DAY

BY J. M. ROBERTS, JR.
Asso. Press Foreign Affairs Analyst

The greatest war in history ended just about a year ago, permitting the surviving countries to turn their full energies toward solution of world problems.

Already the United Nations had been organized, people were aware of the development of a new military weapon at Los Alamos, N.M., which seemed to make war an absurdity, and the way of the military transgressor had been proved hard, almost to the point of annihilation. People were going to have peace hereafter, even if they had to fight for it through an international army to enforce international morality.

But the ink was hardly dry on the Japanese surrender when things began to happen.

Insurgents began what has been a running fight ever since against British troops and Dutch rule in The Netherlands Indies; Britain's troubles in India began to come to a head as did her economic situation at home; Egypt and Moslem peoples everywhere, began a campaign against foreign hegemony; the Chinese reformed civil war where they had left off when they began to fight the Japanese.

There began a realignment of ancient spheres. Russian influence was substituted for that of Western powers in the Balkans and Central Europe. The Western powers at Tehran and Yalta had paid such prices as Eastern Poland and occupational rights both in the Orient and Central Europe for Russian acquiescence in 'democracy' for liberated areas; for activation of the 'equal access' clause of the Atlantic Charter' for the one big thing that President Roosevelt felt contained the essence of peace — Russian co-operation after the war.

But 'democracy' means different things to different people. 'Reparations' sometimes seems to include monopolistic economic and political penetration. Russia denuded Manchuria of the industry which the United States had counted upon to give dependent China the sinews for self-recovery. The Danube is blocked to the traffic upon which its basin depends for sustenance. Minor matters, comparatively, such as Austria and Trieste, stand between the powers and even a start toward settling the German problem.

These are only some of the matters which remain unsolved a year after V-J Day. They are all a part of the disturbed world picture, but none of them is causing the least material theme.

The central theme is unity or lack of it, among the three great powers — Russia, Britain and the United States. The lack of unity has caused them has blocked establishment of anything like a stabilized world.

War has been described as an extension of diplomacy. Now diplomacy has become an extension of war.

In one respect, the world outlook is better than it was a year ago — more people have enough to eat. By tremendous effort, United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration and the occupying armies saw to it that millions got through a winter and early spring during which without all-out help from outsider, they surely would have died. It was a matter of life and death, and many a corner was cut to save them.

HOMES OF THE FUTURE

At the moment the vital need is to get sufficient homes of reasonably good standard to ensure that every one may enjoy privacy and health. But once the back of this task is broken it will be possible to look forward to homes in which a steady stream of new materials and new devices will greatly lighten the Lady of the housewife and make housekeeping a matter of two or three hours' work a day instead of a drudge from dawn till dusk.

The home of the future will require little or no dusting, and the brush and pan may be relegated to museums.

There will be no dust, because it will be automatically collected before it has time to settle. This will be done by a simple electronic device already in use in some factories for collecting dust produced in manufacturing processes.

The principle is that by which objects bearing opposite electrical charges are attracted to each other. The dust particles are given a positive charge and a small electronic device, using a relatively small current and a negligible load in the ceiling, is given a negative charge.

It attracts the dust particles of it, and they are thus collected before they can settle. The housewife's dusting will be limited to emptying the dust container every few days.

The kind of dirt that is brought into the house on shoes or results from accidents or wear will be produced and much more easily removed by new devices and materials. For instance, on the doorstep there will be a mat, not as now a kind which moves rapidly and automatically cleans the shoes.

A person entering the house will simply touch a button for a few seconds and his shoes will have all the dirt removed. It would be simple to arrange so that the mere weight of anyone coming in would automatically set the brushes in movement during the few seconds required for the door to be answered or they key to be found.

Furnishings materials will be water and dirt proof. Cleaning the curtains will be simply a matter of wiping them over with a sponge as they hang. Upholstery will be cleaned in the same easy way. Even the youngest child spills ink or gravy on the best tablecloth it will roll harmlessly off the floor, which, covered in a stain-proof carpet, will be quite undamaged.

Even windows may be kept clean automatically, either by the application of a grease-resisting cuemical or an electrical device that will repel dust and dirt particles.

Incidentally, windows will probably have a high frequency device that will "electrocute" all flies and insects as they try to enter.

Cooking will be very much simplified by the use of electronic ovens already being used for some industrial materials that require 'baking'. In the electronic oven there are no flames or red-hot wires. The heat is produced internally in the article being cooked by "radio" waves.

The advantages are many. First, there is speed. A joint and two vegetables could be cooked within five minutes of being placed in the oven. Meat will be cooked evenly all through, instead of from the outside towards the inside. There will be no more dishes burned outside and raw in the middle!

This will be particularly valuable in the case of bread. It will be possible to decide the exact depth of cooking desired, and leave the oven to twitch off automatically when the right point has been reached.

This method of cooking will result in meat being more tender, and there will be less 'drying-up.'

The housewife of the future will certainly have a 'deep-freezing' section in the larder. In this, meat, vegetables and fruit will keep safely for weeks or months. Peas, strawberries, chickens, or whatever it may be, will simply be placed in the container and taken out six or twelve months later, for use as required.

For entertainment in the home the housewife will have a 'big screen' Television will also serve her in other rays. For instance, there might be a television screen in the kitchen automatically recording the picture of anyone standing on the front doorstep.

An automatic television camera at the end of the child's cot will enable a mother to sit comfortably in another room 'keeping an eye' on the baby—on a portable screen.

Instead of having to get up to turn the radio on to another programme she will be able to 'dial' from where she is sitting whatever station is required.

Radios may have 'selecting' fitments enabling the owner to pick out the programmes required at the beginning of the day and to 'set' them ready."

The telephone will be immensely improved.

If it is left unattended it will automatically explain to callers that the owner is out and take a message which will be repeated to the owner on his return.

Telephones are already in use which will light a stove ready for the owner. It will be possible for the housewife or business man to call home from a transmitter weighing only a pound or two while walking in the street or travelling by train.

FACTS ABOUT ALUMINUM

Some interesting facts about aluminum were revealed at a meeting in London recently. Since the end of the war, for instance, the lifting of controls has reduced the price from £110 to £65 per ton. Although aluminum is, to-day, more plentiful than either lead or zinc, sixty years ago it was in such short supply that its price was no less than £2,000 per lb. Britain's aircraft factories have now turned over their aluminum supplies to the housing drive. Houses can be built entirely of aluminum, and a whole range of fittings, from kitchen sinks to floor joints, are now possible in this metal.

THE MULTI-TOOTHED SNAIL

The small may not be the swiftest of all creatures, nor the most beautiful, but it is certainly one of the most versatile of all the thousands of living organisms on this earth.

Perhaps the most amazing feat that the small can perform is the trick of crawling over the cutting edge of a razor blade without injuring itself. In order to accomplish this, it has been done. It is able to do this because of a mucous excretion which envelops its body, and ensures a gliding surface, at all times, and because of the softness of its body. This mucous acts as a lubrication over which the small easily moves along.

Snails are able to adapt themselves to many changes in temperature. The Roman snail, well known to stay alive in temperatures of 12° degrees below zero.

Snails have over 81,200 teeth

"JESUS AND PURE LIVING"

Text: Exodus 20: 14. Proverbs 4: 14-23. Matthew 5: 6 Philippians 4: 8.

War does a lot things to people. While it develops traits of heroism, unselfishness and self-sacrifice among great numbers, yet it has the opposite effect on others—breeding in them selfishness, greed and lust. We have come through two disastrous world wars in our own lifetime, and the result of those catacllisms is not yet. After making every allowance for the things they have done, it would be hard to overstate the evil consequences. Hasty marriages contracted under the overwrought emotions of the war years, are producing the harvest. The divorce courts have a long waiting list of cases to be heard. Even in small, steady and conservative communities, where divorces a few years ago were almost unheard of, they are quite common. It can be argued that every generation has been faced with the problem of immorality and sex relations, nevertheless, the situation caused by the war has intensified these problems in our day.

One of the deep and fundamental principles of Jesus' teaching was respect for human personality. War destroys that; adultery destroys that. Anything that destroys respect for human personality is contrary to the teachings of our Master. Men and women, that is, respect for each other; similarly with nations. When every act of parliament and of international agreement is done with an eye single to the effect it will have on human personality, the Christian way of life will be approximated.

In the section of the lesson taken from Proverbs, it is clear that the people, even in those early days and in that primitive setting, had their problem of strong drink. Moral leaders in every age have condemned it; the main reason of the effect it has on human personality. While the older civilizations in Europe had accepted drinking as a social custom, it was not until quite recent years that it became the smart thing in this country. There can be no doubt but that the wars and the military system had a lot to do with this. But the movies, too, which have a tremendous influence on the public are not immune to blame. By portraying drinking scenes, and getting the people familiarized with them, they have an evil influence on western civilization.

Then, too, predatory monied interests have seized upon the sale of liquor as an easy access to financial power. Many have climbed from insecure places to positions of wealth and influence on the bodies of their fellow men, whom they have exploited by the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor. The profits from these interests, with so much money in their hands, are now seeking control of the press and the wide distribution of bread. "The United Church Observer" in the current issue, has an editorial entitled "After the Dough," which conveys some startling information on this new phase of the liquor business.

There are all these and many other causes for the rapid increase in drinking and drunkenness on this North American Continent in recent years. There is only one way in which this can be checked, and that is through the individual. The inside of him is fully aware of the way in which he is being exploited, who recognises the evil effect on human personality of strong drink, will avoid it. Perhaps the exhortiatin of Paul to the Philippians is still the best advice to the evils of impurity and intoxication: "Whatsoever things are true; whatsoever things are honourable; whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure; whatsoever things are lovely; whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue any praise, think of these things."

POLES TO ARRIVE NEXT MONTH

London, Eng. — The first of 4,000 Polish Army veterans who are going to Canada as agricultural workers are expected to reach the Dominion in mid-September, it has been learned.

A Canadian mission on route to Italy to select suitable unmarried applicants from the Polish Second Corps reached London last week end and interviewing teams will start work in Italy by August 21st.

The Poles will be taken from Italy direct to Canada under two-year agricultural contracts. Ships are being diverted to provide quick passage for them.

Most of the Poles will be in Canada by the end of October when all German prisoners of war — many of whom have been working on farms, —are scheduled to be repatriated.

At the outset only unmarried Polish soldiers will be considered for farm work in Canada. If they carry out their duties satisfactorily they will be considered for naturalization and the Canadian Government will be ready to allow the entry of any dependents they may have.

Restrictions Lifted On Cement Supplies

Ottawa. — Control on cement supplies imposed under the Prices Board's policy of equitable distribution was lifted last week, a board announcement said in the capital city. This includes portland, mortar and waterproofing cement.

Officials said the action resulted from resumption of road building, which was practically at a standstill during and since the basic period of 1941. Adherence to distribution controls of cement at this time would result in distortion of the board's distribution pattern.

West Plain Picnic A Great Success

A large crowd gathered on August 14th in the beautiful grove of Mr. Haner Whyte, for the annual picnic of the West Plain Sunday school. The day was all that could be desired: brilliant sunshine and warm weather made it a day to be enjoyed to God's great out-of-doors.

Many friends met, together and enjoyed renewing acquaintances. A former pastor, Rev. Mr. Caswell, was able to be present and meet his many friends once again. After the picnic was over a baptismal service was held in the church where eleven children and babies were baptized by Mr. Caswell. An open-air service was held in the evening. Mr. W. McDoule and Mr. Sheffield, both of Queen's University, taking charge of the meeting. Mr. McDoule brought the message while Mr. Sheffield sang two solos. The young men are workers in the Youth for Christ rally.

The entire evening was one of great spiritual value and was enjoyed by all present. The members of the Sunday school are indebted to Mr. Duquette for inviting these fine gospel workers to the picnic.

OBITUARY

MRS. JOSEPH A. RUSSELL DIED IN MANITOBA

Mary Elizabeth Russell, 74, died at her home at Barnsley, Man., on Friday, August 9th. The funeral service, at which Rev. M. A. Creal officiated, was held at Carman Anglican Church on Monday, August 12, with burial in the local cemetery. The pallbearers were R. Metcalfe, W. Aldcroft, L. Meeks, F. Preston, M. Tompkins, and Wm. Dunn.

Mrs. Russell, the former Mary Elizabeth Kinnear, was born in Lonsdale, Ont., in 1871. She married Joseph A. Russell, of Selby, in 1892, and went west to the Carman district in 1902, where she had resided ever since.

She is survived by her husband and eight children, four sons, Frank, of Thornhill; Clair, of Winnipeg; Wilbert and Harold, of Carman; four daughters, Jean (Mrs. D. S. Pierson, Glenora); Ethel, (Mrs J. R. McInnis, Turner Valley, Alta.); Evelyn, (Mrs. A. Andrews), and Helen, (Mrs. J. Snell, Winnipeg; as well as twenty grandchildren. Three children predeceased her, May, in 1904; Earl, in 1918, and Gertrude, in 1924. GRADE 3 PEACHES ARE ABOLISHED

On recommendation of the Ontario and Niagara Peninsula Fruit Growers' Associations, provisions for Grade 3 peaches under the Farm Products Grades and Sales Act have been abolished. This was announced at Queen's Park today by George Wilson, Director of the Fruit Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. The action obtains at the end of movement of peaches of this grade.

Grade 3 peaches may be recognized as a menace to the sale of quality fruit. Growing conditions have been very favourable this season and a large peach crop of good quality is in prospect. Coupled with this action, new departures in packages and more rigid inspection have been inaugurated, and growers are going all out to increase consumer confidence in their product, Mr. Wilson states.

In addition to the abolition of Grade 3 peaches, Mr. Wilson also announced a new Domestic Split Pit Grade. Peaches of this grade have to be No. 1 in size and of domestic quality, and have to be marked as "Domestic Split Pits." The purpose of this grade is to allow the grower to sell the large, good quality, split pit peaches, Mr. Wilson explained.

OBITUARIES

THE LATE JOHN BELTON

On Friday, July 26th, one of Forest Mills' best known and most respected citizens, Mr. John Belton, passed away at his home very unexpectedly after a brief illness. While his health had not been good for some time, his death came as a great shock to his many friends. He was a former resident of West Plain and after moving to Forest Mills he continued his work in the church as Sunday school superintendent and boys' class teacher at West Plain. He was a devoted Christian and a willing contributor to every good cause. His loss was keenly felt when he was unable to carry on his work in the church any longer.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Duquette in the United Church, at West Plain. The Forest Mills choir sang "There's no disappointment in Heaven," one of his favorite hymns. A large crowd gathered to show their respect to the departed.

He leaves a widow to mourn his loss. An adopted son, Oswald, passed in just a year previous to his death. One sister, Mrs. George Dafoe, died a few years ago.

PRESENTATION MADE TO MR. AND MRS. E. B. COOPER AT THE PARISH HALL, BATH

A social evening was held at the Parish Hall, Bath, August 13th, 1946 in honour of Mr. and Mrs. E.B. Cooper and family, who are leaving our community. The following address was read:

Dear Mr. and Mrs. Cooper, and Family:

It is with regret that we have come to the last of a great many occasions which we have shared with you.

Whether the occasion was one for work or play, you have always joined in wholeheartedly and helped to make it a success. As members of the A. Y.P.A. you could always be relied upon to do your share in any of the activities sponsored by the Association.

Your fellow-members therefore ask you to accept this blanket as an expression of their appreciation of your faithful service. They hope that it will be useful to you as you travel away from them, and that its warmth will remind you that there is always a warm welcome waiting for you here, should you return.

As a member of the W. A. you, Mrs. Cooper, were always to the fore in giving a helping hand when it was required, whether it was making a quilt, baking a pie, or acting as a very efficient recording secretary at the annual meetings. The W. A. would like you to accept this blanket with their thanks and good wishes.

This evening the people from the community have joined with the members of St. John's Church to honour the Cooper Family. As members of the community, Mr. and Mrs. Cooper have always carried out the Golden Rule of doing as you would be done by. As a small token of esteem and of thanks for all the good things they have done since they have been in the community, their friends and neighbors ask them to accept these gifts: Mr. Cooper, smoking stand and pouch; Mrs. Cooper, a Presto Cooker; Jessie and Elma, Parker pens.

All of us here to-night assure you, and Mrs. Cooper, that our thoughts will be with you and your family wherever you may be. We wish you God speed and the best of health and happiness in the years to come.

(Signed) on behalf of St. John's A.Y.P.A., St. John's W.A. and the Community — Mr. Harold Sills and Mr. Bert Morrow.

Mr. Cooper, on behalf of his wife and family, thanked the neighbors and friends for the lovely gifts which were presented to them.

MAPLE RIDGE W. I.

Mrs. Manly Kimmett was hostess to the members of Maple Ridge Women's Institute at their meeting on August 8th, when the children of the neighborhood were entertained. Mrs. Harold Dupre, the president, was in charge. Good responses were given to the roll call for the month, First Aid for Children. An invitation to visit Victoria Institute on the evening of September 19th, was accepted and Mrs. Grant Cooke was chosen programme convener for the occasion. She was also instructed to purchase a skit book for use in Institute programmes.

The Institute "Village History is to be made ready for the Kingston area convention and is to include records of the old neighborhood boys who served overseas in the Second Great War.

The programme given by the children, began with a chorus. A picture was then taken of the group, after which there was a scramble for peanuts. Recitations were given by Nell Kimmett, Lorne Vanluven, Ralph and Doris Friskin; readings by Mary Herrington and Judy Kimmett; a guitar solo by Edwin Winter and songs by Ruth Cooke and Shirley Friskin. The older children took part in races and there was a large pile for the smaller tots, from which prizes were drawn.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem and lunch was served by the committee with plenty of ice cream and lemonade.

A large attendance was present and the two long tables were laden with good things to eat to which everyone did justice. Several sports were enjoyed by all children from three to 60 years of age. The oldest person on the grounds was Mrs. Cassil, who is 92 years of age, and who still enjoys outings such as this. She spent the day on the shore, and was greeted by many friends. Running races were heartily entered into by both young and older sports-loving people, the tug-of-war by young women against the older ones, and the same by the young men against the older ones, proved that the old folks have more pulling power than the young, as the elders won in each case. Motor boat races thrilled the hearts of many. The main participants in these were Bernice Wanamaker, C. Hicks, and Carl Wanamaker, the latter proving that he could handle his motor equally as well as the former. Both boats skimmed the surface of the water, and many people enjoyed a trip on the beautiful lake. At tea time a contest in eating was heartily entered into by several young men, and everyone was wondering what kind of capacity these fellows had. Earl Thompson won the contest by a large margin. Bathing was enjoyed throughout the day by the children and young folk. The lodge provided orange crush and ice cream for everyone partake of at will. TELEVISION'S MAGIC WINDOW

Twenty years ago a demonstration was given in London by Mr. J. L. Baird to several members of the Royal Institution, Mr. Baird used some apparatus which he called his "Televisor." A ventriloquist's dummy was placed in a room in front of one part and people in another room were able to watch the movements of the dummy with a viewing device. The two parts could be likened to the mouthpiece and the earpiece of a wireless telephone. People had even the face of the dummy, and actual human faces and movements, by wireless.

Previous inventors had succeeded in crude experiments before that time, including Professor Korn of Berlin, Nipkow, and Francis Jenkins, but Mr. Baird's demonstration had shown that television by wireless could be realized.

Television was really seeing by telegraph and although immense advances have been made in this wonderful new science, it is interesting to know how very similar the apparatus of to-day is in principle to the apparatus shown twenty years ago by Lucie Baird. Even the complicated electron scanner with its mosaic or tiny protocells is based on suggestions given years ago by Campbell Swinton.

In Baird's original transmitter the object to be televised was placed in front of a disc pierced by a spiral of were set a number of small lenses, each one a little nearer to the centre than the previous one. The effect was to pass over a photo-cell set behind the disc a small image of the object in a series of parallel strips or bands. Behind the scanning disc was placed a neon lamp which chopped up light as it passed to the photocell. By this means a rapid succession of light impulses fell upon the cell, each depending on the brightness of a particular little segment of the object being televised.

Thanks to the wireless valve of Sir Ambrose Fleming and other wireless advances, it was possible to convert the impressions received by the photo-cell electric eye into wireless signals of corresponding strength. The receiving instrument picked up these signals, and after being amplified by valves, they were made to control the brightness of a neon electric glow-lamp. In front of this lamp was another disc, with holes arranged exactly as in the scanning disc of the transmitter; it ran at precisely the speed, in exact step, as the remarkably improved pictures televised to-day?

There are at least sixty different methods of scanning, to begin with. Discs and drums, with little holes or mirrors, drums with tiny mirrors, arranged spirally, mirror "screws," cathode ray scanners, and so on.

The crude and blurred images of the early experimenters have given place to sharply-defined and quite complicated pictures, thanks to the use of short-wave wireless and its far higher frequencies. Most important of all is the development of the cathode ray tube, in which a pencil of cathode rays is drawn with incredible speed over the surface of a zinc sulphide screen, forming a luminous picture of great fidelity.

The movements of a cathode beam can be directed with the utmost precision backwards and forth upon the screen, up or down covering the entire surface twenty-five times a second or more as the case may be four hundred lines or bands, by means of tiny electric or magnetic deflectors. The keeping in exact step of the transmitting and viewing instruments or "synchronism" — has been elegantly arranged, and distortion of the image has more or less disappeared. The single pencil of cathode rays is now used to sweep the surface of a mosaic of hundreds of tiny photo-cells in transmitting any scene, thus giving us a television camera which can be transported from place to place. This enables us to watch in our homes the Victory Parade and, with a huge network of televisors is built up over the world, to see the interest-filled events of the day as they are taking place everywhere.

PARENTS HOPE FOR FLIER'S SAFETY

Hope that their son, Flight-Sergt. Roland Saunderscock, 20, missing since March 16th, 1945, may still be alive, has been expressed by Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Saunderscock, Collins Bay.

Mr. and Mrs. Saunderscock were advised that their son was missing, presumed dead, following an operational flight over Nurnberg, Germany, but since they have received no official notice of his death they now feel that he may be confined to a hospital in Europe, possibly suffering from amnesia.

HELD ON SHOOTING CHARGE

Kingston. — Kenneth Loyst, 33, of Kaladar, Frontenac County, Game Overseer, was remanded for a week when he appeared before Magistrate A. B. Collin on Monday on a charge of assault causing actual bodily harm.

Loyst was he'd on what police termed a "holding charge" following the wounding of Alvin Herron, of Arden, in a dance hall brawl at Crotch Lake on Friday night. Herron, who underwent an operation in Great War Memorial Hospital, Perth, to remove a bullet from his stomach, was given a 50-50 chance of survival. Physicians said on Monday his condition was improving.

Provincial Constable Ernest Keays, of Belleville, one of the officers who arrested Loyst said the information obtained by police revealed only that a fight occurred shortly after 9 o'clock and that some one flashed a revolver and a shot struck Petersen in the abdomen. Names of participants in the brawl had been obtained by police, he said.

British railway stations are dens of gloom and badly need brightening up, said a speaker addressing the Association of Health and Pleasure Resorts, at Eastbourne, Eng.

SEARCH PR. EDWARD FOR ESCAPEE FROM PENITENTIARY

Search of the Huff Island swamp for Henry Lafortune, who escaped from Portsmouth Penitentiary, was virtually abandoned over the week-end after a heavy fog had covered Prince Edward County and given the North Bay convict every chance to escape.

Despite the fact Provincial Police, penitentiary guards and private citizens searched miles of the swamp-land, not the faintest trace of the lumberjack-convict has been found since he was last seen Friday by Howard Lough, youthful ex-airman-farmer, on his father's property, a few miles from Mountain View.

An organized search on Friday, brought farmers out with shotguns, rifles and even clubs. With the police and penitentiary guards, who had motored from Kingston, they waded through the deep swamps with water up to their waists in some cases, and then combed every inch of the numerous corn fields, without success.

Lough told police that, with his father, he had run across the man on an oat field on the farm. Lafortune, he said, had evidently been asleep for his coat was rain-rimmed.

Later, young Lough, who had a record of 41 operational flights overseas, telephoned police he learned that the man he had talked to was the escaped convict.

According to police, Lafortune was sentenced to seven years in penitentiary for housebreaking and robbery. He is described as about five feet, nine inches, tall, weighs about 175 pounds and is bald. He wears a shave. Howard Lough said he was wearing a gray sweatshirt with a navy-blue jacket when he left and he stole a car in Picton and reached this area before abandoning it.

Tamworth, August 19. — The annual picnic was held on Sunday by the members of the local I. O. O. F. Lodge to Beaver Lake, on Mr. Nevil's grounds. A large attendance was present and the two long tables were laden with good things to eat to which everyone did justice. Several sports were enjoyed by all children from three to 60 years of age. The oldest person on the grounds was Mrs. Coxall, who is 92 years of age, and who still enjoys outings such as this. She spent the day on the shore, and was greeted by many friends. Running races were heartily entered into by both young and older sports-loving people, the tug-of-war by young women and the older ones, also the same by the young men against the older ones, proved that the old folks have more pulling power than the young, as the elders won in each case. Sack potato races thrilled the hearts of many. The main participants in these were Bernice Wannamaker, of Wagar, and Carl Wanamaker, the latter proving that he could handle a motor cycle as well as his dad. Other boats skimmed the surface of the water, and many people enjoyed a trip over the beautiful lake. At tea time a contest in eating was heartily entered into by several young men, and everyone was wondering what kind of capacity these fellows have. Earl Thompson won the contest by a large margin. Bathing was enjoyed throughout the day by the children and young folk. The lodge provided orange crush and ice cream for everyone to partake of at 8 o'clock, and several people were heard to remark on the generosity of the lodge in giving treats. A perfect day favored the assembly, and all went home feeling the good of the outing.

TELEVISION'S MAGIC WINDOW

Twenty years ago a demonstration was given in London by Mr. J. L. Baird to several members of the Royal Institution. Mr. Baird used some apparatus which he called his "Televisor." A ventriloquist's dummy was placed in a room in front of one part and people in another room were able to watch the movements of the dummy with a viewing device. The two parts could be likened to the mouthpiece and the earpiece of a wireless telephone. People had seen the face of the dummy, and actual human faces and movements, by wireless.

Previous inventors had succeeded in transmitting pictures as well at this time, including Professor Ruhmer of Berlin, Ninkow, and Francis Jenkins, but Mr. Baird's demonstration had shown that television by wireless could be realized.

Television is really seeing by telegraph and although immense advances have been made in this very new science, it is interesting to know how very similar the apparatus with a viewing device and

A CLOSE-UP OF A COUNTRY IN CHAOS

BY ALEXANDER CLIFFORD
In The Transatlantic Daily Mail

The great double-lane auto bahn sweeps in its lordly way across the landscape of waving corn. There are hens and ducks and cattle round the fine old farmhouse.

The girls wear gay summer dresses (don't forget the German Army had five years of profitable shopping round Europe). There is even smoke drifting from the distant chimneystacks.

It is less hard in Germany to realize that you are driving through an economic rubbish heap. A great country runs down slowly, but Germany is running down and coming to pieces.

Humpty-Dumpty has had a great fall — and the Foreign Ministers in Paris were still not certain whether they even wanted to put Humpty-Dumpty together again.

You can go and browse among the charts and graphs and statistics in the Allied information rooms in Germany, and at first glance you may get the impression that things are going well rather than badly. The graphs seem to slope upwards on the whole.

In many cases the desirable figures seem to be rising and the undesirable figures sinking.

But you must notice two things. Most production graphs begin at the zero of VE-Day and the only direction they can go is upwards. And now, without having got very far, they are beginning to level off. In other words, Germany has reached about the highest level she can in present circumstances, and that is very low indeed.

It is a country going to pieces. It is a country of sick and starved old men and women, of overworked and desperate housewives, of no young men and no babies.

Germany is minus something like 7,000,000 of her young men, one half killed and the other half in prison camps. Most of those left behind were either too sickly or too maimed to be good troops. Now they are undernourished into the bargain.

So there you get bad vital statistics to begin with. A very high death-rate, a very low birthrate, rising disease, lowering stamina. A bad basis for any country's economy.

So work is slow and unprofitable. Too much of the country's feeble strength is wasted by undernourished people foraging painfully in the countryside, for food.

The production figures of coal — and coal is the black-gold key to recovery — are slipping down again. The miners cannot produce more so much. Their absentee figures are around 20 per cent., of which half is attributable to illness. But many miners are constantly taking days off to go and look for food for their families.

Machinery is not being replaced and cannot be. There are no raw materials. First priority for coal is given to export and to the needs and comforts of the occupying armies. The little that remains cannot even drive what German industry there is.

But that is not the worst. The body is quartered and the blood cannot flow. Germany is being throttled by artificial economic frontiers.

The British zone can manufacture but it cannot eat. The French zone cannot do enough of either. The American zone comes nearer to eating, but it cannot manufacture. The Russian zone should be able to eat, and is probably the best off as an economic unit.

Industrially, the country is dragging itself along, living on capital that barely exists. The outlook is hopelessly confused by our slow-motion policy of destroying possible war plants and taking machinery away as reparations. In their zone the Russians have already done it, and industry there does at least know where it stands and on what basis it can plan. In our zone it is still in the balance.

Financially the country is bewildering. Officially the mark has kept its value better than any currency in the world. The cost of living in the Germans tend to call it the cost of dying, these days) has scarcely risen. You need only a few shillings to buy your week's official food, such as it is, which is a good thing, for it means that the very poorest can afford to eat.

But it is entirely artificial. The country is full of idle money looking for something to buy and prices that are not legally fixed are ludicrous.

No one has an independent income any more; almost no one has a pension. A very high proportion of the population is unemployable. So when savings are exhausted the treasures have to be sold.

There is a vast internal debt. Germany has still got to pay the cost of the war in reparations. Taxation has got itself higher than 100 per cent. in some instances, so that businesses are exhausting their capital.

It is a crazy financial world where cigarettes are the only real currency apart from the taken five marks which you need for your week's rations.

The cheapness of the rations has another effect. A worker can earn his week's rations in a morning. With the rest of his week's wages he can buy nothing worth buying. So the young men who are leaving school in Germany today find the idea of a job wholly unattractive.

There is neither a carrot in front of these youngsters nor a stick behind. They prefer to dabble in the Black Market and hang around the Allied troops in the hope of picking something up. After all, one cigarette will buy the whole rations.

The cigarette has become almost a religion, a fetish — it has become a currency to the extent that cigarettes will pass from hand to hand until they are no longer smokable. There is a joke that the field cabbler is the loneliest man in Berlin. The British Forces never draw more from him — they sell a packet of cigarettes instead.

This cigarette - worshipping idleness among the young men may be the start of an utter demoralization. Germany can go morally to the dogs as thoroughly as she does everything else—she gave a proof of it after World War One.

And there is another complementary aspect. Germany is minus some 7,000,000 young men. The occupation troops are the only well-fed, energetic young men in Germany. It is inevitable that the German girls should flock to comort with the Allies even though marriage with them is still supposed, very dubiously, to be illegal.

Among themselves, what will the Germans do? They have no amusement in life, no hope, no raw material for entertainment. The older people are afraid that the young ones will fling themselves into the narcotic pleasures that are free and easy — sex, and all night dancing as their strength will stand.

Agriculture is going downhill, for lack of fertilizers and new machinery.

The country is slipping to rack and ruin. There is infinite work to be done, roads to be repaired, and an unthinkable amount of rubble to be cleared. But somehow it is scarcely even being started.

Germany today is far below industry which Poverello decreed for her, and on present form there is little hope of her ever reaching up to it.

Mrs. Mildred and Miss Helen Armstrong were hostesses to the members and guests of the Woman's Association for the August meeting. The president, Mrs. Fred McFarlane, presided and opened the meeting with the theme song and prayer was offered by Mrs. Adam Scott. The scripture was read by Mrs. Robert Cook. The roll call was responded to by twenty members and fifteen visitors, with an enjoyable An invitation was read by the secretary and accepted, to visit the Lime Lake W. A. on September 3rd. The members assumed the responsibility of paying this appointment's share of the minister's moving expenses and the pension fund.

Miss Helen Armstrong, social convener, conducted the following program, which was enjoyed by all: an old-time song, led by Rev. Duquette, recitation by Katharine Cook, vocal duet by Mrs. W. J. Hello Folks:—

In the park, down by the river, or in your own back yard, move out under the sky for an occasional picnic. For there's ease and good fellowship found in eating outdoors that just cannot happen inside four walls.

If it's possible to have a small fire, take weiners, corn and coffee. The boy scout of to-day or yesteryear will enjoy helping in this cooking venture. He can build the fire while the picnic cloth is spread out and the limited supply of dishes arranged within everyone's reach. The rest of the meal can be old-fashioned potato salad, cucumber sticks, small tomatoes, bottles of mustard, salt, pepper and the dessert of fat ginger cookies and fresh peaches. You may forget (on purpose) the sugar, but a bottle of cream for the coffee is a treat.

By the way we suggest you leave on the inner husks of the corn and peel them back far enough to rub off the silk and pull back over the corn — then weiners and corn can go in same black iron pot.

Here are some more picnic ideas:

1 Bologna heated in spicy tomato sauce, sliced thick and served on toasted buns with corn nibiets.
2 Hamburgers are a natural picnic feast. Make them into patties at home, carry between layers of waxed paper.
3 Stuffed eggs have many variations. Try devilling them by an old recipe. Mix yolks of four eggs, one-quarter teaspoon salt, half-teaspoon mustard, one-quarter teaspoon of cayenne pepper, one teaspoon vinegar and one tablespoon of salad dressing. Fill halves and stick together again. Vary by adding prepared horseradish, minced meat and parsley.
4 Apples, onions, and potatoes, taste better cooked outdoors, for a change.
5 Man - sized sandwiches and pickles.
7 Scalloped potatoes in an ovenproof dish with mushroom soup should be wrapped in several thicknesses of newspaper and carried wherever you picnic to stay hot.
8 After peeling tomatoes, pack them in a wide mouthed jar and chill in electric refrigerator. Wrap the jar in paper to keep tomatoes cool.
9 Macaroni Salad:: Cook one nine ounce package elbow macaroni till it's done. Hold under cold water a moment, then drain. Add one chopped sweet pickle, one chopped onion, one diced cucumber soaked in French dressing, three sliced hard-cooked eggs, salt and pepper to taste. Toss together with salad dressing and chill. Serves four.
10 If it's not too late for fried chicken — there's nothing better in an open skillet.
11 Don't forget to put out the picnic fire pouring on water and scraping it aside, then pouring on more water. Trace any sparks and put out any smoldering smudge.
12 Leave the park area as you would want to see it when you found the setting.

Supper Menus A Real Problem

Supper menus are a real problem at any time of year, but with the thermometer soaring in the eighties such difficulties are crippled. People who work must eat, and unfortunately most people must continue to work whatever the temperature. They must have the right food whether it be hot or cold, but as the weather changes there is a decided difference in the appeal of certain foods. Hot baked beans and meat dishes are excellent for winter zero weather, but vegetables with eggs and cheese in salads or casserole dishes tempt the appetite in summer.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, suggest these dishes for summer suppers:

VEGETABLE MARROW CASSEROLE

One and one-half cups of milk, one cup stale bread crumbs, one cup grated cheddar cheese, half-teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, two eggs, well beaten, twelve sliced vegetable marrow (one medium marrow), two tablespoons chopped onion.

Scald milk, pour over bread crumbs, add cheese, salt and pepper. Let stand half an hour. Then add well beaten eggs. Arrange the vegetable marrow slices in a greased casserole. Sprinkle with chopped onion. Pour milk and egg mixture over. Set in a pan of warm water and oven poach in a moderate oven 350 deg. F., for one hour or until custard is firm. Six servings.

EGGS AU GRATIN

Four cooked potatoes, half-cup milk, four green onions (half-cup chopped), salt and pepper, six hard cooked eggs, halfcup grated cheese.

Slice potatoes into a greased casserole. Heat milk and pour over potatoes. Cover top with sliced green onions. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cover and bake in a moderately hot oven 375 deg. F., for twenty-five minutes. Cut eggs in half-lengthwise. Arrange on potatoes, cover with the grated cheese. Return to the oven and bake for ten minutes in a moderately slow oven, 325 deg. F., to heat eggs and melt the cheese. Six servings.

LIVER STUFFED EGGS

Eight hard cooked eggs, one cup minced, cooked liver, three tablespoons chili sauce, salt and pepper to taste, two cups medium white sauce (hot).

Shell eggs and cut in half. Remove yolks and mix with liver blended with chili sauce. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Fill whites with the yolk mixture and reheat in the white sauce. Serve on toast. Serves four.

Eggs may be placed in a casserole covered with the sauce, sprinkled with some of the crumbled egg yolk and reheated in a moderate, 350 deg. F., oven.

BERRIES

The word berry is used to describe succulent or pulpy fruits containing many seeds. The commonly used berries are classed as small fruits and include gooseberries, raspberries, strawberries, blueberries, blackberries, huckleberries and many other types developed from these.

Nothing makes a more delightful dessert than a big bowl of fresh berries, either wild or from the garden, particularly if the children have helped to pick them. They are specially good at this kind of work provided they are supervised by a grown-up, since otherwise they are apt to eat more than their share and come home with half-full pails. Not everyone has access to a berry patch but our summer markets offer a generous choice of berries of all kinds in season.

Berries should never be washed until ready to use since they deteriorate more quickly after being washed and berries should always be washed before hulling and stemming.

Some of the berries may be canned, others made into jam or jelly. Luscious desserts are also prepared with the fresh or cooked fruit. Fruit juices for use in cool drinks or canned for next winter's social gatherings may also be extracted from the berries.

The home economists of the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture offer recipes making use of seasonal berries.

BLUEBERRY CRISP

Four cups blueberries, one-quarter cup sugar, two teaspoons lemon or rhbarb juice, two tablespoons butter or mild-flavoured fat, one-quarter cup flour, one-quarter cup brown sugar, three-quarters cup quick-cooking oats.

Wash blueberries, place in a greased baking dish, add sugar, and sprinkle with juice. Combine fat, flour, brown sugar and quick-cooking oats and spread the mixture over the top of the blueberries. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 deg. F., until berries are soft and top is golden brown, about forty minutes. Serve hot. Six servings.

BLUEBERRY PUFFS

One tablespoon lemon juice, two cups fresh blueberries, one cup of sifted all-purpose flour, two tablespoons baking powder, one-quarter teaspoon salt, two tablespoons shortening, half-cup granulated sugar, one egg unbeaten, one-quarter cup of milk.

Mix lemon juice and berries. Place in six custard cups. Sift together flour, baking power and salt. Cream shortening. Add sugar gradually, while continuing to stir until light. Add egg and beat well. Add dry ingredients and milk all at once. Stir until just mixed. Spread batter over berries. Bake in hot oven of 400 deg. F., thirty minutes or until done. Turn out onto dessert plates, serve warm with top milk, custard or vanilla sauce. Serves six.

HONEY RED CURRANTS WHIP

One tablespoon gelatine, one-quarter cup of water, three cups red currants, one-quarter cup of honey, one-quarter cup sugar, half-cup water, two egg whites, pinch of salt.

Soak gelatine in the one-quarter cup of water. Put two and one-half cups of currants through a sieve or stir in honey and sugar, then add half-cup of water. Bring slowly to the boil, remove from the stove and add gelatine, stirring until it dissolves. Place mixture in a bowl in the refrigerator and chill until partially set. Beat egg whites with salt until stiff but not dry and add to gelatine mixture, beating slightly with rotary beater until fluffy. Pour into a mold or individual molds rinsed in cold water. Chill until firm. Unmould and garnish with the half-cup of fresh currants. Six servings.

NOTE: A custard sauce may be made using the two egg yolks and served with the whip.

Readers may direct their questions, giving their name and address and mentioning the name of this paper, to Information Branch, WPTB, 490 Sussex St., Ottawa, Ontario.

Q. I heard that it is no longer necessary to obtain a priority for a new car. Is this correct?

A. Yes! Effective August 15, issuance of priority certificates and the priority system of distribution was discontinued. All priorities previously issued for new cars and trucks have also been cancelled.

Q. Earlier this year we made reservations at a summer hotel. The price quoted was $19 per person per week. When we checked out of the hotel we were charged $6 more than the price originally stated. The proprietor explained that he had been allowed to increase his price 10 per cent. due to increased operating costs. He also removed one butter, one sugar and one meat coupon from each ration book, although we only remained twelve days. Is there anything we can do about this?

A. Summer hotels come under the Rentals Regulations the same as any other type of accommodation. The hotel would not be allowed to increase their rates without first securing permission from the Board and we will investigate these charges at once. As far as ration coupons are concerned, the hotel proprietor had no right to remove these coupons from your book. Coupons may only be taken when a person remains at a hotel for a period of two weeks or more. The Board will also check on this practice if complaints are properly made.

Q. Can you tell me the maximum interest a pawnbroker is allowed to charge on a 30-day loan?

A. The Wartime Prices and Trade Board does not have a regulation governing this subject. Interest rates, etc. come under the jurisdiction of Federal and Provincial pawnbrokers' laws.

Q. The other day I overheard someone speaking of a temporary ration card. Could you tell me just what a temporary ration card is and to whom they are issued?

A. Temporary ration cards are used by persons not requiring a complete book and are issued to members of the armed forces, tourists, or used as a replacement for a lost book while waiting for a new one.

Collapsing Wall Kills Two Men Tuesday Morning

Men Were Demolishing Old Granary on Mill Street

William Sherman, and Norman Simpson, of Hay Bay, both a little over 50 years of age, were killed almost instantly, about 10:30 a.m. on Tuesday of this week, when a thirty-foot stone wall collapsed and fell on them, while they were at work demolishing the old VanLuven granary on Mill Street, just east of John Street.

Edmund Simpson, aged 17 years, son of Norman Simpson, escaped with injuries on his legs. Two other boys, Lorne Amey and Fred Sherman, who were also working near the wall, escaped injury.

Tons of large pieces of rock collapsed, without warning, while the two men were engaged in removing lumber from the old building. The part of the wall which collapsed was at the front of the building. A large quantity of stone and gravel, which formed the fill-in for a ramp from the street level, was part of the material which collapsed with the stone wall.

The trapped men were buried under the stone and were dead when the stone had been removed from them, which took about half an hour.

Early this year the old granary, which had been standing for possibly seventy-five years, had been purchased from Arthur Kimmerly by Brice Davis, who was demolishing the building and using the material to erect a service station on the land just west. Most of the roof had been removed and a large portion of the lumber inside the front of the building had been torn out, which evidently weakened the wall.

William Sherman was unmarried and lived with his brother, Frank. Norman Simpson was married and leaves a wife, two sons and four daughters.

Coroner Dr. T. M. Galbraith was called, and an inquest will likely be held.

Britons Seize Nazi Camp Huts

Three hundred German war prisoners billeted in other buildings slept through the disturbance—latest episode in a countrywide invasion of government property by desperate squatters' seeking a solution of Britain's acute housing problem.

WILL DISCONTINUE PRODUCER SUBSIDY ON MILK SEPT. 30TH

Ottawa, (C.P.) — The Federal Government has definitely decided to discontinue the producer subsidy on milk as from September 30th, Acting Finance Minister Abbott said in the Commons.

Mr. Abbott made the announcement in reply to a question of Mark Senn (PC-Haldimand).

The subsidy amounts to 55 cents per 100 pounds of whole milk.

Robert Mayhew, Parliamentary Assistant to the Finance Minister, told R. S. Moore (CCF-Churchill) that no change was contemplated in the Government milk subsidy policy announced last May.

At that time it was announced that the two-cent per quart milk subsidy for consumers would be discontinued as from June 1st and the producer subsidy would be discontinued as from the end of September.

It was also announced that control of milk prices would be returned to the control of Provincial Milk Boards as from June 1st.

GANANOQUE AND LIONS JUVENILES EVEN SERIES

After taking a 9-0 facing in Gananoque, the local Lions entry in the Juvenile O.B.A. came through with one of the best games that has been witnessed at the Lions operated Gibbard Park since the Park first began operating, by defeating the visitors 1-0 in a one-hit game.

Pinlay, for the local squad, drew the only hit and was scored on a passed ball, while he pitched a no-hit game for his club.

All through the game the local team had chances to score again but the visitors held them on the bases.

The final affair was scheduled for Saturday last at Gananoque, but the weatherman decided to give the grounds in that locality a good soaking from shortly after one o'clock until four, which turned the Gananoque sand 1'l into a quagmire, with the result the game had to be postponed until Wednesday (to-day).

Local Objective S. A. Home Front Appeal Set at $1100

Mayor Chalk Heads Local Committee

The local objective in The Salvation Army campaign for funds for the Home Front Work, which is to be inaugurated Sunday, September 15, has been set at $1,100.

Mayor George S. Chalk has accepted the position of chairman; Mr. George Nicol that of Treasurer and Mr. C. L. Graham, as publicity chairman. Heading up the committees in nearby communities are the following: Mr. Wessman, Deseronto; Mrs. Dupre, Selby; Mr. Simkins, Newburgh; Mr. Wright, Yarker.

The Napanee headquarters for the campaign will be at The Salvation Army Citadel, Mill Street.

The work which is being done throughout Canada by The Salvation Army is well known. In Napanee, The Salvation Army officers have rendered invaluable service throughout the years gone by, and especially during the depression years and the war years. No needy case, which has come to the attention of The Salvation Army has been shelved or disregarded. In an unspectacular manner, practical assistance has been rendered in innumerable instances. The Salvation Army officers have also always been found willing to cooperate in any community welfare project.

A canvass will be made by the officers and the campaign committee for funds, after the appeal has been launched, and the practical sympathetic support of all the citizens of the community, is earnestly solicited.

Letter From Norway Expresses Thanks For Clothing

The following letter was received by Mrs. Ronald Baker, from Mr. and Mrs. Halvorsen in Norway, who had received a parcel of clothing sent by Mrs. Baker:

Fredrikstad, Norway,
April 16th, 19466.

Mrs. Ronald Baker:

Hearty thanks for the sweater my husband received from America last April.

There were a lot of nice things in the parcel and all so welcome, as you cannot get anything here yet and your gift was our first after peace was declared. There has been a lot of food and clothing sent but the parcel from you was our first.

My husband is a sailor, engineer on a coast boat. He is 63 years old, I will be sixty in July. My husband has been very sick in the five years of war. He has been in the hospital four times in three years. He is still sick but is on his ship.

I hope somebody will translate this letter for you.

Again hearty thanks for our lovely gifts; we do appreciate your kindness. Best regards from my husband and myself.

Sincerely yours,
Lilly and Johan Halvorsen,
Mcim Gt. 39,
Fredrikstad, Norway.

P.S. Your name was on a tag in the sweater.

Roman Catholics Seek Obligatory Voting

Quebec, (C.P.) — The General Council of Roman Catholic Syndicates at a meeting held in Quebec last week, decided to submit to the next convention of the C.T.C.C. (Canadian Confederation of Catholic Workmen) a resolution favoring obligatory voting and issuance of identification cards to all voters.

The council also will ask its congress to seek amendment to the electoral law which would give workmen employed outside their constituencies the opportunity of voting in their divisions prior to the day of balloting, a privilege enjoyed by commercial travellers and railway employes.

Modification also will be sought in the Unemployment Insurance Act which would enable workmen to collect benefits while out on strike, in instances where a strike has been declared legal.

Record Attendance Expected Monday For Annual Races

Event is Sponsored by Rotary Club

Last year's record-breaking crowd of nearly 13,000 attendants at the Napanee Rotary Club sponsored motorcycle races, bids fair to being surpassed this year, according to information given out by the committee in charge of the event, which is to be held at the Napanee Driving Park, on Labor Day, Monday, September 2nd.

Nearly fifty entries for the races have been received and already many reservations have been made by visitors for accommodation in the town.

Preparations for the event have been under way for several weeks by the club's committee headed by Frank B. Mills. Valuable service in making the arrangements has been given by Mac Smith, who is in charge of the programme, and Bob Smith, who has been looking after the publicity, both of whom are motorcycle enthusiasts and were largely responsible for promoting the races both last year and this year.

OUTSTANDING COMPETITORS

Outstanding entrants for the races are Elwood Stillwell, Wilton Grove, who will ride a Ridge cycle; Al. Siganaski, Hamilton, riding a Harley; Bill Matthews, riding an Indian; George Prusse, Brantford, riding a Harley, and Walter Scott, Barrefield, on a Triumph. On July 1st this year Matthews broke the Canadian speed record for half - mile dirt track, at Oshawa, with a time of 31.7 seconds. Last year, the lap record in Napanee was 32.2 seconds.

Cash prizes totalling $1090 are being offered for the races: $1,000 being given by the Rotary Club and $90 by local citizens. Prizes for the various events are $10 to $6.00.

The races are being held with the sanction of the Canadian Motorcycle Association, which has allotted the three - mile Canadian championship competition to the Napanee event.

TRIALS IN MORNING

Time trials will be held from 10 a.m. to 12 noon, for eliminations, and seven prizes will be given to the top contestants in the time trials.

The afternoon races will start sharp on time at 1.00 p.m., and will include novice, amateur and expert classes, on two, three and four-mile trials.

The starter will be the well-known Harry Frith, of Toronto, and the timers will be Walter Andrews and P. E. Quench, of Toronto.

While the entrants are almost all Canadian this year, due to the fact that many races are being held in the United States, this season, the prize money is to be of equal interest to the event of last year.

Among the establishments which he will visit, as Eisenhower's guest, will be West Point.

U.K. WAGE RATES GO UP, WORK HOURS GO DOWN

London, (C.P.) — Wage rates in British industry now are three-fifths higher than before the war and wage and hour demands affecting thousands of workers are still pending.

Manufacturing plants, heart of the post-war export drive to carve out a huge advance trade balance, are operating seventy-four per cent more to their employees. The end must soon to come under Government management are paying an extra 104 per cent.

The average working week has fallen to 45.8 hours from 48.3 hours to 46.8, and the five-day week is becoming more common as reconversion progresses.

The extra wage bill, exclusive of overtime, and bonuses, is $15,000,000 ($60,000,000). Of that amount, nearly £2,000,000 was added in the first six months of 1946, and 5,000,000 workers benefitted.

Ministry of Labor estimates that the average weekly cash earnings in all industry, including agriculture at about £5 10s 3d ($22.25) this year compared with £3 0s 6d ($12.15) in 1939.

PREMIER DREW BLOCKS WINDSOR PICNIC PLANS

Toronto. — Premier Drew of Ontario announced Tuesday, that, because he learned that hotels contributed prizes, he has asked a committee in Windsor, Ont., to cancel all arrangements for a picnic Saturday which he and other members of the Ontario Government planned to attend. He also had insisted that the committee of the Windsor Progressive-Conservative Association return the prizes and other contributions.

"Having regard to the clearly stated policy of this Government, I did not think it was possible that such a situation would arise but so that there may be no possibility of a repetition at any time, the Government will introduce amendments to the Liquor License Act prohibiting contributions to any political organization or for political purposes of any kind from distilleries, breweries, wineries, hotels, or any other manufacturer or distributor of alcoholic beverages,' the Premier said.

"This morning on my return to the office I had drawn to my attention a program fro the picnic This program indicated contributions from a substantial number of hotels in the Windsor area. If these collections were authorized and received by the Progressive Conservative Association of Windsor, it marks a highly improper practice that the Government of the province cannot condone.

"Hotels are subject to licensing, supervision and discipline by an agency of the Ontario Government. It can only be regarded as most improper that hotels or other distributors of alcoholic beverages should be permitted to assist in the holding of an event of this kind under political auspices at any time."

Canberra (Reuters) — The conference of Prime Ministers of Australian states have agreed to Commonwealth proposals for admission of 70,000 immigrants to Australia each year.

ALUMINUM RECONVERTING KINGSTON SHEET MILL

A $456,000 extension to the Kingston sheet mill of the Aluminum Company of Canada, Ltd. will get under way immediately, according to an announcement made by the company. While the present sheet mill is producing 600 per cent more aluminum sheet than was consumed in Canada in 1939, the present-day demands far outstrip this capacity.

The Kingston mill was designed, for war production, in close liaison with the British Air Ministry, and in its present condition is not suitable for continued peace-time production on a large scale. The project will be completed in about eight months' time. In the meantime the problem of further increasing production is being continued study in an effort to meet ever-growing requirements of manufacturers of household products, electrical household items, transportation equipment, furniture, electrical equipment, and hundreds of other essential uses.

Allen, Adolphustown, Uses Rope to Land The Wily Lunge

There are other uses for a rope than hanging a man, bundling sticks, or unloading hay.

Take the veteran fisherman, A. Allen, of Adolphustown, for instance. He is a firm believer in the use of rope to trap the wily lunge. And it works.

Ordinary fishermen can use their fancy silk lines, and whist not, but give this old-timer a rope of musky haunts, a length of sturdy hemp and bait, and he will launch at his modern method of luring the fighting muskies.

And he doesn't dawdle over the fishing grounds. His white boat travels at the fastest speed than the ordinary lunge seeker would go—but it gets results.

One recent day, Allen using his trusty rope line hauled in a thirty-six pound beauty from the bay off his native village—and not satisfied with a haul like that, proceeded to get himself another beauty. The second lunge tipped the scales at thirty pounds, three ounces.

TWO OF A KIND

Two reports have appeared in the Press during the week which must leave the thoughtful reader with a feeling of resentment and bitterness. If they are true, such righteous indignation is justified. The first consists of two stories: one from Montreal and one from Toronto, to the effect that fruit and vegetables have been destroyed and dumped over the dumps in order to keep up the price of these foods, by creating an artificial scarcity. These reports should be probed to the bottom and the truth ascertained. If they are found to be true, then those who are responsible for such tragic, wanton destruction, should be punished to the full extent of the law.

A few weeks ago we commented on the destruction, in Scotland, of a great catch of fish. The reason given then was that the size of the catch was unexpected and the fish could not be taken care of for human consumption. While this was a serious waste of good food, yet there may have been some justification for it in the breakdown of the machinery of distribution. But this is far different from what has allegedly taken place in this Province, where it is said the fruit and vegetables were destroyed in order to keep up prices. There is a good crop of everything in this Province, and yet the housewife finds it difficult enough to get what she needs for her family, at prices she can afford. If there is a concerted movement on foot to get fruit and vegetables off the market to keep prices up, then this racket should be laid bare, and those engegad in it so severly punished they will refrain from repeating it.

The other report is that announced by a Member of Parliament, who told the House of Commons that he wanted to purchase a tent for Boy Scout work, but was told none were available from the War Assets Corporation; when he knew, all the time, that there were hundreds of tents available. We have personal knowledge of a philanthropic organization wanting to purchase from the military authorities some discarded bed springs for camp work. It was denied them and yet the springs were piled up in the open air and were rapidly deteriorating under the wind and rain. This sort of thing is reprehensible. There is no reason why these goods, now discarded by the military authorities, should not be made available to the public. They belong to the public. Our money purchased them; our taxes paid for them, our hard earnings went into them. We have a right to get them back at a price that is fair and just.

These two items, taken together, show the necessity of overhauling our whole economic system. If we have to destroy food to keep up prices, and keep other goods off the market to create a scarcity, then the quicker our Government moves to prevent this, the better. The people will not forever stand-by like dumb sheep and watch this process going on, without a protest.

WHOSE OX?

An old saying has it that it all depends on whose ox is gored. And there is more truth than fiction in the proverb — if we may call it a proverb. Great Britain has had a difficult job in India, for many years. She has not always been free from blame, but on the whole has tried to lead the people there, to achieve a place where self-government would be possible. Many people in The United States were ready to criticise and condemn Great Britain and to advise her to hurry out of India. Well, recent events there have shown how difficult is the problem. Offered self-government, absolute independence, the Hindus and Moslems began killing each other, because one party thought the other was getting a slight advantage in the new set-up.

Great Britain is having a lot of trouble in Palestine, where Jews and Arabs are both seeking to fish in troubled waters, and get while the getting is good. The leaders among the Jews of The United States have a lot of free advise to offer Great Britain about how to handle the situation. They fail to see, however, that unless a compromise between the Arabs and Jews is reached on the basis of reason, the riots of India would be duplicated in Palestine.

Now, however, the American Ox has been gored in Yugoslavia, and it is altogether different. American opinion rose in wrath—and justly so—over the shooting down of two American planes, and demands were made by the American Government in language that can hardly be called diplomatic.

The United States has never played a large part in International affairs. After the First World War she took an isolationist position and refused to assume any responsibility in The League of Nations, which was the child of that nation. Now, the scene has changed. The United States, by force of circumstance, has had to assume a large responsibility in Old World affairs. She is discovering that it is not all as easy as it sounds. It is quite one thing to sit on the side lines and offer advice; it is quite another to be one of the contestants.

We are quite sure that the Americans who have been so ready to tell Great Britain what to do, will perhaps be a little more sympathetic to her efforts, in the light of their own experience in Foreign Affairs.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT

One of the speakers at The Institute for International Affairs, at Lake Couchiching, last week, declared that the surest way of preventing overcentralization of government is by strengthening the local governments. Anyone who even casually observes the modern trend in governments, must be aware of the gradual assumption of power by the larger governing bodies. This is true all over the world. It is true in Canada. The Dominion Government is assuming powers that it has never, until recently, possessed. It is seeking to establish those powers with the consent of the Provinces. With the ability possessed by a Dominion Government to exert great financial pressure, the Provinces find it difficult to resist. The result may easily be that in a few years, the Provinces will find themselves shorn of many of the rights conferred upon them at Confederation.

The same is true of the Provincial-Municipal relations. More and more the Provincial Governments are injecting their influence into the Municipal and County organizations. They have much more power than the local Councils and can exert that power to their own advantage.

"There can be no doubt as to the necessity of watching this movement, and checking the encroachment of the larger bodies on the rights and responsibilities of the smaller ones. It may be that the time has come for a complete overhaul of the local Council set-up. County and Township Councils were organized in a day when travel was slow and when distances seemed great. It may be that the question of larger units should be considered. But if that is to be done, it should be done not by the Provincial Government, but by a Commission, representative of all groups. After all, there is something to be said on both sides.

The point stressed by the speaker at Couchiching, howeer, has another implication. If the effort to check over-centralization of government lies in strengthening the local Councils, then the citizens of a community must take a vital and personal interest in seeing that the right men are nominated and elected to these bodies. A Council becomes weak in proportion as public apathy increases. And there can be no discounting the lack of interest in politics that has marked the past few years. In Ontario, the Municipal, County and Township Councils have had a great history and an enviable record. That must be maintained. It can be maintained, only if the new voters are ready to take their place in politics, and as those who are older, take an active and intelligent interest in selecting and electing the men and women best qualified to serve the community.

A WALLOP IN SPUDS

Here we've been eating potatoes for a long time and never realized until recently what a wallop is packed in the humble tuber. But so it is! Human ingenuity knows no bounds. Restrictions on grain, out of which to make whiskey, sent the experts seeking other sources of supply. They found it in the spud and, if the present demand grows, instead of buying potatoes by the pound, we will probably be buying them by the ounce.

A lot of run-down farms in a certain section of Western New York State have been put on their feet since this new development got going. Cultivated intensively, they are now producing two, three hundred and even more bushels of spuds per acre. For which there is a ready market and a good price. So far in 1946, the liquor industry in the United States has absorbed 20,000 carloads — 16,000,000 bushels of potatoes, which produced 10,000,000 gallons of 190-proof spirits. Registered distilleries used 189,405,976 pounds of potatoes and potato products in June, 1946.

And so the potato assumes a new but questionable dignity. At the hands of clever men it is transformed along with wheat, barley, rye, from a nourishing food to an intoxicating beverage — which is the father of most of the crime in modern society.

PRINCESS MARGARET ROSE AT AGE OF 16 ENTERS NEW PHASE IN REGAL CAREER

BY ARTHUR NETTLETON

London. — Wednesday, August 21 was an important date in the Royal Family circle. It had been eagerly anticipated by one young royal lady in particular — Princess Margaret Rose, who on that date celebrated her sixteenth birthday.

During the last twelve months Her Royal Highness has made many new acquaintances and friendships. She has fulfilled public engagements with Princess Elizabeth, and in their leisure hours the two sisters have expanded their social activities very considerably.

With the exception of a few weeks last winter, when Princess Margaret was recovering from an illness, the royal daughters have rarely allowed a week to pass without attending one or two social functions for relaxation, visiting the theatre, or going to the cinema. The visits are regarded as a necessary antidote to the round of formality and routine which constitutes the remainder of their lives.

Princess Margaret has found these new social experiences unusually thrilling. They have been great adventures for her, and she has experienced them at a rather younger age than Princess Elizabeth ever did.

The delights of going to the theatre and dining informally were not permitted for the heiress of the Throne until she passed her eighteenth birthday, but Princess Margaret had been allowed to have that pleasure since her fifteenth birthday. On these occasions, though the royal sisters are attended by at least one lady-in-waiting, real formality is absent.

Indeed, the princesses have been known to turn up unannounced at a movie theatre, have obtained tickets at the paybox like all other patrons, and have occupied seats in the circle instead of taking a private "box!"

Princess Margaret's training for public duties, however, has not been relaxed. She still spends several hours each day in studying subjects which will help her to perform, in the not very distant future, the role mapped out for her, years ago. That role will not make her an understudy for her sister, but is intended to give her own spheres of activity and influence.

One of her hopes is that she may shortly be allowed to undergo a course of instruction in nursing, at one of the London hospitals — preferably a children's hospital. Keenly interested in all welfare work, and especially concerned with that relating to children, it will be made one of her foremost official patronages after her "coming out" in 1948.

Another step in her training will probably be more frequent informal visits to welfare centres, factories, and other places where she can gain a closer insight into the everyday lives of British subjects. She has already accompanied Princess Elizabeth on some visits of this sort, and the tours have fostered a desire for more.

Princess Margaret at these times has shown herself quick to grasp and understand the processes to which her attention has been drawn. There is no doubt that an extension of this part of her training would be useful in her future years, when she will be called upon to enter more fully into public life.

The last few months have also seen Her Royal Highness studying Empire topography and local customs with exceptional diligence. This aspect of her higher education has been fostered by the arrangements for the royal tour of South Africa later this year and the possibility of visits to other parts of the Empire.

The coming year will bring to Princess Margaret some changes which while not spectacular, will be nonetheless welcomed by her. At sixteen she will be due for promotion from the Girl Guides to the Sea Rangers, the senior branch of the girls' Sea Scout movement. There is little doubt that she will accept the chance, for Princess Elizabeth held the rank of "bosun" in the movement before she became Commodore of all Sea Rangers, in 1945.

Princess Margaret has continued to participate in Girl Guiding with the First Buckingham Palace Company and several of her closest friends are members. Their meetings often take place in the beautiful grounds of Frogmore, Windsor, and the nearby lake known as Virginia Water is ideal for Sea Ranger activities.

Other steps heralding the entry of Her Royal Highness into a more fuller role as a royal personage were taken some months ago. Among these measures was the designing of a special coat-of-arms for her. Consisting of the Royal Arms, with a label bearing heraldic devices symbolic of her regal status, the emblem also incorporates the Tudor Rose and the Thistle.

The inclusion of the latter flower is a reminder of Princess Margaret's strong Scottish connections. She was born at Glamis Castle, near Forfar, and has always had a deep affection for the country of her birth. In future years she may adopt Scotland as her special regal interest, in accordance with our Royal Family's policy of sharing out the many branches of British life which merit individual royal attention.

Scotland's special claim upon Her Royal Highness has been strengthened by the fact that not only was she born North of the Tweed, but most of her birthday anniversaries have been celebrated there, as well. The reason is partly that the date often coincides with the royal summer holiday at Balmoral, but Scottish folk see in the coincidence another proof of Princess Margaret's love for the Land of the Thistle.

One disappointment to Her Royal Highness this year is that the continued difficulties of the food situation still presented big problems in the birthday entertainments. Like every other household in Britain, the royal palaces are subject to strict rationing, and they can be no discrimination even for a princess' celebrations.

But by careful management it has been found possible to save sufficient ingredients for a birthday cake, and if the party menu lacks the variety of normal times, the event will nevertheless be a happy one.

Further, not all the weight of post-war austerity robbed the Princess of the good wishes that came to her from all over the globe.

LOBBYISTS AT PARIS

BY RELMAN MORIN
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris — A battalion of lobbyists, special pleaders and back-door agents as typical of peace conferences as pincenez spectacles and portfolios is storming Luxembourg Palace.

All have something to sell. What they have in common is the hope of talking newspapermen into carrying the ball for their cause.

A blond and beautiful lady from the Balkans was round to see us the other day. Her eyes were blue, her voice low and creamy in the Barbo tradition, said she:

"All we ask is that you tell the world what the Slovaks have been doing to us."

A grey-haired gentleman of distinction waits behind a marble pillar. He steps in front of you, fixes you with his eye, and announces: "I represent Truth."

Outside the stone archway that leads into the courtyard, a peppery little lady appears daily, terrorizing tough French gendarmes with her efforts to reach the delegates.

She speaks French with a powerful but unidentifiable accent. As each limousine arrives, she tries to push past the policeman, and she yells, in effects, "Yeah, yeah, yeah—what about Venezia Giulia?"

Even the delegates occasionally invite you for a drink to "tell you something special." It generally goes like this:

"Say, why dont you write the real story of what is happening in there? Why don't you give the inside?"

"Of course, you understand I can't be quoted. You've got to leave me strictly out of this. But the fact is—"

The fact is he wants you to say something he is afraid to say himself. His 'inside' is a load of dynamite that he wants planted somewhere.

He won't be around when the explosion comes.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, SEPTEMBER 1ST, 1946

"JESUS AND THE RIGHT USE OF PROPERTY"

Lesson Text: Exodus 20: 15. Proverbs 30: 7-9. Matthew 6: 25-33

The Ten Commandments condemn stealing. Every civilized country has a law against stealing. Nothing but lawlessness would result in a community where everybody could help themselves to what belonged to another. That reverence for property has become pretty well ingrained in us. Few people—comparatively few—are tempted to become thugs. Few people—comparatively few—walk into others' homes and help themselves to what belongs to neighbors.

Of course, there are other ways of stealing, about which we are not so particular — dipping into the petty cash; padding the expense account; stealing things across the border when visiting the United States. — Workmen stealing time from the firm; coming in late, leaving early. Owners stealing from the workmen: low wages, long hours. Manufacturers stealing from the public: high prices; artificial scarcities. Yes! there are hundreds of ways in which stealing goes on, day after day — and people who would never think of taking a clock from his neighbour's mantel, will think nothing of stealing in these other ways. In a commercialized society like ours, there are more serious ways of stealing than merely walking off with a piece of property that does not belong to one.

The next section in to-day's lesson is from the Book of Proverbs. The writer prays for two requests: the first is that God would keep him from falsehood and lies, and the other that he might be kept from having great riches. No one would object to the first, but few people would pray that they do not have riches. However, the writer seems to have penetrated deeply into human experience. He knows the danger that lurks in the possession of riches so far as they affect religion. There is a subtle influence in possession which can only be offset by a profound faith in God in the purpose of human life. Only people of character and Christian faith can withstand this subtle influence of riches.

In the final section of the lesson Jesus gives two principles for decisions. We are not to interpret Jesus' statement that we should take no thought for the morrow as an attack on forethought, nor a defence of improvidence. "But," is the definite assertion that anxiety about temporal things eats at a man's strength and steals time that should be devoted to more important things which mean the difference between mere existence and the fulness of living.

Jesus lifts this whole question to the highest level, when He says we are to seek, first, the Kingdom of God. That is the positive approach. The Commandments are negations: "Thou shalt not." Jesus puts it positively: "Thou shalt." The positive side of not stealing is sharing. "Thou shalt love one another, and seek first the Kingdom of God." How can that be done without sharing?

This is a great time for sharing. It was never so needed. Half the world is hungry, while we have more than we need. There is a great shortage of certain commodities in this country, but they are not being made — for people are speculating for advantage and unwilling to share the profits which come from the full operation. People with lots of this world's goods are not sharing as they should, consequently the making unbearable burdens of them. Income tax takes a lot, and other taxes relieve men of money, and make sharing compulsory: hence old age pensions, workmen's compensation, widows and orphans' pensions, baby bonuses and all the modern social legislation.

The Church has a special sphere of operations: caring for those who need its help and comfort spreading sunshine in dark corners of life, bringing joy and happiness to hundreds of people; and yet, the church is always hampered for lack of money. A tenth of one's income given to the Lord, is an admirable way to share with others.

Alberta Farmers Await Strike Action

Edmonton, (C.P.) — About 97,000 Alberta farmers anxiously awaited the final outcome of a three-day discussion by officials of the Alberta Farmers' Union on the proposed delivery strike of all farm products by more than 20,000 members of its organization.

The remainder of the 95,000 organized farmers in Alberta had not, to-date, shown any great sympathy with the proposed strike, but what their reaction would be should the strike take place, is not known.

The union's discussion on the possible future action in their bid for parity prices of farm products is being attended by thirty delegates, comprising the union's board of directors, executive and central strike committee.

CROYDON

STELLA

Stella, August 26. — Threshing operations are progressing rapidly throughout the township. With eight threshing outfits running, the fields are rapidly being stripped of stooks. Grain is yielding well, and is of good quality. A large quantity of timothy has been cut and threshed. The seed has been running a ready sale.

The dry weather has proved very hard on the potato crop, corn and gardens. Also pastures have dried up, seriously decreasing the supply of milk at the cheese factories.

DORLAND

Dorland, August 24. — The cool, cloudy weather we are getting makes it seem as if summer had gone and autumn has arrived a month ahead of time.

The showers continue light and spotty, and vegetation is shorter and more dried in appearance, and will are getting low. Late crops are likely to be quite a disappointment. Threshing is nearing completion and the grain crop is the best in several years, so, unless a great deal of feed has to be used this fall there will not be a serious shortage.

Tomato picking has begun, but will not to be as heavy as early appearances indicated.

Mrs. L. L. Price has returned to her home at Selby, after spending a few days with her sister-in-law, Mrs. W. J. Magee.

Miss L. Carr was hostess to a well attended meeting of the Woman's Association on Wednesday evening.

Fld. Marshal Jan Smuts Attends Second Parley

Paris. — Field Marshal Jan Smuts, Prime Minister of South Africa, took his seat at the Paris conference and thus became the only statesman among the representatives of Allied countries who was also at the Versailles peace-making after the First Great War.

Wearing uniform and escorted by Maj.-Gen. Frank H. Theron, deputy leader of the South African delegation, the 76-year-old Field Marshal was warmly greeted by several delegates as he made his way down the aisle of the conference chamber at Luxembourg Palace.

He took his place in the middle front row of the semicircle of seats and listened to Albania present her claims for reparations for war claims.

GIRL GUIDES NEWS

Napanee Girl Guides who attended camp at Carruthers Point, three miles west of Kingston, on the shore of Lake Ontario, from August 14th to 31st, spent a very enjoyable, as well as profitable week. Fifty-five Guides and Guiders from Eastern Ontario met there.

The camp site took on temporarily the name of Sherwood Forest, known as Robin Hood's famous retreat in the ancient forest of Nottingham, and all the officers in charge bore fictitious names from the story of Robin Hood.

Officers in charge were: Commandant Robin Hood (Mrs. G. A. Platt), Kingston. Assistant - Commandant Allen A Dale (Doris Sumner), Quartermaster, FriarTuck (Mrs. W. Wilson), Napanee; Nurse Maid Marion, (Mrs. E. R. Muir, Kingston); Will Scarlet, handicraft instructress (Lorraine Williams); swimming instructress Little John (Patsy Meikle).

The theme for the week in the Forest was "If you wish to be happy all the day, make someone else happy that is the way!" Girl Guide camp site artistically painted, were tacked on trees and posts throughout the grounds. The motto included reminders on punctuality, neatness, courtesy, cheerfulness, honesty, loyalty, smiles and thoughtfulness.

There were fourteen tents pitched for the Guides, and to many, territory was a new and thrilling experience.

Arising at seven, each morning, the Guides had a complete program to keep them busy, every day. Swimming, handicrafts, badge work, rest periods, inspection and singing, were all part of the daily routine, with a camp fire every night at eight o'clock. Campfire was story - telling time, with a story told each night about a leading character from the book, Robin Hood. Taps and lights-out concluded each busy day at 8:30 p.m.

While in camp, the Guides and Guiders had an opportunity to try for the following badges: Country dancer, musik lover, swimmer, first and second class.

Those from Napanee who attended camp were: Mrs. Wilfrid Wilson, local Commissioner, Miss Barbara Caldwell, captain, who gave leadership in singing throughout the camp days; Sally Howitt; Dorothy Yake; Jean Knuth; Shirley Scrimshaw, and Janie Wilson.

Question and Answer Column

Readers may direct their questions, giving their name and address and mentioning the name of this paper, to Information Branch, WPTB, 400 Sussex St., Ottawa, Ontario.

Q. I heard that we would have to wait for our new ration books if they are not picked up during the distribution week. September 9th to 16th. Is this correct?

A. Yes! That is correct. Persons failing to apply for Ration Book No. 6 during time of distribution in their locality will have to wait until after September 29th before their application for a new book will be dealt with.

Q. We are a family of four and will receive about 20 lbs. of sugar when the extra sugar coupons are declared valid on September 29th. Why is it that we cannot get at least part of this sugar on September 9th, in order to can an extra supply of peaches?

A. There are not enough sugar coupons available in Ration Book 5 to take care of a further supply. Ration Book 6 will be valid on September 29th and the new sugar coupons in this book will be used for the purchase of this extra sugar. There are many late fruits which will still be available for canning purposes as late as September 29, and in the meantime you could use your complete supply of sugar for peaches knowing that you will be able to replace it.

Q. Are grocers allowed to charge the same price for various items and refuse to wrap them loosely?

A. The type of wrapping paper or bag has nothing whatever to do with the price of the articles purchased. At the present time there is a great shortage of both wrapping paper and paper bags and we have no doubt the grocer just did not have any. Customers have been urged to save paper bags and take them along when they shop in order to conserve paper.

Q. I have a piece of land about four acres, which I have rented for the last two years at $10 per year. Another party has offered me $25. Am I allowed to rent at a higher rate?

A. Yes! Farm properties are exempt from the price ceiling regulations. You could rent this land at whatever price you like.

Yes folks, it's quite true — many people have a small number of T.B. germs in their systems and are perfectly fit, but only when the body is misused and these germs increase does the situation become serious.— The only sure way to make certain you're free of tuberculosis is by having an X-ray. Be sure to arrange for a free X-ray in the survey to be held in Napanee, this Fall.

Richardson, Napanee, and Kenneth Russell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Sudds, of Kingston. Rev. C. D. McLellan officiated. Nuptial music was played by Mrs. B. M. Black and Mrs. Harold Denison was soloist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of white net over satin, with bouffant skirt, lace bodice and sleeves. She wore lace mitts. Her full - length trailing veil was arranged from a halo of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of red roses, white gladioli and fern.

The bridal attendants were Mrs. Fred Barnett, matron-of-honor, who was gowned in dusty peach net over satin with matching halo and net mitts; Miss Carol Richardson, sister of the bride, as junior bridesmaid, gowned in a quaint frock of lime green flowered organza, with matching headdress. Both carried nosegays of peach roses and forget-me-nots.

Mr. Jack Sudds, brother of the groom, was groomsman and the ushers were James Lamb, Napanee and Delbert Sudds of Kingston.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the garden of the bride's home. Receiving in a black and white embroidered ensemble with white accessories, the bride's mother was assisted by the groom's mother, who chose a navy blue jersey ensemble with black accessories.

R.I.P.

LEST WE FORGET!

TOPPING — In loving memory of Sergt. Clinton Topping, R.C.A.F., who gave his life on active service overseas, August 26th, 1941.

Your presence lives within this peaceful place,
I hear your tread upon the rising stair;
I enter through a doorway's empty space,
To see you smiling, there.
This house is blest because you made it so;
These cherished walls are intimately dear,
Though you went home to God, long years ago
Darling, you still are here!
It matters little that your body sleeps
In the depths of a far distant sea,
Your lovely spirit, young as yesterday
Is here, at home, with me.

Lovingly remembered by
MOTHER, DAD,
35ap SISTERS and BROTHERS.

TAMWORTH

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

Tamworth, August 25 — The 50th anniversary of the organizing of the Woman's Missionary Society in the United Church, Tamworth, was marked on Friday afternoon with a special service. The 1st Vice President, Mrs. Earl Bradshaw called the meeting to order, and Mrs. W. H. Baugh very capably gave the address of welcome. She singled out the letters "W.E.L.C.O.M.E." and put forth the thought that these letters spelled for "Women Earnest Loyal Christian Workers", and what they mean to the church.

After all singing a hymn, the chair lady invited the local Past Presidents and charter members to the platform. Four were present.

Mrs. W. H. Truscott, of Napanee, formerly on this charge for six years, was in charge of the devotional part of the meeting, and took as part of the second chapter of Philippians. She spoke of St. Paul's earnest desire for the unity of the church. Unity is essential. God giveth praise to the humble. Christ is our example. He became a servant of humanity. We cannot transform the world until we transform our own lives. There is a real power in prayer. She explained the word "Joy" thus: "J". Jesus first; "O" Others second; "Y" You last. She ended with a very fitting poem, "It Isn't the Church; It's You." She closed with prayer.

Mrs. Mary Donovan then gave a very detailed account of the history of the W. M. S. for the past 50 years. She read a letter from Mrs. (Rev.) J. G. Lewis, who was the first President, and she named all the Presidents right down through the 50 years, and made mention of some of the good deeds done and the splendid work carried on by those noble women.

At this time Mrs. Wightman, of Newburgh, sang a solo.

The Presbyterial President, Mrs. Empey, of Bloomfield, was presented, and congratulated the ladies and the church for having carried on in this way for the past 50 years without a break. She said much work must have been achieved during the length of time.

Mrs. Empey took for her subject "Stewardship". She said, to her notion, Stewardship could be summed up in three words, "First things first". Our ability is a gift from God. We should use our talents. Our material possessions are also a gift. The scripture says to give, according as we prosper. The widow's mite was just as important as the larger gift. All the really belongs to God. What we give after that is our gift to God.

A very lovely duet by Mrs. Wilde and Mrs. Ramsay, "I Heard the Saviour Calling", was then sung. The offering was taken and was dedicated by Mrs. John A. Brown.

Mrs. Wilson, of Reidville, then spoke briefly. She said "Never was there a time when the need of community welfare was so great. Community friendship needs us all". We should serve God by serving others. She ended with a fitting poem.

Mrs. Finlay, of Strathcona, spoke briefly on the work of the past 50 years.

Rev. W. H. Baugh closed with prayer.

There were visitors from the following neighbouring places: Camden III, Enterprise, Napanee, Deseronto, Madoc, Newburgh, Moscow, Strathcona, and Reidville.

A delightful tea was served by a local committee.

We are GROCER DALY'S TEA

"Pep, if I saved you a dollar, would you give me fifty cents of it?"

"Yes, I guess so, scn."

WE'RE WORKING AGAINST TIME in more ways than one . . .

Every time you lift the receiver to place a call, it's a challenge to us to rush it through; we don't like to keep people waiting. But sometimes delays can't be avoided, even though every last piece of available telephone equipment is on the job, handling more traffic than it was ever built to carry.

And that fact is directly related to our other battle against time—our big building program. Every addition to present facilities hastens the day when we will once again be able to handle every call as promptly as we would like. Construction and installation of additional telephone equipment are going ahead just as fast as the supply situation permits.

We've got it marked "Rush"!

Volunteers Cut Cost Of Book Distribution

As distribution week September 9 to 16 for Ration Book No. 6, draws nearer, the gigantic task of setting up distribution centres and staffing them may seem to many people a tremendous cost to the country. Actually, however, the cost is relatively small. Reason for this is, of course, volunteer help. Led by various church groups and women's organizations, lists of volunteers already are offering their services to Local Ration Boards across the country, for distribution week.

Besides many new volunteers who will help in the distribution, large numbers of public-spirited citizens who have worked during previous Ration Book campaigns, will be on hand again. There is no doubt that people like these, receiving no actual financial reimbursement, certainly deserve a "thank-you" and pat on the back for their patriotic gesture.

Due to their volunteer help, costs of distribution which ultimately would come from the taxpayers' pockets have been kept amazingly low. Prices Board officials have stated that the cost of distributing Book 6 will be at least one-tenth that of issuing Ration Book No. 1.

Following are the costs of distribution for the last five books: — Book 1, $153,879.79; Book 2, $22,-135.09; Book 3, $16,260.99; Book 4, $13,479.59; Book 5, $13,525.00.

ONTARIO PARENTS CAN TAKE THESE RECOGNIZED PRECAUTIONS
AGAINST THE POSSIBLE THREAT OF POLIO

It is in August and September that poliomyelitis (polio) is most prevalent. During these last weeks of summer, thoughtful parents should observe every rule that will protect their little ones from this disease.

In our Province, comparatively few cases of polio have occurred as yet but in some sections of the United States, infantile paralysis—as it is more commonly called—has reached epidemic proportions.

The Ontario Department of Health therefore urges every family to keep in step with the common-sense precautions outlined below. Read them carefully. Encourage your children to practice them daily. Guard your family's health during this particular period of the year!

SIX SIMPLE PRECAUTIONS:

If your child is ill do not hesitate to seek medical advice

Large Attendance Labor Day for Motorcycle Races

One Rider Sustains Broken Hip

By MAC SMITH

Once again the Town of Napanee has had a most outstanding motorcycle race meet. The finest riders of Ontario and Quebec put on real thrill ever seen superior to last year's. The track was never in better condition for the rainfall, late Sunday night, was just enough to soak the track thoroughly in preparation for a two days' riding. At 7:00 a.m., the track was far too wet for riding but as time passed and the sun rose higher in the sky, the track more and more, took on its racing form, being the best track in Ontario for fast cycle racing. Truly it was a dustless day and better riding conditions are seldom found.

At 10:00 a.m., a few riders took to the track for a warm-up and to test the still greasy-looking east corner just after coming down the home stretch. This corner proved firm and no spills resulted at that time. Soon more machines and riders entered into the growing group that was warming up their bikes.

Many machines were cruising slowly because of cold motors. Others were riding faster and faster in order to get a "feel" of the track. A few bikes by this time, had already begun to really make trial laps of their own with their mechanics in front of the pits making signals to the riders and taking the time of the half-mile laps. Many mechanics are a big help for their rider to get out there and make a fast few laps, as the rider to win a race.

TIME TRIALS.

At 11:00 a.m., all riders had had their practicing to a certain extent, while the latecomers continued till 11:30. Already the spectators were pouring in through the gates to see the time trials, which were late in starting.

Now the time trials were under way and the electric timing system was set-up. The riders were given one or two laps to gain top speed in the long straightaway and then at their own will they crossed the electric wire to officially enter their half-mile lap trial. The half-mile lap is covered as the rider's top speed and his lap be completed when he again crosses the wire, still at top speed and taking a lap to slow his machine down.

The first rider to take this time trial was Bill Mathews, of Hamilton, riding a yellow Indian called "Gunsl No. 36." Bill has always been a daredevil rider with all the capability of an expert and he showed, on Monday just how to ride. He broke last year's lap record of 32.3 seconds made by Ken Eadie of Guelph City, with a time of 31.08 seconds, believed by some officials to be the Ontario Half-Mile Dirt Track Record Lap of all time.

Second to Mathews was Sparks of Toronto (No. 79), hiding an overhead cam-shaft Velocette, at 31.34 seconds. Next was Al. Siranski of Hamilton (No. 14), on a Harley, at 31.71 seconds, then Green (No. 54) on a B.S.A. at 31.73 seconds. In fifth place was Pep Nucci (No. 41), from Verdun, Que., riding a Triumph, at 31.80 seconds. Nucci (No. 46) on a B.S.A. also qualified under 32 seconds, thus numerous six riders who broke Napanee's lap record set in 1945. Walter Scott of Barrie field, also riding a Triumph (No. 16), came seventh at 32.45 seconds.

At 12:45 p.m., the time trials were completed and forty competitors had been officially timed. Special prizes were donated by a few citizens of the town for the fastest riders in the time trials, which made for keener competition. The twelve fastest men were experts, the next twelve were amateurs and the next twelve were novices. The last four riders were disqualified, but a consolation race was held for them later.

AFTERNOON RACES

At 1:30 p.m., after the National Anthem, the races were under way and the first few were run without a hitch. The one bad accident of the afternoon occurred on the completion of the first lap of the three-mile mountain, when Madison Sale (43) took a spill west of the grandstand and the machine, driven by itself, skidded to the middle of the track directly in front of second place man, Monty Cranfield (No. 83) of Oshawa, who, avoiding a broken hip and was taken to Kingston General Hospital.

A few bruised ankles resulted from other spills, but there were no serious injuries.

Soon, however, other races were under way and stripped down bikes hitting the straightaways at 70 miles per hour and the corners at 50 and 60, with the natural wide open spirit locally at all times. Roaring at top speeds they gave all fans an afternoon of thrilling entertainment. The track was getting harder and harder, making it faster and reducing speed of sliding corners. Machines were now being ridden into the corners wide open, the riders driving fast and furious around the turns, risking their lives to drain every ounce of power and speed out of their racing machines. The track was getting faster all the time; riders were nerved up more and more, taking more chances on the corners, lying flat on the tanks on the straightway to reduce wind resistance — the more daring riders trying to outmaneuvre their opponents on the corners and the faster riders counting on their machines for speed on the straightways. Never before has such keen competition been shown on a half-mile track.

Many reports from the riders mentioned the condition of the track as "Tops" and indicated their eagerness to race again in Napanee, next year.

EFFICIENT OFFICIALS

Mr. Ted Whitney of Kingston, was the announcer of the day and did an excellent job. Ted is a sincere racing fan and knows many of the riders personally.

Frank Mills, chairman of the race committee and his most able assistant, Bob Smith, were on hand from the crack of dawn to see that any information needed was furnished the riders and to see that events were run off as smoothly as possible. Also Tony Miller (Toronto and the starter Harry Firth, gave their assistance to make Napanee the "Race of the Year." There are many others, including the riders themselves.

CONGRATULATED BY KING GEORGE ON ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. William Merle Sills, who are well known in Napanee and district, and who are held in the highest esteem by a wide circle of friends, celebrated their diamond wedding on Sunday, September 1st. In the afternoon they were at home to approximately eighty guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Sills were the recipients of many cards and lovely gifts and two of the letters were from King George VI and Queen Elizabeth and from Hon. Paul Martin, Secretary of State in Ottawa.

Mr. Sills is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ibri Sills, and was born in the township of Richmond where he farmed for forty-six years. Mrs. Sills, before her marriage, was Miss Patience Almira Lucas, and is the youngest daughter of the late John Lucas and Mary his wife, of Napanee. Their wedding, sixty years ago, was an outstanding social affair and was conducted by the late Rev. M. J. Bates.

After the wedding Mr. Sills and his young bride went to the township of Richmond and resided there until 1932, when they came to Napanee which has since been their home. They reside in a beautiful home on Dundas Street, which is always open to their many friends.

Mr. Sills is one of the oldest members of Argyll Lodge No. 212, having been a member for over sixty years. He took an active part in the lodge for many years and greatly assisted in the work. Many years ago he was noble-grand. He is also a member of Union Lodge No. 9 A.F. & A.M. and for some years was a member of the Napanee Rotary Club. Two County Fairs Held Next Week

Great Preparations for Exhibitors at Odessa and Centreville

Next week, two fairs are to be held in the County. On Tuesday and Wednesday, September 10 and 11, the Addington Agricultural Society's exhibition will be held at Centreville. On Thursday and Friday, September 12th and 13th, Ernestown Fair will be held at Odessa.

Both Fairs have a long history of successes and each year grow in importance as agricultural exhibitions, affording farmers an opportunity to exhibit their produce and livestock and take part in the competitions for prizes. Both exhibitions attract large attendances and the number of entries expected in the various classes is expected to be larger than ever.

Mr. A. W. Macdonald is president of the Ernestown Agricultural Society this year, and Mr. A. M. Fraser, who has served for many years as secretary-treasurer, will again fulfill the same duties this year. The list of directors, which appears in another page in this issue of The Beaver offers many worthwhile prizes, over and above the regular prizes in the several classes.

The prize list includes a class for Juniors, which offers encouragement for young rural people to interest themselves in raising good stock and high-grade produce.

Horse races will be run off Friday afternoon as well as several other sports events. In the evening a concert and dance will be held in the Town Hall.

The officers and directors of Addington Agricultural Society have prepared an attractive programme of entertainment for the afternoon and evening of Wednesday, September 11, which should be of interest to everyone who attends the exhibition. Besides horse races and ball games there will be sports events and competitions for boys and girls, and adults. The competition for young people and school boys and girls are especially interesting, and to give all an opportunity to attend the Fair, a school holiday will be granted.

Accidental Deaths Jury's Verdict Coroner's Inquiry

Inquest Held Tuesday In Sherman and Simpson Deaths

A verdict of accidental death was brought in by the Coroner's Jury on the inquest into the deaths of Wm. Sherman and Norman Simpson, who were killed on Tuesday, August 27th, when a wall collapsed while they were at work at a garage being built by Bruce Davis, on Mill Street, in Napanee.

Coroner Dr. D. R. Hall presided at the inquest and the jurors were Wallace Roy, foreman, R. B. Sinclair, F. A. Correll, R. B. Miller and Ward Hodgston. K. S. Ham, Crown Attorney, acted for the Crown.

The witnesses, Bruce Davis, owner of the garage, Frank Sherman, brother of William Sherman, who was also employed in building the garage; Edmund Simpson, son of Norman Simpson, also employed on the building, and Lorne Amey, another workman at the garage, all gave evidence that they had no reason to believe that the wall which collapsed was in a dangerous condition and that it collapsed without the slightest warning. The workmen all stated they had walked on top of the wall at various times and that it had not shown any signs of being in a weakened condition.

Mr. Davis said that the lumber which formed the base of the wall on which he was working, was not to be used in the new garage he is building on the adjoining land. The day the accident happened, Mr. Davis had not been at work because of illness. He said he had himself taken down the superstructure at the north end of the granary, and that he had not given the men who were killed and Edmund Simpson, who was injured, any instruction to work in the granary the day of the accident. He said that he had never allowed men to go in the granary, unless he was present. He also stated that he had not made any arrangements for workmen's compensation for the men in his employ and had no knowledge concerning compensation.

WITNESSES TESTIFY

Frank Sherman, brother of William Sherman, said he did not think the wall was unsafe. The day the accident occurred Davis was not at work, and the three men, the two who were killed and Edmund Simpson, decided to go into the granary and secure mirre old lumber to fill in time until Mr. Davis returned to work. He said that Mr. Davis had hired himself and his brother and that they had brought along Edmund and Norman Simpson. He also stated that it had not occurred to anyone to brace the walls of the granary after the partitions were taken down, because the wall looked strong.

Edmund Simpson, whose leg was broken when the wall collapsed, appeared at the inquest on a stretcher. He said he was working on the job but had not been using the wall. The day of the accident he had come into town to see if he could get a job and decided to stay and help his dad until Mr. Davis returned at noon. He was helping to hand up boards to Frank Sherman, who was on the ground level, when, without any warning, the wall collapsed and buried Mr. and Wm. Sherman. He himself jumped, but was not able to get clear before he was struck by falling rocks.

Lorne Amey stated he was engaged to remove the earth from the ramp in front of the north end of the granary and that he was not aware that the wall was unsafe. He said he had heard Norman Simpson say that the wall seemed a bit shaky but was tearing off lumber, the day of the accident.

Dr. T. M. Galbraith, who was called after the accident, stated that death had likely been instantaneous for both men. Simpson had a fractured skull, which caused his death and Sherman's skull was fractured and his neck was broken.

Harry Skitch, who took protographs of the scene of the fatality, also gave evidence.

Accident Victims Buried Friday

The double funeral of Wm. Sherman and Norman Simpson, the two men who were killed by the collapse of a stone wall on Tuesday, August 27th, was held at the Tierney Funeral Home on Friday morning.

The service for Mr. Sherman was conducted by Rev. M. B. Brown, a minister of Bay Circuit of the United Church, and interment followed at Sandhurst Cemetery. Mr. Simpson's funeral was conducted by Archdeacon R. J. Dumbrille, rector of St. Mary Magdalene's Church, Napanee and the burial was at Riverview Cemetery, Napanee.

The two men had been lifelong friends and had been engaged, together, in carpenter work for some years. Mr. Sherman was unmarried. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Sherman, Hay Bay, and leaves four brothers, Frank, with whom he made his home at Hay Bay; Ward of Hay Bay, Byron and James of Deseronto; and one sister, Mrs. George McGowan, Kingston.

Mr. Simpson is survived by his wife and six children, two boys and four girls.

THE SCHOOL AND EDUCATION

With the opening of the schools, the Summer has come to a close. The cold wave, in certain parts of the Province made it appear that it had gone some time ago. Now, however we are sure of it. For most people, Summer is a time of relaxation — that is for most professional people — the farmer does most of his work in the Summer. But even for some professional workers, the Summer is a time for a change of occupation. Many teachers take advantage of the vacation months to brush-up with refresher courses, or to keep abreast of the new movements in education. Some of the teachers of the Napanee Schools have thus spent their holiday. The schools and the scholars will benefit, as well as the teachers, from this.

It is often said that, apart from religion, there are more fads and faddists in education than in any other study — and certainly during the past decade or two, the plethora of so-called progressive educational theories that have been experimented with lend weight to this statement. These experiments, however, are not to be discounted. In the midst of a changing civilization, it is unthinkable but that education, which has to do with the adjustment of life to environment, would go through many trial and error experiments. It would seem as though something positive is emerging from these. Fortunately, the State School System has moved slowly in this connection: adopting only the results of experiments that have been proven by experience. Bit by bit, the schools have adjusted the curriculum to suit modern conditions; writing into it requirements in fields that would have seemed quite outside the purview of education, a few years ago.

The children who are privileged to attend a modern school have advantages that many who are older would have coveted for their own youth. Even in the earliest grades, children are taught, not only the three "R's" but the use of their hands, and the co-ordination of hand and mind, as well as the social implications of citizenship.

We have much to be proud of in our schools in the devotion and diligence of our teachers. The children are the future citizens of the nation, and nothing is too good for them! It is to be hoped that both parents and pupils appreciate that and, by cooperating with the staff, will see to it that the aims of education, so far as is possible, will be achieved.

LIQUOR AND BREAD

Recently, The United Church Observer, official organ of The United Church of Canada, had an editorial entitled "After The Dough." In it "The Observer" traced some recent developments in the bread business, and showed that the liquor interests were seeking control of bread bakeries. It said:

"An unusual amount of interest has been manifest during recent months in the Canadian bread and flour business. A number of people, and various financial interests are competing with each other to get their fingers in the dough. But there appears to be wheels within wheels that attract more than a passing glance. For example, the Canadian Food Products has acquired The Woman's Bakery, Federal System of Bakeries and Barker's Bakery. The head of this new chain of bread producers and distributors is E. P. Taylor, Ontario's chief brewer. But Mr. Taylor is reaching out beyond Ontario. A recent press dispatch tells that "Picardy, Limited," his western chain of restaurants and bakeries, has announced the purchase of "Canadian Window Bakeries," operating nineteen stores in Vancouver, B.C., and New Westminster, B.C.

"Another new bread corporation, "The General Bakeries," has recently been formed by amalgamation of a number of independent bakeries across Canada. The head of this organization is William Storey. Mr. Storey is also the head of Dominion Stores, and Dominion Stores is the largest food unit of The Argus Corporation, the E. P. Taylor food, farm machinery and brewery investment trust."

The issue raised by this editorial was dealt with by Mr. M. J. Coldwell, in the House of Commons, on August 22nd. He deplored the attempt of the Liquor Interests to get control of the bread business and said: "the tremendous power of the liquor industry is a menace to the country."

If it is true that the liquor interests are seeking control of "the staff of life" — "The Observer" contends then it is about time the people of this country aroused themselves to such the menace. Our Members of Parliament must assume some responsibility in this connection.

THE TOWN WEEKLY

Being interested in town weekly papers, naturally the first thing we do when visiting a new community, or an old one for that matter, is to read the town weekly. We are impressed by the increasing stress which editors of such papers are giving to the editorial page. The time was, when the local paper either carried no editorials or else dealt entirely with local affairs. An increasing number of weeklies are expressing well-balanced opinions on matters of more than local interest. Consequently, these papers are exerting an ever-widening influence in creating a well-informed public opinion on world conditions. This is true of some of the American Weeklies as well as the Canadian Papers. We have been reading carefully a small town paper with a sworn circulation of less than 1800 and published in a town in Western New York, which is smaller in population than Napanee. On their latest editorial page, it dealt with the Russian demand for control of the Dardanelles. It said, in part:

"We believe a majority of Americans are naturally on the side of Britain and as an abstract proposition they are more friendly to Britain than to Russia.

"President Truman, Secretary Byrnes and everyone else ought to understand that this friendship is not so deep-seated that the average American would be willing to go to war twenty-five years hence for the purpose of pulling Britain's chestnuts out of the fire in the great game of power politics.

"We have helped to fight two great wars, partly for the purpose of saving Britain from collapse and partly to save our own hides. If England had gone down in either war, there was an excellent prospect that it would have been our turn next. But, it is exceedingly doubtful if the people of the United States can be easily manoeuvred into a third war for the purpose of perpetuating British dominance of the European Continent. We might better give our British cousins the state of Mississippi with Senator Bilbo thrown in and invite them to come over here and live in peace and tranquility if they cannot live in peace on their own little island.

"We believe that the foreign policy of the administration is a mistaken policy—a policy which is only calculated to get us into future trouble. The ambition of the Russians to control the Straits of the Bosphorus is a perfectly legitimate ambition. If the United States or Britain had been in Russia's place either of us would have grabbed those strategic straits a hundred years ago, in spite of hell and high water. Can anyone imagine the United States sitting idly by and permitting any foreign power to dominate even the Panama Canal and the Panama Canal's strategic importance to use is as nothing compared with the strategic importance of the Dardanelles to Russia."

Naturally, Canadians would not like the suggestion that Great Britain should move to the United States because she cannot get along with her neighbors. The problem is much more complicated than that. But then, too, a lot of Americans would not like the way this paper criticizes the foreign policy of their Government.

Whether we agree or not, the point is that The Weekly Press, which lies so close to the lives of the common people, is becoming increasingly aware of its privilege and opportunity, and is using it to good advantage.

QUITE A CHANGE

It is hardly impossible to overstate the change that has taken place in The United States' policy following the Second World War, as compared to that following World War One. Following the 1914-1918 World War, the United States all but withdrew from international politics. They took no part in The League of Nations. The wave of isolationism and pacifism that swept the country, kept the army and navy and air force, to a minimum.

Following World War Two, it is all different. The war has been over for a year. The draft is still in effect—all eligible youths are drafted for military service. There are huge American Armies of Occupation in the conquered countries. United States warships make "courtesy" calls in the Mediterranean. Their airships travel, armed, over European danger spots. The United States is taking an integral part in the United Nations Organization.

More recently, the President has set-up what he called an "Elder Statesmen's Organization for National Defence." These are all military men who are to serve, at wartime salaries, in a consultative way. An elder statesmen's organization made up of none but military men is certainly an innovation for The United States and, naturally, there are those who fear this military development.

After the First World War, The United States reacted by adopting the traditional non-military policy. But this did not prevent her from being dragged into the conflict by the perfidy of Japan, and the war into which she was plunged, found the great American people unprepared.

Now, the opposite policy is being followed. Young men are being drafted; bases in the Pacific are being armed and fortified; military researches go on, and in all, a preparedness programme is the national policy. Will that prevent World War Three? Nobody knows. Only history will render a verdict.

It is unfortunately true that up until the present time the only language to which nations listen, is that of force. Only a change in mental attitude and of heart, will enable people to solve their problems in peace and goodwill.

DARDANELLES A TEST FOR BIG POWERS

All the noisy acrimony of the Paris peace conference thus far has been concerned with trifles compared with a clash of wills between the western and eastern offices. The great powers are locked in a test of strength and nerves over one of the oldest issues of world politics, the straits question, or, to use the popular name, the Dardanelles.

Since this involves one of the primary elements of world mastery and strategy, since it touches on one of the most cherished ambitions of the Russian State for three and a half centuries and since it may determine control of the vital Middle East, there is a grimness about this clash beyond anything yet developed at Paris.

The great powers involved have been pulling and hauling at the Straits question at least since the beginning of the nineteenth century, some of them longer. But now for the first time the United States has declared itself in on the game.

Nothing in the post-war period has shown so significantly how far the United States has moved from the policies that guided its international conduct during the period between the First and Second Great Wars or so definitely emphasized the contrast. The American Government knows that its country can not remain aloof from any contest involving a shift in world forces.

• • •

The issue is this: Russia has served demands that she have the guardian of the Straits—besides the Dardanelles these include the Bosphorus and the Sea of Marmora—which neither Turkey nor the Western powers first accepted. These are: First, that the Black Sea powers alone take over control of the Straits and second, that Russia and Turkey jointly assume their defence.

The Black Sea powers are Bulgaria, Romania, Russia and Turkey. Since the first two are now firmly in the Russian orbit and seem destined to remain there, Turkey would become a permanent minority of one in any Dardanelles council. And the second demand would mean that Russia would move in alongside Turkey in military occupation of the shores of the Straits. The junior partner in such an arrangement would have little chance to hold his own.

Acceptance of these terms would mean fulfilment of a dream which Russian rulers have held since Peter the Great, three and one-half centuries ago, determined to break through the bonds of land and ice that held Russia away from unhindered access to the seven seas.

Never perhaps in all history of the glacier-like spread of Russian territories toward the warm waters has any of Peter's successors looked upon it prospect as inviting as that spread before Stalin. The Baltic now lies largely within the Russian sphere; Poland, Yugoslavia the Adriatic is in effect accessible; Russian power is reestablished in Port Arthur and Dairen on the ice-free waters of the Orient; possession of the Kuriles would secure access to the Pacific, and Soviet power is moving with great pressure toward the Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf. The United States, Britain and France have ranged themselves behind Turkey in opposing the thrust through the Straits. They are not opposing Russian desires, however. They are willing to alter the existing regime for control of the Straits, embodied in the Montreux Convention of 1936, so as to considerably facilitate the movement of Russian and other warships and merchantmen between the Black Sea and the Mediterranean.

But they want to do this within the framework of the United Nations and the Montreux convention. And The United States for the first time is ready to share the responsibility for plans of peaceful control of the Dardanelles.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON, SEPTEMBER 8TH, 1946

"JESUS AND SINCERITY OF SPEECH"

Only this week a cartoon appeared in one of the daily papers, portraying a group of young people about to separate after a meeting of their club. One of the members said: "I move we all leave together so there will be nobody left to talk about the one who leaves first." The cartoonist was keen enough to see that often the practice he was lampooning, is carried out in our clubs and meetings. What was said is not necessarily untrue, but it leads to that by easy stages.

The first part of this week's lesson is an admonition against lying about one's neighbour. Presumably, the custom is not a modern one, since the Ten Commandments were compiled somewhere about three thousand years before Christ. The injunction is needed today, "To turn the commandment negative, that it reads positively, it is: "Thou shalt tell the truth."

"False witnessing is a common practice," writes a commentator on this subject, "you will not live long before you discover how people trim the truth, amplify the truth, distort the truth, and maliciously lie. People will lie to save face; they will lie to gain prestige; they will lie to gain money; they will lie to injure others. There are a thousand types of lies, including white lies, black lies, and just lies! There are those untruths which destroy reputations and ruin friendships. We would like to be able to affirm that church members are never guilty of this sin; but suppose we let it go at that. Lies are mean, contemptible, destructive and cowardly! — "Thou shalt not lie."

There are thousands of ways of lying, that are an abomination to the Lord. Lying, like war, lying is cultivated, carefully, so long as it is lying about the enemy. Sometimes, it is called propaganda. But lying is not confined to war, nor to words. We lie when we skimp our work; steal out of the office or stop a few minutes before closing; come in late. It is lying when we represent things to be other than they are, whether we do it by word or action. When a contractor uses shoddy material, when he skimps and cuts too closely, he is lying. We lie when, in our actions, we pretend to be other than we are. So many people seem to get by with dishonest attitude which they hope to cover up. But in the eyes of God, indeed even in the eyes of man, shoddy work, shoddy character, does not stand the test.

The second section of the lesson merely amplifies the admonition against lying, except that it traces the basis of lying to the heart and warns against trusting those who are inwardly evil, though they come to be virtuous. They are, the writer suggests, like a cheap jar covered over with cheap silver. Neither will last. If a person's heart is dishonest then he cannot be trusted.

The final section of the lesson, taken from Matthew, gives an account of Peter's denial of our Lord. Peter had had a hard day. He sat alone in a courtyard. While his Master was locked up in the adjoining building Peter could hear what it all. He was alone and suspected, when a young girl accused him of being a follower of the One arrested. Peter, startled, denied it. His speech betrayed him; the Galilean being more guttural than the Judean. They mocked him again. This angered Peter and he swore and cursed as he denied knowledge of the Master. Then he came to himself, went out and wept bitterly.

Well! There you have it! That is what happens when a person is not in touch with God.

SPOTLIGHT NOW ON GREECE

BY GLENN BABB
A.P. Foreign Affairs Analyst

The unwelcome spotlight swings now across the clamorous world stage and focuses on Greece. The unhappy little country where much of civilization was born and which stands now an almost isolated bulwark against the spread of another culture from the east appears destined to be, for the next few days, at least, the centre of the storm.

No other land is so surely caught in the vise of world power politics. The imminent departure of the Russian Ambassador was an expression of the Kremlin's grave displeasure with the Greek government and its policies, is the latest and most menacing aspect of the terrible pressures the Soviet bloc is exerting.

British troops stand on guard in Greece. An American fleet is en route to Greek waters for a "courtesy visit." Here now is the main centre of contention of the great powers.

Already Greece has been for several days in the forefront of the thinking at Paris. She has fought bitterly against her Soviet-backed neighbors, Albania and Bulgaria, in the Paris Peace Conference, opposing the admission of the former to the Peace table, battling against the territorial claims of the latter. She has heard herself accused in the world international peace by another member of the Soviet bloc, the Ukraine.

Sunday brought another step in Greece's troubled progress: The Greeks voted in a plebiscite to bring back King George II from his exile in London. Opponents of the Monarchy, chiefly the Communist and Republican left, declared in advance that they expected the King to win because the election was rigged. A Monarchist Government is in power in Athens.

The post-war conflict between right and left has been so bloody and bitter that there is little chance for truly democratic processes to take effect. The fight between right and left will continue, with Russia and her satellites on the little Kingdom's borders continuing their pressure.

Both Albania and Bulgaria are demanding slices of Greek territory which, if given up, would further advance the Russian thrust to the Mediterranean.

Greece is one of the most unfortunate pawns in the conflict between the western powers and Russia. She and Turkey occupy unenviable positions in the path of Russia's glacier-like advance toward the war water. Greece, however, is the only country in southeastern Europe in which the western powers— more particularly Britain—retain a military and political foothold.

At this juncture an American fleet is moving toward Greek waters. This week the big aircraft carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt, a cruiser and three destroyers enter Salonika. It may be of course, that this is just coincidental, a courtesy visit in the course of a voyage of training and good will. But the official announcement does not have it. But Moscow will never believe in such a coincidence.

The visit is taken as further evidence of American determination to prevent the Soviet power from engulfing the Middle East, a determination already given official expression in Washington's note to Moscow opposing Russian domination of the Dardanelles. The United States has assumed a new role in world affairs and although she hopes her purposes can be achieved through the medium of the United Nations she will use other tactics as well.

The question worrying the other capitals is how much in earnest is the Kremlin in its demands, how far is Stalin prepared to go in pressing them, whether Russia can climb down or just the beginning of bargaining. The answer may mean more to the prospects of world peace than anything achieved in Paris.

HAVE YOUR CHEST X-RAYED

It is to the credit of the Lions Club of Napanee, with the support of the local Medical Association, the County Council and Town Officials, and those who buy Christmas seals that every resident of this district, whether a man, woman or child, may take precautionary steps against this insidious disease by having a FREE chest examination within the next few weeks.

Until apparatus using miniature film was developed, mass surveys were impractical and costly. Chest clinics had to be confined to known and suspected cases. As a result not more than one in five persons suffering from the disease was discovered until it had progressed to serious stages. Now, this dangerous situation can be remedied. Found in its early stage and properly treated at once, tuberculosis can be cured and the possibility of passing it to others overcome.

More persons in Ontario over five years of age die from tuberculosis than from all other infectious diseases combined. This is largely because an affected person may go on for some time not at all aware that he has the disease.

Any one of us can be attacked by this disease and at any time. The old belief that those over thirty are no longer susceptible is entirely without foundation. Helping in the task of destroying this enemy of man is a duty that belongs to us all. The surest way of doing so is by having an X-ray.

In a third game played here on Thursday evening, before a large attendance, the Polson Anne Cemeterians went down to defeat 5 to 0 when Kingston Heights blanked Pat Marsade's offerings for as many hits.

WOULD AUTHORIZE PERSON TO CARRY $100 U. S. FUNDS

Ottawa — The Senate Banking Committee made several amendments to the Foreign Exchange Control Bill last week.

The bill, as changed would allow a person in Canada to have $100 in United States currency in his possession without being liable to prosecution. Under the original bill any one coming into possession of American currency must turn it over to a chartered bank to become the property of the Foreign Exchange Control Board.

It was shown there is considerable United States currency in Canada, largely as a result of the presence in this country of American tourists and it was felt the provision to turn it in to the banks forthwith was too severe in the case of small amounts.

WEDDING BELLS

SMITH - VAN DER VOORT

A pretty garden wedding took place at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert C. Pile, Napanee, on Thursday morning, August 29th, at 11:30, when Celia Mary Van der Voort, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Victor W. Van der Voort, Bath, became the bride of George Edgar Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Smith, of Kingston. The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. D. McLellan, and Miss Letha Scott played the wedding music.

The youthful bride was charming in a wedding gown of traditional white. The bodice of white lace was made in tight-fitting basque style, with long sleeves arranged in points over the wrists. The full satin skirt fell in graceful folds under an overskirt of net. Her finger-tip veil of net fell from a crescent of small white flowers. The bride's only ornament was a double strand of pearls, the gift of the groom, and she carried a nosegay of roses.

Miss Doris Van der Voort, Bath, sister of the bride, and Miss Sally Smith, of Montreal, sister of the groom, were bridesmaids, gowned in harmonizing shades of blue. They carried old - fashioned nosegays of sweet peas.

The groom's brother, Mr. Eldon Smith, of Kingston, was best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Superior Restaurant, where luncheon was served. The bride's aunt, Mrs. H. C. Pile, received her guests in a smart ensemble of navy printed crepe with touches of scarlet. Her hat and accessories were navy. The bride's mother and the groom's mother assisted in receiving, the former wearing a printed dress of powder blue with navy accessories, and the latter gowned in rose crepe with black accessories.

The groom's grandmother, Mrs. Thompson, of Bath, was a particularly welcome guest. She wore a dress of amethyst crepe with black hat and accessories.

For travelling the bride donned a simple street-length dress of dusty rose silk jersey, fashioned with draped bodice and full skirt. Her small hat of brown felt was trimmed with feathers in matching rose shade and was smartly veiled. Her coat of forest green was trimmed with brown squirrel, and she wore matching brown accessories.

On their return from a motor trip to Western Ontario, Mr. and Mrs. Smith will reside at Bath.

SIMMONS - GRAHAM

A late summer wedding was solemnized at St. Alban's Church, at Odessa, on Saturday afternoon, August 24th, at 3:00 o'clock, when Revv. L. G. O. Walker, of Bath, united in marriage Helen Corinne, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Graham, of Odessa and Russell Donald, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Simmons of Wilton Weddings must be played by 3:30 on Thursday, and during the signing of the register, Miss Beatrice Walker sang "Because."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional gown of white satin, fashioned on long torso lines, with silk net yoke and long pointed sleeves. Satin flowers and pearls were appliqued on the waist and the wide full skirt. She wore a strand of pearls, the gift of the groom, and carried an arm bosquet of red roses and fern. Miss Jean Huxtable was bridesmaid, attired in a gown of pale blue taffeta with a net overskirt, matching the brief cap sleeves. Her flower half-hat was caught with veiling, which matched her dress, and she carried an arm bouquet of pink roses.

Mr. Lawrence Graham, brother of the bride was best man and the ushers were Delbert Simmons of Wilton, cousin of the groom, and Warren Graham of Kingston, brother of the bride.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the bride's home, for sixty guests. The house was beautifully decorated with white and pink streamers and wedding bells. Lovely baskets of cut flowers also adorned the rooms. Mrs. Graham received the guests, attired in a gown of grey French crepe with white accessories and wearing a corsage of red roses. She was assisted by Mrs. Simmons, the groom's mother, who wore navy French crepe with white accessories and corsage of pink roses.

The bride's table was covered with a cloth of creamy lace, and centred with the three-tiered wedding cake. The toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. Walker and was very ably responded to by the groom.

Later the bride changed to a black and white checked gabardine suit with white accessories, and the happy couple left amid showers of best wishes and confetti for an extended honeymoon in the United States and Western Ontario.

During their honeymoon, they will reside in their new home at Wilton, where the groom is a partner with his father in the milling business.

The bride's gift to the groom was a cigaret lighter; to the bridesmaid sterling silver earrings; to the organist, earrings, and to the soloist, a brooch and earrings and to the groom's assistant, cufflinks.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. W. A. Brant, Cynthia and Copeland, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. Florence Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Graham and daughters, all of Toronto; Mrs. Ida Ward Boys and son, Edward, of Long Island, N.Y.; Mrs. J. H. Long, of Oshawa; Mr. John Graham and son, Lorne, of Watertown, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Coursey of Strathroy; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stuart, Mrs. Rose Storms, Mr. W. B. Storms, Miss Irene Storms, Miss Betty Wales, Miss Murray and Miss Bernice Guild, all of Kingston; and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Perryman, of Cataraqui.

You may be perfectly healthy. Have a free X-ray anyway. Only by all of us making sure we haven't tuberculosis can we rid our community of this widespread disease.

Housewives looked enviously but didn't take a second one when thousands of packets of rationed dried egg powder fell from a passing truck, near Bristol, England.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Benn, Chittenango, New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Benn and daughter, Dorothy, of Elmhurst, New Jersey, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Benn, Sharpe Corners, Ont.

YES...BUT WHAT IS IT WORTH?

Little you care how much silver is contained in the 50c piece you take into a store. What you want to know is what it will buy.

Well, that depends very much on yourself, ourselves, and the millions of others like us. If free and careless spending brings inflation, your 50c piece will buy less and less as prices rise . . . how much less, no one can say.

You can guard against inflation . . . and, if you are a No. 1 citizen, you will.

How? . . . By conservation in your personal finances . . .

Here are five ways you can fight inflation:

- Hold on to your Victory Bonds
- Buy only those goods which are in fair supply and save your money for the day when goods now in short supply will be readily available
- Avoid black market purchases
- Keep up your insurance
- Build up your savings account

This means wise spending and wise saving.

This is why we say:

There is no ready way to distinguish between edible and other mushrooms.

Cottage cheese mixed with cubed peaches and a little marmalade mounted in individual lettuce cups, unhulled strawberries piled alongside a lemon jelly mould containing sliced bananas.

Gelatine salads are those which can be prepared well in advance of the big event. . . .

Garnishes make a difference! Choose a selection of these for the salad plates:

1—Cheese Apples. Pears or Carrots—Use packaged cream cheese for these. With the hands, shape cheese into tiny apples, pears or carrots, about two inches. Insert cloves at the blossom and stem ends of apples and pears, and give the carrots a parsley top.

2—Parsley - Cheese Balls — Shape creamed cheese into small balls. Roll balls in finely minced parsley and finely chopped nuts.

3—Celery Curls — Using scissors or a sharp knife, make parralel lengthwise slits at top and bottom of two-inch pieces of celery, leaving aboutinch at the middle, uncut. Drop into a bowl of ice water and chill. The slit ends will gradually curl.

4—Celery Flowers — Make cuts on one end of two or three inch pieces of celery. Put two pieces together with soft cheese or sandwich filling. Then sprinkle with paprika. Chill in electric refrigerator.

5—Celery Matches — Cut large, tender stalks of celery in match size pieces. Chill (but not in water). Just before serving, dip desired end of each in paprika and salt. Celery match boxes are made by slicing the stalks of celery to within half an inch of the bottom.

6—Carrot Ring Holders — Choose large carrots. Wash and peel. Cut into three-inch lengths. Using apple corer, core each piece, then cut into rings about half-inch wide. Chill. Serve filled with little green onions, raw turnip strips or tomatoes.

7—Carrot Curls — Use medium sized carrots at room temperature (or the peeled parsnip). Wash and peel. Then, using a vegetable peeler or blade of coring knife, slice lengthwise in paper-thin slices. Drop slices into a bowl of ice water. As the slices chill, they will gradually chill. Drain well before serving

8—Egg Chain —Cut hard-cooked eggs crosswise. Remove yolk from each slice. Cut a slit in half of the white rings, and link together in slit one end of each until only one) to form a chain around a salad or meat platter.

NOTE: The chain should be formed right on the plate and do not transfer after it is made. Sieve yolks on the top of salad — this is especially good with potato salad.

9—Egg Whale—Egg Tulip — Cut a thin slice from the broad end of a hard-cooked egg. With a sharp knife make five or six slits in the white from the top downwards. Gently push back the white petals and remove yolk. Devil the yolk with salad dressing or milk; season and replace in the white.

10—Half-Egg Tulip—Cut the hard-cooked egg in half. Nick the edges of the white petals. Devil the yolks for the centres.

11—Radish Roses — Wash radishes and remove all but a few sprigs of the top. Using a sharp knife, make petal-like cuts in the radish. Begin at stem end and carefully work to the top. Snip off the sprigs and chill.

12—Radish Flowers — Slice prepared radishes lengthwise into sections within a short distance of the base. Drop into a bowl of ice water and chill. The petals gradually open. Do not add salt which will take out the colour.

13—Accordian Radishes — Cut the washed radishes crosswise in thin slices, cutting down to, but not through, the bottom. Drop into a bowl of ice water and chill in electric refrigerator. . . .

DAIRY FARMERS HARDEST HIT BY DRY WEATHER

Milk production dropped throughout Ontario because of parched pastures, the Ontario Department of Agriculture said last week, reporting that need for rain is genera in farming areas of the Province.

Supplementary feeding of dairy cattle is general but there is a shortage of concentrated feeds to balance dairy rations in Northern Ontario. Wells, streams and springs have gone dry in many districts.

Typical of the hard-baked land in the condition of Stormont County where the agricultural representative reported that "the ground is very hard and only farmers with power machinery are able to do much plowing."

Milk production is down 25 per cent from normal in many districts and producers generally are having difficulty in keeping up their milk quota. Demand for fresh milch cows is good in all districts as producers attempt to increase production.

HYDRO HOME ECONOMIST

Hello Homemakers!

The choice of where to eat on social occasions is usually decided by the Jiggs of our family. When we are taken on a spree, the ornate city hotel dining room is our favourite place. The service at the table is wonderful but the menu is amazing and often confusing because many of the items are foreign words and phrases. For that reason, we looked up the meaning of a few terms in common use and list them to keep you "in the know."

Boeuf a la mode — is beef larded and pot roasted.

Cannelon — meat stuffed, rolled up and roasted.

Compote — a stew; often applied to fruits cooked in syrup.

Eclair — pastry or cake shell filled with whipped cream or custard.

Frappe — iced or frozen.

Gateau — cake.

Haricots Verts — green string beans.

Jambon — ham.

Julienne — matchlike strips of vegetables.

Ragout —a thick, highly seasoned stew.

Sorbet — Frozen fruit juices.

Veloute — velvety or smooth.

TAKE A TIP

Along our holiday route we visited homes where flower arrangements created a distinguished atmosphere. Here are a few ideas we garnered.

Certain flowers are best used as individual specimens. The lily with large leaves and a large bloom, or the thick tough with many blossoms can make a balance picture alone with a china figure or candles.

Some flowers look best in large masses, such as pansies, asters, lilacs, nasturtiums and poppies. Arrange these for either small centre-pieces or large bouquets.

Balance flowers in a vase placing the heavier mass in the centre and the smaller blooms on the sides. Consider the length of stem and cut it to suit your purpose. Don't crowd large bunches, but spread them loosely in an irregular design.

Best colours for vases are neutral — a vase may detract from perfect natural beauty. Narrow neck bottles do not let enough air in. Use a receptacle in keeping with the texture and colour of the flowers. A coarse, woody bouquet does not look pretty in a dainty glass vase, use a pottery piece.

WEDDING BELLS

KENNEDY - GAFFNEY

A wedding of much interest took place at the Church of the Assumption, Erinsville, when Mary Elizabeth, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gaffney and William Patrick Leonard, son of the late Michael Kennedy and Mrs. M. A. Kennedy, were united in marriage, Rev. J. A. Powell celebrated the nuptial mass.

The bride, looking lovely in a gown of white satin and an embroidered finger-tip veil caught to a satin sweetheart headdress and carrying a cascade touquet of sweetheart roses, baby's breath and maiden hair fern was given in marriage by her father.

Mrs. Patrick Way, sister of the groom, was matron-of-honor and wore a gown of pale blue sheer with matching headdress and carried a bouquet of pink roses, baby's breath and maiden-hair fern.

Misses Theresa O'Neill, Erinsville, and Jean Donohue, Toronto, were bridesmaids. They wore full-length dresses of pink and turquoise net, respectively, with contrasting taffeta hats. They carried touquets of pink roses, baby's breath and maiden-hair fern.

Little Miss Mary Way made a charming flower girl. She wore a full - length dress of delicate pink organza, and a bonnet of pink taffeta trimmed with pink flowers. She carried a nosegay of pink rosebuds and sweetpeas.

Mr. Bernard Kennedy, brother of the groom performed the duties of best man. Mr. Gerald Gaffney and Mr. Patrick Way were ushers.

The bridal procession entered the church to the strains of a wedding march, played by Miss Mary Neville, and proceeded to the altar which was beautifully decorated with ferns, gladioli and other flowers. During the mass the Neville sisters and Mr. Ambrose Kidd sang appropriate hymns.

A reception was held after the ceremony at the Superior Restaurant in Napanee, where about fifty-five guests were present. Mrs. Gaffney, mother of the bride, wore a blue crepe dress with black lace and accessories and a corsage of red roses. Mrs. Kennedy, mother of the groom, wore a black crepe dress with a mauve lace and black accessories. She also wore a corsage of red roses.

The toast to the bride was proferred by Mr. Patrick Way and was very ably responded to by the groom. The groom's gift to the bride was three lovely statues of the Holy Family, to the matron-of-honor a compact, to the bridesmaids, rosaries to the flower girl a gold cross and chain, to the ringbearer a silver signet ring, to the best man a gold watch chain, to the ushers, a cigarette case and a rosary.

RATION BOOK SAVING IS MADE

When the approximately 12,000,000 new ration books are distributed in the week of September 8th to 14th, it is estimated the cost will be at least one-tenth of the cost of last Ration Book No. 1 at the start of the curtailed distribution of Canadian commodities, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has announced.

Here are the costs of distribution for the last five books: Book No. 1, $153,979.79; Book 2, $22,135; Book 3, $16,260.89; Book 4, $13,497.56; and Book 5, $13,028. The great difference in costs between the first book and the remainder is attributed to the fact that volunteers were pressed into service to distribute all books save the first one.

The board stressed that persons who do not obtain their book during the distribution week will not be able to secure a book before September 30th. Thus latecomers will find themselves unable to use two meat, two butter and three sugar coupons which become due on September 29 and 26.

Great care has been taken with the new book to guard against counterfeiting, the board noted. The same general scheme of pastel colored sheets as that used in Ration Book 5 will be continued with the addition of special markings to identify them in case of attempted counterfeit. The cover tag will be yellow. The coupon design is smaller than previously used, although just as complicated to reproduce.

The smaller design leaves a greater area of paper exposed to enable those handling the coupons to more quickly detect anything that is not on the genuine paper. The centre of the design is blank for the coupon number, smaller than the present numbers, is printed in this area.

In connection with the issuing of the new ration book, Donald Gordon, Prices Board head, made this statement: "As long as human beings in as many countries of the world are starving as near starvation, it is unthinkable that Canadians should refuse to do their share in helping out; should refuse to limit themselves just a little in the use of the bountiful supply with which this country is blessed; or in that limitation should refuse to share equally the things which we have for ourselves.

"The Government of Canada sincerely wishes to help less fortunate people, and therefore has decided to continue rationing in this country, and for that reason I appeal to Canadians everywhere to help out in the distribution of Ration Book No. 6. It is Canada's answer to a world crying for help! We cannot let that cry go unheeded!"

HOUSE OF COMMONS VOTE REJECTS MILK PLAN

Ottawa.— The Commons, last week voted 69-41 in favor of a C.C.F. motion calling on the Government to reconsider its decision to discontinue the producer milk subsidy as from September 30th, but the vote did not mean defeat of the Government.

Before the vote was taken Hon. C.D. Howe, Reconstruction Minister, said the Government would welcome a non-party vote on the motion, moved by A. M. Nicholson (CCF-Mackenzie). As a result, all pairing was called off and more than twenty Liberals, including Walter Tucker, Parliamentary assistant to Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Veterans Minister, joined in supporting the motion.

The motion, moved in the form of an amendment to a motion to go into supply for resumption of the study of estimates, also was supported by C.C.F. Progressive Conservative, Social Credit and some Independent members.

Cabinet Ministers and Liberals from various sections of the country opposed the motion.

Mr. Howe said that in his opinion the motion went far beyond asking the House to express the opinion that the Government reconsider its decision to discontinue the producer subsidy of 50 cents per 100 pounds of whole milk.

SENSITIVE PEOPLE RESENT JOKESTER

A lot of people can't take kidding. Their egos are too sensitive. So, in order to keep their egos from being bruised or their self-confidence undermined, they avoid the girl who hands out the digs.

The trouble with arguing every point or talking issue with people in conversations is that most people like to talk just for the fun of it, not for the mental exercise that they get out of it.

Of ocurse, nobody expects a girl to agree with everything that's said, particularly if what's said is opposed to her firm beliefs. But there is a difference between disagreeing firmly on a point of principle and taking issue on every point that comes up in a conversation.

NATURA is a new fabric discovery . . . a beautiful blending of the smoothness of lovely fur fibres with the vitality of rayon or woollen yarns. The secret of NATURA lies in the "Blendlok" process which is developed to lock the fibres of fur and fabric firmly together and helps prevent shedding.

MONTHS of planning are behind this exclusive presentation. Canada's foremost mills produced the fabrics, dyed them in colours specified by EATON'S fashion-wise buyers, then distinguished designers and tailors created the garments exclusively for EATON'S.

NATURA has several different weights, colours are delicate to deep-hued, and its adaptability provides a wide range of garments for men, women and children. First Radar Controlled Port

The United Kingdom is about to have the first radar - controlled port in the world. Liverpool, the great city-port which handles a large part of the Anglo-American sea traffic, is erecting a radar control station that will be able to plot, at any second, the precise position of every ship within thirty miles. In all the seaways approaching the Liverpool docks, pilots will be kept constantly informed of the position of every vessel in their vicinity. No matter what the weather, ships will be able to berth and set sail in perfect safety. In this way, millions of dollars will be saved every year since it costs an average cargo vessel anything from $600 to $2,000 when a tide is missed. While the idea is extended to every country, it is expected to speed up "sensational" traffic considerably in several other great sea ports of the world — Rotterdam, San Francisco and Southampton — all suffer from the delays of fog and mist. Captains of ships will be able to "come in on the radar beam" and dock safely even though they cannot see the water. New York, the busiest port in the world, will probably be able to speed up its night traffic.
